Calcutta was our destination. There we were to pick up a cargo of silks and later, at Bombay, take on a consignment of dye stuffs. Weeks of monotonous, uneventful sea life failed to dampen my ardor for the life of a sailor, and the newness of things had not worn off by the time we had tacked through the straits and were well on our way across the Pacific.

I have said that it was my first voyage, and it was likely to have been my last, for of all adventures which have ever befallen me there was never another so perilous as the wreck we endured in the Low Archipelago on that first voyage.

I remember the night was a quiet one until about six bells, when the sun was about to go down. Instead of sinking below the horizon it dropped behind a bank of clouds which had almost the appearance of land in the distance and which hid the bright ball of the sun as completely as though it were night. In fact, it became dark so early that we could scarce tell when the day did slip into the night. For long there was not overmuch wind, though puffs tore viciously at the sails and rattled the yards. A low, dull roar, as of breakers, only not so vibrant, dinned in our ears. The puffs came first from the northeast and then due east. The ship veered around under them, and even before we suffered any violent breeze the helmsman felt the strength of the gale which was approaching.

We had time and to spare to reef and to make all our preparations. The captain calculated that we were at about 20 degrees south latitude and at 135 degrees 20 minutes west longitude. The Low Archipelago was not many miles off our leeward bow, and the captain, fearing the shore, headed a few points into the teeth of the gale, which soon began to toss us about merrily. It was my first big storm, and I think the most terrific I have experienced.

In the next watch, just one hour after the first intimation of the storm, we were plunging about wildly in a monster sea. With the greatest difficulty we had furled all but the jibs, and any attempt to keep into the wind had been abandoned. We could just hold a few points against it.

Thus it went for a time. Then in a sudden vicious gust the jibs were blown away and we scudded helpless before the storm. The pumps were manned and every soul aboard was kept busy in an effort to preserve the ship. Such another night I have never known.

Hours we were tossed and battered about by the angry water, flying, like some great wounded bird, before the wind, not a shred of canvas set. It seemed as though each wave mounted higher and as though the ship must be torn from stem to stern, so terrific was the strain on rope and timber. Yet when a dull, unhealthy light began to spread about us—it must have been the dawn, though no sun could we see—we were still afloat. What with the excitement of it all I was not in the least way tired, but the captain, noticing my haggard eyes and white cheeks, bundled me off below for a rest.

I climbed into my berth, but there was to be no sleep. For a long time I did not dare to so much as close my eyes, for it seemed that should we for a moment relax our vigilance the hulk must go down. At last from sheer exhaustion, physical and mental, my lids dropped and I was sinking into oblivion when with a crash which tumbled me from my hammock the ship came to a dead stop, careened to starboard and groaned like a monster in pain. Feet scurried across the deck, there were yells and cries and the thud of mountains of sea thundering straight down on us.

You may believe that I sprang for the companionway and lost no time in getting to the deck. Most of the lifeboats were in splinters, but the sad plight of the crew made more than two of the dinghies unnecessary. Many had been carried overboard, and two, Selwyn and Carruthers, had been dashed headforemost into the scuppers, where they were wish-washing back and forth, stone dead.

The Shipwreck.

Whether there was land off our bows or whether we had struck a reef a considerable distance at sea we could not tell, for the wind drove the rain into our faces enough to blind us and it was still murky dark. It seemed like hours, but I suppose it was a matter of seconds before we had the dinghies launched.

Once in the boats there was nothing for us to do but to run before the storm, using all our efforts to bail and to keep the craft right side up. There had been little time to provision the dinghies, and practically all that we had with us was a few puncheons of water and enough biscuit for about a meal once around. We very shortly lost sight of the other boat, and I have never learned what was the fate of its occupants. I suppose that they were drowned, as it was a wonder we were not.

Of course it finally ended, as must all things. The wind spent itself, dying almost as suddenly as it had sprung into life, but the waves still ran high. Patches of clouds scurried away, showing blue above them, and in an hour the sky was merely dotted here and there with white, silvery puffs.

Best of all, we saw a low line of hills miles to the eastward. It was hard to tell just how far away they were because one moment we saw them and the next, plunged into the trough of the sea, we could look only at walls of water. As best we could we set off landward. It was slow progress we made, with the fury of the water and the fatigue of the men, but every stroke counted, and at last when the sea had quieted we were close enough to see what kind of shore it was which offered us uncertain safety. The sun, which shone now unmercifully, drew perspiration in streams from the men and parched the throats of all of us. No water was left, and the biscuit refused to go down dry. Our hands were blistered from the long rowing and we were a sorry crew, most of us jealous that we had not been washed away by the first shock, as some of the crew had been.

The beach which we were approaching seemed to keep ever the same distance away, but at last we made it, capsizing the boat in the breakers. The men were all for getting themselves ashore as best they could, but Captain Harrington cursed them roundly and forced them to rescue the dinghy from the breakers, where she might easily have pounded herself to pieces. This latter proved our salvation, for had it not been for that same boat we would have suffered a death far worse than drowning. What island we were on none knew, for our reckoning had been lost during the night; but Captain Harrington was of the opinion that we had struck one of the Low Archipelago group. This afterward proved to be the truth.

No time was lost in going in search of water, which we found in a cool, clear spring not far from the beach. We drank sparingly and washed down the precious biscuits, of which there was about one dozen remaining. Then we began to forage. Some of the men were sent to pry about the land and to discover, if possible, what manner of place we were at and whether the inhabitants were friendly or otherwise. A roaring fire was built on the beach and our clothes were dried. Those sent to forage soon returned with fruits of all kinds and reported that they had seen many birds which looked like game fowl, but there was no means of killing them, what few pistols were among us being soaked. This brought to mind the possible need for powder and lead, and, most of our arms being of the old fashion, we dried our powder on a flat stone in the sun.

He Accomplished His Purpose, for in a Few Moments There Was a Rattle of Shots.

Good fortune was favoring us, so we thought, when we heard a horrid scream from the wood which lined the beach. It seemed to be distant and yet pierced our ears like a knife. Others followed the first startling cry, and we made up our minds that the men who were scouting had been attacked. The captain led the way into the wood, which was thick and tore our hands and legs. The direction from which the cry had come was almost straight into the sun and we held to that course.

We must have fought our way through the jungle for a quarter of a mile when the leaders stumbled over the bodies of two of our comrades. They were dead, with a dozen cuts, long and jagged, and one had an arrow piercing his left breast. There was sign of a struggle, and both men had their knives gripped in their hands. A little further, in the direction evidently taken by a body of men, we found a black savage, well nigh naked, lying across the path. There were signs that others had sustained wounds.

So we followed in a fever of excitement, knowing that our comrades must be in dire need. There were six of us and four of them, and we did not know how many savages, but I do not think it occurred to any man to turn back or to leave our comrades in peril. We had scarce gone another eighth of a mile when we heard our enemy crashing along the kind of trail we had been following. They must have heard us at about the same instant, for as we bove in sight they turned and rushed us. Queer spears they had, with stone heads, and some of them bore knives with crooked blades, probably supplied them by traders, who should have had their own throats cut therewith. At first it seemed that an entire army was charging upon us, but when the fight was over we learned as nearly as we could judge that there had been nine of them.

The first native to throw himself upon Captain Harrington fell with his throat cut so that his head seemed almost to be falling from his body. Sam Clews, the coxswain, dropped the next with a back handed stroke of his knife, which left but seven of them to our fire and a boy.

I had been handed a knife by the captain as we ran, and though I had never used one on human foe there was no time to scruple. A big black fellow made at me with his cresse and I tried to parry. It would have been useless but for a big seaman, Bill Cook, who grappled with the fellow, and the two fell to the ground. As they rolled over I watched my chance, and when Bill was uppermost fell upon his enemy's back, dashing and stabbing with my knife. Even then it gave me a feeling of nausea, but I ended the savage's fight and Bill sprang to his feet in time to grapple with another who was almost in the act of cutting me down.

Just how the fight went after that I do not know. There was a terrible clashing of blades, thuds of blows and occasional shrieks. The scoring was not all on our side either, for Mr. Kendall, the mate, was killed outright, most of our men were more or less wounded, and one of our crew, who was bound a captive, was stabbed by a native, who committed the dastardly act as he fled from us.

The odds were becoming too great against them especially as under protection of two of my mates I had managed to liberate two of the captives, who joined in the fight with zest.

Rescuing the Wounded.

As soon as we had the field to ourselves we rigged up a sort of hammock of bows and carried Drake and Clews, who had been wounded so that they could not walk, back toward the beach. After a short consultation we decided that it would be suicidal to attempt to bury the two who had been killed. We had not the slightest idea how soon the enemy might reappear or in what numbers, and the safety of the survivors was not to be sacrificed. It was a forlorn party and a battered one which made its way back to the beach. There, the while we made ready the boat for a cruise in case of necessity, we feasted on the fruits which had been brought from the forest. Then we gathered as many more as we could conveniently take in the boat with us and filled every available utensil with water from the spring.

We had little thought of repelling the next attack and pinned our hopes for safety on flight. Our powder was dried, but it meant only some score of shots at the most, and few of those would find their mark.

We half expected that the natives might wait for night before they attacked us, but we had scarcely prepared for emergency when a band came whooping from the woods. It would have been useless to resist on shore. The boat might have been destroyed and our one hope with it. We took to the water, shoving the dinghy through the subsiding breakers with little difficulty. The natives seemed at first afraid to come down far on the beach, experience probably having taught them that white men carried firearms. They lurked near the edge of the woods and seemed content with preventing us from landing. This we had no desire to do. We had provisions enough for a day or two and we were safe so long as the sea ran smooth, unless they also should take to the water.

When we were all refreshed a little we started to travel round the island. It was not large, and, computing from the direction shown by the compass and by the fact that a great, scarred peak in the centre was always in our sight, we judged that we had gone half the distance when night fell. No signs of the savages had been seen and we decided to sleep ashore. We were the more determined to do this since the sea was running high again and the wind tossed us about more than was comfortable.

The utter exhaustion of all of us and our nervous condition was probably responsible for the clumsy landing we made, and, much to our disgust, in a twinkling little breaker we capsized the boat. This did not at the time seem serious, for we soon collected food enough for dinner, though we felt the need of something more hearty than the juicy fruit, which was great part water.

Leaving three men on guard, the rest lay down to sleep, which gave them but little difficulty. It must have been about six bells, or eleven o'clock, when we were watching at the time saw a great red flare in the western sky. It seemed to be a fire behind the first range of hills, though it might have been further away. At any rate, I was sent to wake the captain.

He was in a quandary, not knowing whether to believe it was a signal and take to the water or whether to wait for sunrise in the hope that if it was a signal the natives were not ready to act on the moment. Considering the sea, the discomforts of the boat and the loss of our provisions when we had capsized, he decided to let the men rest the night.

With the first pinking of the east we were all roused, and after making ready the boat and eating a small breakfast Captain Harrington explained that we would take more fruit and water on board the dinghy and continue round the island. It was possible that on some side we might sight other land and find it more friendly. We might even sight a ship, which was our greatest hope.

Six men were detailed to gather fruit. They went boldly into the wood, but a few seconds later rushed pell mell onto the beach again, a band of black, swarthy fellows close upon them. Two seemed to run with great difficulty, and before they had gone many paces Bill Cook shot one down. One of the men—Sanders was his name—dropped from weakness or because he tripped, but before the savages had reached him he lifted his pistol and fired it into his own brain.

The suddenness of the scrimmage left us all but stupefied, which was perhaps our blessing, for we could never have held out against the thirty or more savages who ran from the woods, and by the time we had recovered our wits our foes were upon us helping with the oars. Captain Harrington ordered the men with pistols to shoot at the natives until we should launch, and they used the few shots at their disposal to excellent advantage. Some spears were thrown and Captain Harrington was wounded in the thigh, but we were soon afloat.

Weary, almost fagged, we began to row, keeping far enough from shore to be out of range of the spears in case the natives should follow us. Once, after rowing for about an hour and seeing no sign of human life, we attempted to land in search of water, but no sooner had we set foot on the white sandy beach than a band of natives issued from the wood. One of our men, I have forgotten his name, was left on the beach with an arrow through his heart when we regained the boat.

It seemed as though it would be best to land and fight it out. Death might at least come suddenly that way, and not from thirst and hunger, the more lingering since we knew water and food to be within easy reach. Finally, after what seemed days of tedious rowing, we had completely skirted the island. Not a sign of other land had we seen and no sail had we sighted. Opposite the point where we had first gone ashore we lay on our oars while some of the men slept. I think even worse than the thirst we endured, certainly worse than the hunger, was the loss of sleep.

About noon the torment of it all became maddening and Captain Harrington asked the men if they were willing to attempt a landing. Any peril, however grave, seemed better in anticipation than the awful scorching heat of the sun and the pangs of thirst. Not a savage had shown his body for an hour, and we thought perhaps they had given up the chase disgusted. But again we were disappointed. We met with the same reception as at the previous landing, though this time we were fortunate enough to escape without loss of life.

Captain Harrington was unable to resist the temptation to fire into the mass of running black bodies, and one plunged head foremost into the sand. That left us three charges of powder, and it was imperative to preserve them. The captain stopped one of the men in the very act of cocking his pistol and then took the little pouch of powder in his own charge. He seemed cast down by his failure to save the other charge which he had used, but promised to be more careful. It was lucky that he was.

How long we drifted back and forth off that little cove I do not know. It seemed days and nights, but it could not have been more than an hour. One of the men slept with an unhealthy, stupor-like kind of sleep. Another rolled and moaned in the bottom of the boat. The rest of us sat gloomily, brooding. I stuck close to Captain Harrington, finding my solace and comfort in his companionship. Some way he seemed also to value my company.

It must have been about eight bells when suddenly Waite, who was constantly scanning the horizon, exclaimed:—

"Ahoy! There be a ship. Blast me, but she's bearin' down on us!"

All of us but those too weak to notice jumped to our feet and followed the direction of his trembling forefinger. Sure enough, just rounded the point of the island, a four-master under full sail was bearing toward us. If she held to her course she would pass within a mile and a half. At the time she was about five miles distant.

The captain was all action on the instant.

"Come on, boys!" he cried. "Man her again. A few more pulls, lads, an' we'll have duff an' grog a-plenty."

The men responded as best they could, though two lay helpless in the boat. We had scarce covered an eighth of a mile when the schooner brought about and tacked off from us. It was the crisis of suspense. Three times the captain fired into the air. It used his last grain of powder, and we all strained over the sides of the dingy to see what effect it would have on the ship. For a few seconds, which told us all what eternity must be, she held on her course. Then she luffed. Captain Harrington, who throughout had held to his spyglass, told us that a man was running up the shrouds. A few seconds later a gun boomed from the vessel's deck and we knew that we were saved. She put about again and came toward us.

At first we tried to row to meet her, but the effort was too great, and we lay there in the tide waiting for our rescuers. Some of us cried. A few prayed, and others, standing, waved their caps about their heads and cheered, then sank back exhausted with the effort. All eyes were strained on the approaching schooner. No one of us thought of the shore. Actuated by a mysterious feeling of curiosity to see once more the place where my bones might well have bleached in the sun, I turned and glanced toward the beach astern of us.

A cry of horror broke from me. From a little cove where a fair sized stream emptied into the sea a number of long, swift canoes manned by six or eight men apiece were skimming toward us.

My cry attracted the others and all attention was again centred on the savages. We sprang to the oars. With every ounce of muscle and nerve we pushed the boat through the quiet water, but the light canoes ever gained on us. The stakes were life, but we entered the race cruelly handicapped.

There was not a charge for one of the pistols. The only weapons we carried were knives, which were useless, for the savages could kill us all before they were close enough to use offensives. At the oars the men moaned and murmured incoherent sentences and crazy phrases. It seemed as though something was dragging astern of us. My head felt like to burst and my hands had scarce the power to hold my oar. The men on the schooner had evidently seen our distress, for we could see them scurrying about the deck. A man in the bows was sounding. This reminded us of another element of danger.

The vessel might not be able to run in close enough to help us. From time to time I snatched a glance over my shoulder at the ship bearing ever closer to us. At last she hove to, I think a mile away, and the black natives were almost close enough to hurl their spears. No sooner had the vessel luffed than a boat put off and the crew rowed frantically in our direction.

The savages began to hurl their weapons, which fell some distance astern of us, but few always nearer to the mark.

Suddenly Captain Harrington hit upon a scheme.

"Lay on, port," he cried. "Pull her around port," and at the same time he threw the rudder hard against the starboard side.

The canoes of the enemy were a little to the starboard of us, and the captain's idea was to change our course enough to give the men in the ship's boat a chance to use their firearms. He accomplished his purpose, for in a few moments there was a rattle of shots. Dark bodies plunged from the pursuing canoes and one or two sank. As the rescuers drew closer the fire became more rapid, and soon the water was dotted with the panic stricken natives swimming for shore and safety. The canoes which had not been sunk or overturned were headed for the beach.

Of how we reached the ship I do not remember. Some of our men were taken into the other boat and some of their men came into ours to row us to the ship, which turned out to be a Dutch trader which was slightly armed.

The Dutch ship, which had been to Ceylon and later stopped at some ports in the China Sea, was bound for Dutch Guiana. We were carried to Paramaribo and thence shipped to Boston.

Captain Harrington never went to sea again. The other men shipped on various vessels, and it was never my fortune to meet with them after that first cruise.

Little Items From all Parts of the United Kingdom

Thomas Joseph Evans, thirty years of age, butcher, of Thirsk, was sentenced to fourteen years' servitude at York Assizes for attempting in a fit of jealousy to murder his wife.

Death at a Wedding

Wedding festivities were tragically interrupted in a house at Kinallen, near Dromara, County Down, Ireland, when Mrs. Rodgers, the mother of the bride, suddenly took ill and died.

The Family Umbrella

It was stated at a meeting of the Town Council of Gillingham, Kent, that the tenants of certain newly-erected houses were compelled to open umbrellas, to keep the rain off while lying in bed, the roofs being in such shocking condition.

To School by Brake

Many children whose homes are on Southminster Marshes, Essex, have hitherto been unable to attend school as the nearest teaching establishment was several miles from their homes, and to reach it they would have to travel over difficult country.

The Essex Education Committee has solved the difficulty by providing a brake to convey the children to school.

Grimsby's New Fish Dock

Grimsby trawler owners have further considered the Great Central Railway Commission's offer to build a new fish dock, and have decided to pay an increase of one farthing per ton on the gross tonnage directly the contract was let, and a further farthing per ton when the dock was completed, making 2½d. on the gross tonnage of each vessel provided the dock includes a new lockpit.

British Tobacco Growing

The Development Commissioners are investigating the growth of tobacco in England and Scotland in order to judge to what extent grants should be made from the Development Fund. The Treasury is prepared to make a grant equal to ne-third of the duty on the actual weight of tobacco produced for the next three years.

Duke to Sell Yorkshire Estate

The Duke of Sutherland has instructed his agents to sell by auction his Stittenham estate, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, about ten miles from York. The whole of the township of Sheriff Hutton belongs to the duke, and the property extends to some 1,200 acres. This township was the ancient seat of the family of Gower, now Dukes of Sutherland and Barons Gower of Stittenham.

Bank Clerk and Betting

Leonard George Childe Freeman, son of a clergyman, was sentenced to two months' hard labor, at shrewsbury, for embezzling $470 when employed as a clerk at the Shrewsbury branch of the National Provincial Bank of England. He pleaded guilty, and also admitted a further theft of $390 for settling payment debts. Freeman had been in the service of the bank twelve years.

Girls as Recruiting Sergeants

The charms of the fair sex are to be used for recruiting purposes in the Walthamstow and Leyton districts in order to bring the 7th Batt. Essex Regiment (Territorial) up to full strength. The campaign will conclude with a regimental dance, to which those girls who have obtained recruits will receive invitations. In addition, they will be given presents. New headquarters are about to be erected at Walthamstow.

Judge and Mr. Redmond

During the hearing of an appeal at Wicklow Assizes against the refusal of compensation to Wm. Fleming for the alleged malicious burning of hay at Ballygobin, Mr. Justice Gibson asked if one of the ratepayers for whom Mr. Sealy appeared, "Mr. John Redmond, M.P.," was the "Mr. Redmond of the Leinster Bar." "Yes, my lord," said Mr. Sealy, "late of the Leinster Bar." "Don't say 'late,'" remarked his lordship; "Mr. Redmond is one of our most honored representatives."

Shannon and Shipbuilding

Writing to the Limerick Corporation Committee with reference to the offer of a site for a shipbuilding yard near the docks, Lord Pirrie(head of the great Belfast firm of Shipbuilders) says: "It would, indeed, be a great pleasure to me if I could see my way to the establishment of a shipyard on the Shannon, but just at present I have my hands full in other directions and fear, therefore, it will be impossible to seriously consider the suggestion so kindly made by the Council. I will, however, keep your letter and map before me in case of any possible developments in future."

Birch for "a Terrible Boy."

James Delaney, aged ten, was ordered six strokes of a birch rod by a Children's Court at Athy, Ireland, for an assault on another boy named Thomas Shea. Both boys were inmates of the workhouse, and during a quarrel Delaney attacked Shea with a poker and a broom, and finally stabbed him with a penknife. Mr. Valentine Kilbride, who appeared for the guardians, said Delaney was "a terrible boy." He had been reported since the stabbing for beating the other children.

No Rent for Three Years

The tenants on the Churcher estate, in Galway County, Ireland, have declined to pay their rents, as the agents were unable to give an undertaking on behalf of the landlord that he would accept a half-year's rent with the offer of the Congested Districts Board to take over the estate, which is largely composed of un-economic holdings. About seventy tenants require additional land and are prepared to migrate to another county should suitable farms offer. No rent has been paid for the past three years.

WHY KEEP CATS?

A writer in a current periodical makes quite a case against cats. He tells us that they are more or less subject to the same diseases as man. They can and do have diphtheria, for tuberculosis, and are suspected of carrying in their fur the fleas whose bites cause infantile paralysis. Being great travellers they sometimes bring disease from milles away. The gentleman of the magazine goes on to declare that cats destroy more birds than all other natural agencies, such as foxes, hawks, owls, snakes, etc. It is estimated that the average cat kills fifty birds a year, and sometimes they make a specialty of the birds we can least afford to lose, such as robins and song-sparrows. Birds destroy enormous quantities of insects and do much towards protecting ornamental shrubbery, shade and forest trees and crops. A cuckoo eats from fifty to four hundred caterpillars daily, a chickadee from two to five hundred insects, or about four thousand eggs of insects and worms. While the seven baby chickadees are in a nest they consume about five thousand plant lice a day.

Police Court for Goats

Comical scenes were witnessed at Ballinlassy, near Athlone, Ireland, in connection with an evicted farm formerly occupied by Peter Gavin, and now in the hands of the Land Commission. The newly-appointed caretaker, Kelly, observed that a number of donkeys and goats had been turned upon the farm, and he had them removed with the aid of the police. There was witnessed in the town this interesting procession, which excited no little amusement: Four goats, four asses, five policemen, two working men, and Kelly, the caretaker. Each policeman was armed with a loaded rifle, and as they marched behind the obstinate "jinneys" there was a great deal of banter to the accompaniment of "The Bansha Peeler," and many laughable allusions to the "Peeler and the Goat" until the pound was finally reached.

Rowdy Gipsy Tinkers

Two women of the tinker class entered Mr. Finnerman's public-house at Ballymurray, near Roscommon, and demanded two pints of porter. The publican demanded payment before serving them. The women said they had no money, and on Mr. Finnerman refusing to supply them they smashed a plateglass window, value about $25. They then decamped.

Collapse of Record-Breaking Cyclist

A record-breaking cyclist named John Halpin was found unconscious and entangled in his machine half a mile from Brora, Scotland. He was attempting to break the cycling record from London to John o' Groat's and back. This was his third attempt and he had left Dundee at two a.m. and was two hours ahead of his time when he collapsed.

POOR ON $250 A WEEK

Gaekwar of Baroda Cuts Down Son's Allowance at Harvard

Prince Jaisint, the son of the Gaekwar of Baroda, sailed for home after having spent some time at Harvard University, where he had been studying. The Prince did not take a degree, but it was said that he had finished his studies and was going home to take up his position in his fathers' court. It is learned, however, that the young Indian Prince recently had his allowance cut in half and was unable with the smaller amount to "hold his end up" with the millionaire set with which he was associated. The Gaekwar had been allowing his son $500 a week, but when this was cut to $250 the young man decided that he would return to India. The incident is a revelation to a great many people of how expensively one may live at Harvard.

BEAT AN ORPHAN BOY

William O'Brien, a Sandwich Farmer Abused a Waif

For brutally beating George Fisher a nine-year-old waif, whom he had taken from the McPherson Home at Stratford, for adoption, William O'Brien, a farmer living in the township of Sandwich, was fined $9.25 by Police Magistrate Liggatt, Windsor, with the option of 30 days in jail. It was shown that O'Brien, who is a burly-looking fellow, had pounded the little boy over the back and shoulders with a poker until the child's body was black and blue.

SUFFRAGE NOT WANTED

In striking contrast with the woman's propaganda in England is the feminist movement in France. The feminists are not greatly concerned about the vote. So little do they care about that they have not broken a single government window. As for smashing the windows of inoffensive tradesmen they would stand aghast at the suggestion. The feminists of France think of higher things than the mere vote. They want to be the equals of men in other things. In the higher professions particularly they do not see why the monopoly of them should be invested in mere men. So they are leaving the vote alone and going in for the professions.

The ranks of women doctors, women lawyers, women artists, and women professors are increasing every day. But a feminist triumph of a novel kind has to be recorded. A woman has been admitted as an assistant astronomer in the Observatory of Paris. She is Mlle. Edmee Chandon. A brilliant mathematician, she asked to be allowed to enter the Observatory and proved herself so capable an observer that the authorities concluded that her services should be retained. There is a great joy in the feminist ranks over her appointment for the women realise that Mlle. Chandon has furnished another proof why their movement should be respected.

GOLD FOR EVERYBODY

Frenchman Claims to Have Discovered The Long Sought Process

A Paris wizard, M. Verley, claims to have discovered the secret of manufacturing gold out of the baser metals. He warns the public that he is not to be compared with Lemoine, the diamond fakir, nor with any alchemist of the past who pretended to have discovered the philosopher's stone. His invention, he declares is a serious one. He has applied for a patent and all the Governments of the world are to be invited to a conference to decide upon this epoch-making revelation. Paris hereafter will be the greatest gold mine in the world, according to M. Verley. It will turn out tons of the yellow metal from mere scrap iron. The facility with which gold can be produced has frightened him. It will reduce the value to that of the baser metals. He said that he intended to request the different governments of the world to hold a conference for the purpose of making the production of gold a state monopoly, which will alone keep up the price.

M. Verley says that he has applied for a patent in every country, and that he will go to London to demonstrate the reality of his discovery by experiments in the presence of scientists. Needless to say the alleged discovery is received with due amount of scepticism.

WHEN BUYING FISH

Fish should be firm to the touch. There should be no impression left after pressing it with the finger. If it is fresh the eyes are bright, the gills are red and the scales not easily rubbed off. Fresh salmon has, between the flakes, a creamy white curd, which will solidify within twenty-four hours. In selecting a lobster draw the tail away from the body. If it is elastic and rebounds the lobster is fresh.

MAY QUIT MONDAY.

U. S. Coal Operators and Workmen Cannot Reach Decision.

Cleveland, O., March 29.—Little prospect of settling the bituminous coal miners' wage dispute to prevent a strike next Monday and the shutting down of practically all mines operated by union men was seen by the operators and union officials yesterday after they had conferred for hours and had failed to agree.

The lack of any steps toward an immediate settlement and the fact that only two more days intervene before both the anthracite and bituminous wage scales expire were said to make it almost certain that a widespread stoppage of coal production will begin next week for an uncertain period, and a strike, involving about 800,000 men, may ensue.

The situation last night was:

The miners in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania will quit Sunday midnight, because their agreements with the operators expire at that time, and no new agreement, even if it were being considered, could be put into effect in time to prevent the suspension. The union officials declare the suspension virtually will be a strike.

The contracts of the miners in the bituminous regions also expire on Sunday at midnight, and they probably will suspend because they have no new agreement on which to continue.

Officials of the union assert if a strike in both classes of mines is called it will entail a loss of pay to the men of approximately $1,000,000 a day.

A conference, held in the hope that a strike, or even a suspension in the bituminous mines might still be averted, was without result up to last night.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Dr. F. Pearson James, M.D., one of Galt's best-known medical men, was found dead in his office, lying on the floor.

The right of Senator Lorimer of Illinois to his seat in the U. S. Senate was upheld yesterday by the special investigation committee.

Rev. John McLaurin, D.D., died at his residence in Toronto yesterday. In his death, one of the best known Baptist foreign missionaries has passed away.

Seven people were hurled from a motor car near Cooksville yesterday morning and by some miraculous means only F. C. Keating of Toronto was injured.

There are 15,015,569 Catholics in the United States proper, according to the 1912 edition of "Kennedy's Official Catholic Directory." The increase for the year is 386,806.

Indications are that the opening of navigation at Port Arthur will be at least a month later than last year. There is nothing in sight but solid ice about three feet in thickness.

Thomas Mackenzie has succeeded Sir Joseph Ward as Premier of New Zealand. Owing to dissensions over the allocations of portfolios, brief life is prophesied for the new Government.

Herbert Johnson, colored, servant of Dr. Vrooman, Napanee, is in Kingston hospital in a very serious condition. A mud-cat ran its horns into his left thumb, and blood poisoning set it.

R. Craig, 65 Hook avenue, Toronto, a C.P.R. brakeman, fell from his train early yesterday morning at Mimico. He was hurried to the Western Hospital where he died later from a fractured skull.

John Whitmarsh, for twelve years keeper of the Four-Mile lighthouse, near Kingston, has been given notice that his services are no longer required. Victor Sudds has been appointed in his place.

Gilbert Longfellow, a cousin of the poet, died at his home in Pasadena, Cal., yesterday, aged 88 years. He was born in Machias, Me., and was intimately associated with his famous cousin, whom he resembled greatly.

Lake Seamen End Four Years' Strike.

Buffalo, March 29.—The local branch of the Lake Seamen's Union yesterday received an order officially declaring off the strike begun by fifteen thousand members of that organization four years ago. In the referendum vote taken on the question of abandoning the fight against the Lake Carriers' Association, only 2,000 votes were cast, and of this number more than half favored a return to work.

Detroit and Milwaukee members voted strongly against the move, and it is understood that they will seek another referendum on the ground that the rank and file did not understand the question upon which they were voting.

The Weak, Lame, 'Aching Back'
Comes From The Kidneys.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which these afflicted undergo.

On the first sign of backache Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken immediately so as to avoid years of suffering from kidney trouble.

They go right to the seat of the trouble, heal the delicate membranes of the kidneys and make their action regular and natural.

Mrs. Joseph Throop, Upper Point de Bute, N.B., writes:—"I cannot speak too well of Doan's Kidney Pills. For two years I was so tired life was a burden, and I got up more tired than when I went to bed, and my back was so lame I could hardly straighten up. I took different kinds of medicine, but none of them did me any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so, and to-day I don't know what it is to be tired, and my lame back is all gone. I can recommend them to any person suffering with lame back and that terrible tired feeling."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

B. C. ELECTIONS.

McBride's Railway Policy Sweeps the Province.

Vancouver, B.C., March 29—Premier "Dick" McBride has swept British Columbia again. Just how complete the Conservative victory is cannot be determined as yet, but the returns received indicate that the Opposition, which at dissolution consisted of one Liberal and two Socialists in a House of 42 seats, will be wiped out. All seats thus far heard from have gone Conservative on McBride's railway policy.

In Vancouver the five Conservatives lead by 1,000. They are W. J. Bowser,

HON. RICHARD M'BRIDE.

A. H. B. MacCowan, Dr. M. A. McGuire, Harry Watson and C. E. Tisdale.

In New Westminster final returns give Gifford, Conservative, 1,010, and Kennedy, Liberal, 389.

Others elected:

Rossland—Campbell (Con.), 336; Taylor (Lib.), 188; Casey (Soc.), 25.
Fernie—Ross (Con.).
Comox—M. Matson (Con.).
Cowichan—W. H. Hayward (Con.).
Delta—A. J. Mackenzie (Con.).
Dewdney—W. J. Monson (Con.).
Greenwood—J. R. Jackson (Con.).
Islands—A. E. McPhillips (Con.).
Kamloops—J. P. Shaw (Con.).
Lillooet—A. Macdonald (Con.).
Saanich—B. M. Eberts (Con.).
Slocan—Wm. Hunter (Con.).
Ymir—J. R. Schofield (Con.).

Withholds from Columbia, Esquimault and Newcastle yet to hear from, Conservatives are elected in all other ridings. Pooley, a Conservative, is leading in Esquimault. No Liberal has apparently been elected anywhere.

Must Raise Engineers' Pay.

New York, March 29.—Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, predicted here yesterday that when the result of the strike vote on the wage question is made public here on April 10 it will be found that less than 2,500 of the 25,000 engineers in the brotherhood oppose a strike.

"It is significant," said Mr. Stone, "that in none of our conferences with the eastern railroad representatives have they once declared that our demands were unjust. They do not say we do not need the increase; they say merely that they cannot afford to grant it, because they are not allowed increased freight rates. The Interstate Commerce Commission stands in the way of any raise, and, as the commission represents the public, it is really the public that is the stumbling block. That is why I repeat that the public needs an object lesson to convince them that the roads are entitled to more pay for the freight they carry. Freight rates are bound to go up."

No Bail For Mrs. Pankhurst.

London, March 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, joint editors of "Votes for Women," and Mrs. Pankhurst, were committed to take their trial at the Old Bailey sessions by the police magistrate at the Bow Street Court yesterday. Bail was refused in the case of Mrs. Pankhurst and she was sent back to Holloway Jail to complete the sentence of two months imposed upon her on March 2. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence undertook to abstain from any further violence pending their trial.

Mrs. Mabel Tuke, who is in ill health, fainted during the hearing and was discharged from custody. The magistrate thought that the case against her was not nearly so strong as that against the other prisoners.

Gamey to Choose Route.

Toronto, March 29.—R. S. Gamey, the member for Mackenzie, has been appointed by the Ontario Government to take charge of the expedition that is going north to select a route for the five-mile strip of territory in Manitoba over which the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway will run to Port Nelson.

Montreal Tunnel to Start.

Montreal, March 29.—When the first sod is turned, inaugurating the construction of the Canadian Northern Railway's tunnel under Mount Royal, a public ceremony will be arranged for by the management of the road, at which a number of prominent Canadians will be present.

Mayor Lavallee will, probably, be the first man to commence the gigantic work of burrowing under the mountain, and will declare the work officially open, after which the thousands of workmen who are to be employed will start the excavations at both ends of the projected route, which will connect the city with the new model city, Mount Royal, and the business sections of Montreal.

Rise in Wholesale Prices.

Ottawa, March 29.—Yesterday morning Mr. Crothers tables a special report on wholesale prices with special reference to the high cost of living. It shows that prices now are considerably higher than ever before, the advance in ten years having been some 45 per cent. The raise in retail prices in the year was five per cent. and in wholesale prices three per cent.

The 1911 prices reached a higher level than within the present generation. As far as the Department of Labor can find out, the only years in which those compared with 1911 were 1892-94 and 1872-3.

Killed by Elevator.

Toronto, March 29.—Israel Zinger, 144 Williams street, was instantly killed by an elevator at Grand & Toy's warehouse on Wellington street. Just how the accident occurred is unknown. The elevator man was working at a bench and the first he knew of the man's presence was when he cried out. The hoist had come down and crushed the Hebrew's chest. The man was a rag picker, and an hour after the body had been removed to the morgue, his horse was found standing on Jordan street.

An inquest will be opened at noon by Coroner Myer.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Corn to-day sold at the highest prices ever known for the month of March. Extraordinary scarcity of fodder on farms, owing to prolonged and severe winter conditions, was declared to be responsible. Closing quotations were steady at 1-8c to 3-8c to 1-2c above last night. Oats finished unchanged to 1-8c to 1-4c up, but wheat a decline of 3-8c to 1-2c to 5-8c. Latest trading left hog products varying from 5c lower to 22 1-2c advance.

Liverpool wheat closed 1d lower than yesterday, and corn unchanged to ½d lower. Paris wheat closed 1c lower to 1c higher, Antwerp 1c higher, Berlin 1d higher, and Buda Pesth 1c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 29.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat came strong at a further advance of 1½d per quarter. The demand was good for all grades, and a fair amount of business was worked for July-August shipment. The demand for ocean grain room during the week has been good from both American and Canadian exporters, and it is estimated that fully 1,500,000 bushels have been booked for July-August shipment. This has tended to strengthen the market, and agents are now asking an advance of 2d per quarter, 2s 2d being paid for Liverpool. Butter is quiet, the high prices checking the demand.

THE IMPERIAL HOME RE-UNION ASSOCIATION SCHEME ATTRACTING FAVOURABLE ATTENTION

Number of Peterborough Business Men Have Signified Their Willingness to Assist—Earl Grey Approves of the Scheme.

GUARANTORS PROTECTED

The Imperial Home Re-union Association scheme, which was launched in this city a few days ago, has attracted the attention of a number of business men of the city, who would favour the immediate development of the project with a view to placing the scheme on a working basis as soon as possible. A number of guarantors have already signified their willingness to subscribe to the fund, and with the formation of an Advisory Board, the outlook for the immediate promulgation of the scheme is extremely favourable.

Guarantors Are Protected.

Many of those interested in the movement are concerned as to what means are adopted to protect the guarantors. A glance over the printed forms, which the applicant for assistance is required to fill out, will serve to allay all fears as to this. Ample provision has been made for the protection of the guarantors. This, together with the six per cent. interest, which is collected on all loans, makes the investment not only safe, but a profitable one. Applicants for assistance are requested to furnish a full account of their movements during the time they have been here. This, together with a certificate of good character, the nature of their employment and the monetary reimbursement derived therefrom, are all certified to on the printed form provided for that purpose. In addition to this the applicant signs an agreement in which he agrees to make stipulated payments, giving his wages as security. A confidential report blank is also filled out and signed by the employer, in which the latter reports upon the applicant's character and other matters, with which he is acquainted, as regards the employee.

Earl Grey Approves of Scheme.

This is what Earl Grey says of the Imperial Home Re-union work in Winnipeg, a movement similar to which is now being organized in Peterborough:

"The spirit that has impelled the business men of Winnipeg to reunite these new citizens and their families and to enable them to enjoy the comforts that their ample wage here makes possible has my fullest sympathy and endorsation.

"You are at liberty to use my name in any manner you see fit in aiding the Association to develop national scope with greater possibilities for your work."—Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada.

The convening of an Executive committee and Advisory Board will be dealt with at a meeting which will be called together in the course of a few days and until this phase of the work has been disposed of satisfactorily, the movement will be somewhat hampered. The promoters of the scheme are alive to the fact that a live, energetic working committee is essential to the successful evolution of the project.

The object of the association is to assist the heads of families who are already located here, in bringing out their wives and families. Money is advanced and its repayment made on the instalment plan.

The business interests of the city would be benefitted in this way, that the money spent in England would be spent here. At the present there are, as stated in Mr. J. J. Turner's recent letter to the Board of Trade, forty-two men in Peterborough who could be assisted in the manner indicated. The letter further goes on to say that a guaranteed fund of $5,000 would be ample to start the movement in Peterborough. 50 guarantors of one hundred dollars each, or twenty if it were considered better, at $250 each.

STALLION SHOW

Will be Held in April by the Fair Directors

The details of the arrangements are not yet ready for announcement but the show has been decided upon and it is hoped that the farmers and others of the district covered by the exhibition will take an interest in the plans. Further information will be given shortly.

CANNING FACTORY

May be Erected at Norwood This Year.

It is intimated from Norwood that a canning factory may be erected in the village this spring. The project is said to be well under way and of the 100 acres necessary for tomatoes 75 have already been promised.

Objects Of 57th Chapter

One good patriotic cause was inaugurated over a truly patriotic idea, and that occurred in the armouries recreation room, when the 57th Regiment Chapter Imperial Order met for the purpose of working up an interest in the order and explaining its objects. Mrs. Colonel Clegg occupied the chair. There were about 40 members present. Al lthose in attendance seemed to take a great and active interest in the future of the Chapter. Mrs. V. Eastwood, the secretary of the Chapter, is an ardent enthusiast over the good to be accomplished by the Association. The objects of the Chapter were fully expained to those present. They include among other matters: The visiting and administering assistance to sick or distressed members of the regiment and their families; the placing of flags on eDcoration Day on the graves of deceased members of the 57th; to try and inculcate a spirit of patriotism among both old and young. In this latter connection special attention will be paid to breeding a spirit of patriotism among the younger generation. A veneration for the Old Falg will be perached and the meaning of its emblem explained.

Taken all in all few meetings have been held in Peterborough where a more general display of practical patriotism and loyalty were exhibited.

CHEESE BOARD SALE.

First of the Season will be Held on May 15th.

The first sale of the Peterborough Cheese Board will be held on May 15th. On that date the election of officers will also take place and the question of whether sales should be made every week in the warm weather will be voted on.

Dog Tore Child's Throat Open

Special to The Examiner

CHICAGO, MARCH 29.—Anna De Calve, three years old, was killed by a large Newfoundland dog to-day while visiting the home of a neighbour on West Eleventh street. The child attempted to play with the animal whiue it was eating a bone, when it suddenly a made vicious attack on the girl. The dog tore open the child's throat and the victim bled to death. When the members of the family returned they found the dead body of the child. The dog was killed by the police.

OBITUARY

MRS. WM. A. BOWMAN.

The death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital at 12 o'clock, last night, of Edith Hales, daughter of the late Samuel Hales, of Toronto, and wife of Mr. Wm. A. Bowman of this city. The deceased, who was thirty-five years of age had been ailing for the past two years, and for the last month had been confined to St. Joseph's Hospital. Since coming to Peterborough she has made a large number of friends, who will regret to hear of her demise.

She is survived by her husband, her mother, Mrs. Hales, in Toronto; an aunt, Miss Bishop of Toronto; two brothers, Fred of Brantford, and Bert, of Toronto, and two sisters, Clara and Gertrude, both residing in Toronto.

The funeral, which will be private, will take place to-morrow (Saturday) morning, at 10 o'clock, from the residence of Mrs. Mary Bowman, Charlotte street, to Little Lake cemetery.

WEDDING BELLS

PEARSON-BROWNLIE

Miss Matilda R. Brownlie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Brownlie, of Chamberlain St., was united in marriage to Mr. Frederick J. W. Pearson, of Ivy, at St. Paul's manse, at 7.30 p.m., on Wednesday evening, March 27th, by the Rev. R. Pogue.

The bride was dressed in a blue suit and black hat trimmed with blue willow plumes. They will reside in the city.

NEW MEMBERS ADDED.

W. O. W. are Out to Lead Honour Roll.

The Woodmen of the World met on Monday evening in regular session. About thirty candidates were initiated, bringing the number of new members initiated into the Order since November 1st up to 222. The membership of the Order is now placed at six hundred. It is expected that the one thousand mark will be reached before the end of the year

This sketch, from the London Chronicle, shows Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Pankhurst and Mrs. Tuke in the dock, at Bow Street Court, on trial, charged with conspiracy, in connection with the Suffragette window smashing crusade.

RUMOUR IS CONFIRMED

Circumstances Concerning Death of Albert Parrish in Vancouver Are Particularly Pathetic —Deceased Well Known in This City

FUNERAL IN VANCOUVER

Mr. John Sadler has received a confirmation of the report, in which it was stated that his son-in-law, Mr. Albert Parrish had been killed in Vancouver. The manner in which the young man met such a tragic death was chronicled in yesterday's Examiner. He leaves a bride of but twelve months and also an infant child. They reside on Romaine street, and were looking forward with the expectation of joining him within a few days. In fact all the household goods and chattels were packed preparatory to shipping them on Friday to Vancouver.

Deceased was a machinist by trade and three weeks ago he left Peterborough for False Creek, Vancouver, where he secured employment in a mill. It was here that he met his death on Tuesday, exactly three weeks after his departure from this city.

The remains will not be brought here for burial, but will be laid to rest in Vancouver pending the arrival of Mr. Frank Sadler of this city, brother-in-law of the deceased who left to-day for the scene of the tragedy. He will have charge of the funeral arrangements.

The late Mr. Parrish was a resident of Peterborough for about eight years and was employed at the C.G.E. as a die setter. He was prominently identified with the A.O.F. of this city, and was a general favourite among a wide circle of friends with whom he was associated.

THE RED POLL WARBLER

In last evening's Examiner a bird was mentioned as a Warbler. The member of the staff who wrote the paragraph would appear to be a musician, the terms used regarding time, "three half notes, six eighths, concluded by sixty-fourths" is a splendid description, very accurate, and one which would enable others, who listen to determine the species. But a Warbler, that is the species of birds called Warblers, is of a different class from the one mentioned. The bird the writer noticed belonged to the family of Finches, "Fringillidae". The bird itself is the Redpoll. We have thirteen kinds of Warblers that visit Peterborough, but they are very delicate little fellows, and do not arrive till aboue the latter part of April, weather conditions altering the date a little. There are three varieties of Redpolls, the rarest one being the Hoary Redpoll. The one now with with us is the most common, a regular visitor from the north to us. They will soon return. One feature of these birds is their trustfulness. If one comes upon them suddenly, they will rise from seed weeds, where they feed, but if one stands still they appear to have no fear and return to feed.

Yours,

E. Elcome.

HOLDING A CONFERENCE

A SHIFT FOR THE BILL

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, MARCH 29.—A final conference is to be held early this afternoon between William Wainwright, Vice-President of the Grand Trunk Railway Co., and Premier Borden, about the reinstatement of the Grand Trunk strikers and on the result of this conference the fate of the Grand Trunk Bill before the Commons depends. S. N. Berry, Chief of the Railway Conductors, who has been in Ottawa for some time, said this morning that no more conferences between the men and the Company and the men and the Department of Labour would be held so far as he knew. Unless some agreement is arrived at this afternoon, it looks as though the bill would get a short shift.

MINORITY SCHOOLS IN MANITOBA

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, MARCH 29.—The report is accepted at the Legislative buildings as correct that legislation profoundly modifying the present Manitoba School law will be submitted to the Legislature by the Roblin Government within a few days, embracing the principle of minority schools. This was the demand made by the Catholic laymen at a convention recently held in the city. Archbishop Langevin took objection to this proposal, but after a series of conferences with the committee of laymen he waived objections and agreed to accept this as a sufficient settlement.

FOURTEEN MINERS BURIED ALIVE

Special to The Examiner.

SHEFFIELD, ENG., MARCH 29.—Fourteen miners were buried alive near here to-day, while working on a surface quarry, which caved in following the heavy storms.

CHAMPAGNE IS SEIZED

Special to The Examiner.

COBALT, MARCH 29.—A carload of champagne and other fine liquors intended for a banquet at Porcupine to-morrow night, when three train loads of New York and Ontario capitalists will be there to view the country, was seized here last night, by the Provincial Police as contraband in this no-license country.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Hastings, N.S. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

LARGE PROPERTY SALE

The Inter-State Realty Co. are conducting a sale in Peterborough on March 30th, of a number of desirable dwelling houses, located in the city. The owner of these parcels of property, having other property outside the city, is seeking to reduce his city holdings and the consequent time involved in the care of same. He has therefore, instructed the auctioneers to sell to the highest bidder, and it is anticipated that some good bargains will result. The houses which will be sold separately, are situated as under, and the time of the sale is also subjoined:

47 Park street, 1 o'clock.
103 Stewart street, 1.45 p.m.
57 Aylmer street, 2.30 p.m.
149 Stewart street, 3.00 p.m.
169 Reid street, 3.30 p.m.
560 and 562 Sherbrooke street, 4.00 p.m.

The terms will be made known at the time and place of sale.

THE MINERS ARE TAKING A BALLOT

First Results Show a Vote in the Proportion of 5 to 2 in Favour of a Settlement

MEMBERS TO SPEAK

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 29.—The first results of the balloting among the striking miners for the acceptance of the minimum wage bill resulted in a vote favourable to settlement on a percentage of five for and two against.

At least two hundred members of Parliament, both Liberal and Unionist, have arranged to speak this Saturday and Sunday, in the mining districts, urging the acceptance of the bill in order to prevent national ruin.

MAYOR BRADBURN MAKES REQUEST.

Mayor Bradburn makes his first direct request to the citizens, through the press, and asks that as many as possible remove from the sidewalk in front of their residences the slush and melting ice that remain. Ten minutes' work, he said, would suffice for the most householders, and if there were concerted action splendid results would be shown throughout the city. The Mayor asks the co-operation of the citizens in this matter, not for appearances only, but for the general convenience of the public in that everyone will have a direct benefit.

Miss Pankhurst Heard From

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, MARCH 29.—While the police are still unable to locate Miss Christobel Pankhurst, she was heard from this morning in a vigorous pronouncement of defiance following the Commons turning down the Constitution bill last evening, which would have given votes to a million women with household qualifications. Miss Pankhurst condemned what she calls the brutal, stupid attempts of the Government to wear out the women's resistence. There would be no cessation of women's suffrage movement and no changing of militant tactics. Fifty thousand dollars were collected last night and this morning for the suffragette cause.

Postmaster Dismissed

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ONT., MARCH 29.—J. Morgan, Postmaster of Ailsa Craig, has been dismissed. The position has been offered to Mr. C. Walker, of London, who was formerly postmaster at Ailsa Craig. He has declined to accept.

MR. JAMES GIRVEN BUSINESS MARKET CLERK FOR ANOTHER YEAR—CATTLE PENS AT THE MARKET MUST GO AND MARKET MUST BE KEPT CLEANER.

SOME OTHER DOINGS

PROPERTY COMMITTEE DOINGS.

Decide to remove cattle pens from the market.

Plumbing inspector to give detailed monthly statement.

Market must be kept clean.

A meeting of the Property committee was held last night with Ald. Duncan presiding and with Mayor Bradburn and Aldermen Morgan, Graham and Brown present.

Two tenders for the market tolls during the coming year, beginning on April 1st, had been received in answer to the city's advertisements. Mr. James Girven, the present clerk, in his tender, offered $800 for the tolls and Mr. Walter Fisher offered $861.

Moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham that Mr. Girven's tender be accepted.—Carried.

Must Be Kept Clean.

Ald. Duncan stated that the clerk will have to keep the steads and stairs leading to the market hall in better condition than they have been. "They are not swept often enough and are not kept clean. There should be signs at the foot of the stairs saying "this way up" and a smaller sign at the top for "this way down."

Ald. Brown— There should also be signs up stairs indicating which doors are to be used for entering and going out of the hall.

Ald. Duncan— The agreement also calls for 60 degrees of heat in the winter.

Ald. Graham—Some days it is difficult to keep it at that.

Ald. Duncan—I think wet wood was being used at times and you cannot get the best results from that. It should be mixed.

City Clerk Armstrong stated that the market tolls had sold last year for $915.

To Remove the Pens.

Ald. Duncan—What is your idea of tearing down the pens?

Ald. Graham—Where would you put them?

Ald. Duncan—Do away with them altogether. When they were erected they were meant to facilitate the handling of herds of cattle that were brought in to be weighed, but hogs and cattle have been allowed to stand there for half a day at a time.

Ald. Brown — There are different kinds and classes of cattle and some place is needed at times for keeping some of them to one side. I disapprove of making the market into a hog pen, but I think you should leave one pen.

Ald. Duncan—They have been abusing a privilege.

Ald. Morgan— They will abuse a privilege with one pen. If you are going to clean it out, clean it all out.

Think of Farmers.

Ald. Brown— I am thinking of the convenience of the farmers and we should give them some consideration. No one would object to the cattle being left in a pen while others are being weighed.

Ald. Morgan—Could we not provide a place on the property south-east of the market. All you want is some place to leave them for a short time.

Ald. Graham—Was it not the intention of the Council to clean them out entirely? Well, let us remove them.

Ald. Brown—I think one pen might be left temporarily and if the privilege is abused it could be removed then.

Moved by Ald. Morgan seconded by Ald. Graham, that the cattle pens on the market be removed entirely. — Carried.

To Paint Clerk's Office.

Ald. Duncan—Another matter is the painting of the market clerk's office if we have any money left.

A number of remarks of a rather derogatory character were passed concerning the condition of the market, and the necessity for an application of kalsomine paint, and a general house cleaning was emphasized.

Ald. Morgan—We might also get a blind and lace curtains for the clerk's office.

A motion by Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Brown, was passed, authorizing the chairman to take up the question of painting the clerk's office, frosting the windows of the city clerk's office and providing a few office necessaries for the assessor's office.

Mayor Bradburn, who entered at this stage of the proceedings remarked that the markets buildings had to be kept cleaner this year.

Contract For Trees.

Ald. Duncan then opened the tenders for the providing of trees for the King Edward Park. The following were received:

John Best, 459 Donegal street— For trees, $156.60; trees and planting $170.00.

RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT.

President Taft is criticised for disparaging the 'free and equal' citizen of the United States, by saying that the people have not quite as good an idea of law as the Supreme Court. But he is right. The sovereign people under responsible government, have their limitation of knowledge and judgment of national questions, and that is one of their excuses for electing a representative, who theoretically—though it doesn't always work out that way in practice—knows more than his constituents. The proposal to submit the question of a Canadian navy and the question of Canada's participation in the defence of the Empire to the people is without defence and is a denial of the principles of representative government. The mass of the electors may think they know what they want—they certainly know what they are willing or unwilling to pay for—but are they as well qualified as their elected representatives to decide such a question. They elected a parliament and gave authority for the formation of a government to decide all such matters, and Parliament would be voting a motion of want of confidence in itself if it shirked its responsibility for dealing with the question of naval defence and threw back upon the people the responsibility the people had imposed upon them. A man engages a lawyer to look after his business, but the retainer would be quickly recalled if the lawyer submitted every question of action to his client. He might as well save the lawyer's fees, if he had to do the business himself. If we have Parliamentary representatives to do our business for us, we should require that they do it, and accept the responsibility. If we have responsible government, let us have it in action.

WELLAND CANAL ENLARGEMENT.

The Borden government shines more as a government of inaction than as a government of action. In the matter of naval defence it does nothing, and worse than that it undoes the beginning of what has been done. In the important matter of transportation it shows a frivolous way of dealing with big matters. The wheat production of the west, has far surpassed the capacity of the transportation outlets. To remedy this, the deepening and enlargement of the Welland canal is regarded on all sides as an absolutely immediate necessity. The late government had appreciated this and had carried out the necessary surveys to permit of immediate work, which would have been under contract now if the government had remained in power.

The present government falls short of appreciating its responsibility, and does not seem to take the Welland canal enlargement seriously. In the supplementary estimates appears an item of $200,000 for work on Welland canal enlargement. The evident and ridiculous inadequacy of this amount is emphasized by the fact that the entire cost of the work is estimated to be 45 million dollars. At the rate of $200,000 per year, it would take 225 years to complete the enlargement of a work that demands the utmost possible despatch. Wheat in the west is rotting on the ground from lack of transportation facilities. And this condition will become intensified continuously. The national interests demand more rapid progress, demand undertaking the work seriously instead of playing with it.

Not only are national transportation and general interests imperilled, but other dangers threaten. The Welland and St. Lawrence canals are the recognized highways to the sea for both the Canadian and United States' wheat or grain. The United States is spending 100 million dollars in improving the Erie canal. If we fail to keep the Welland route up to the mark, the grain traffic will be in danger of being diverted to the Erie route; and, once transportation falls into the habit of using a certain route, it will be hard to bring it back. What we need is to push, to rush the enlargement of the Welland canal. We must hold what we have. If the work is to be done, and the government is in earnest it should do as well as the hesitating Macbeth—

"If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly."

SAVE OURSELVES.

At a recent sitting of a court in Montreal, the presiding Judge passed sentences on a number of convicted criminals, aggregating one hundred years in time. This is a remarkable record, but not so remarkable, nor so significant as the fact that of the eight or ten criminals sentenced, all but three had foreign names. This is only the local and accidental expression of conditions that prevail all over Canada, as any one may see who reads the record of crime in the daily papers. The majority of those culpable have more or less, unpronounceable foreign names—in contrast with their bad morals, which are very much pronounced. Conditions like this suggest to the thoughtful a grave danger of mischevious corruption of the good character of Canadian citizenship.

It is, perhaps, impossible with a liberal immigration policy, be it never so well administered, to exclude undesirable citizens. Canada has immense areas yearning for settlement and utilization, and we are not inclined to scrutinise new arrivals as closely as if we were not so anxious for increased population. In any event we shall have in the most carefully selected class of immigrants the vicious, the improvident, and the otherwise undesirable. How best to deal with them is a problem that taxes the highest ingenuity of our statesmen, and rouses the keenest solicitude of our social economists. The greatness of our future, our national power and influence, our high place among the nations will depend less upon the count of noses than upon the character, the moral tone, and manly fibre of our population.

Considerations like these give a preponderating importance to the development of educational propaganda in the secular field and missionary effort in the ecclesiastical field. In a word, the indispensable import of home missions, in comparison with foreign missions, is emphasized.

If our obligations to the heathen at home—the imported heathen and the heathen by degeneration—and our obligations to the heathen abroad are to be regarded as morally equal, there is this consideration that should incline the balance to the side of home missions. The foreign heathen will become no worse, nor make anybody else worse by being left alone. The home heathen, the imported foreigners that may come from nominally Christian countries, are practical heathens by their disregard of religious obligations, and the restraints of morality. If they are not looked after and subjected to reformatory efforts, they will be a corrupting element in our civilized and moral communities. This especially applies to the Canadian West. Not only is there a large influx of morally obtuse, if not degenerate, foreigners, but the western population coming from the civilised countries of eastern Canada and the United States, are, large numbers of them, living in regions where the civilizing and preservative influences of schools and churches are not provided. Without these the best of men and women will rapidly degenerate, and drop into a sordid, hard, coarse, material way of living, incompatible with a high or even tolerable standard of citizenship.

It seems that our first duty is towards the maintenance of the standard of Canadian citizenship. Without any idea of disparagement, if all the energy expended upon the church union movement, were concentrated upon a united church effort to supply home mission needs in the Canadian West and North results of the foremost importance might be achieved. We should strive to save ourselves.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Under the present administration, Ontario's schools dwindle, peak and Pyne.

Dr. Merchant's report does not essentially contradict Sir James Whitney's declaration that "legally speaking" there are no bilingual schools. Dr. Merchant's report shows that bilingual schools do not, "legally speaking," exist — they are not conducted according to the requirements of the law.

Sir James Whitney seems to have made his choice. The Conservative Toronto News states that the Conservative caucus to concoct a policy on bilingual schools reached a result that made "French Canadian members pleased with the outcome," and this in the face of the resolution forwarded to Sir James by the Orange Grand Black Chapter demanding the abolition of bilingual schools.

Being a princess is not always pleasant "job." Princess Louise Prussia, the German Kaiser's only daughter, has "nervous breakdown" because she cannot, for state reasons marry the man she loves. In this regard, she is less fortunate than a stenographer or a milliner girl or the average girl of the people. She can marry the man she likes, if the man she likes, likes the idea, in spite of all the kaisers in creation.

In Woodstock, the political Judge Jeffreys who was to try the charge of "offensive partisanship" to justify the dismissal of the postmaster Bright, couldn't get any witness to testify, let alone prove, the charge. So the "investigation" ended before it began. But the postmaster will lose his head all the same. Proof is not needed. The fact of an investigatio being offered, satisfies the conscience of Lord High Executioner Pelletier.

MR. BORDEN AND DREADNOUGHTS.

(Toronto Star.)

It is pleaded on behalf of the Borden Government that it must consult the Admiralty as to its naval plans, and then consult the people. That may serve to excuse the delay in the formation of permanent plans But what has become of Mr. Borden' proposal for a gift of two Dreadnoughts to the Imperial Government? Mr. Borden, when in Opposition moved

"That in the meantime the immediate duty of Canada and the impending necessities of the Empire can best be discharged and met by placing without delay, at the disposal of the Imperial authorities, as a free and loyal contribution from the people of Canada, such an amount as may be sufficient to purchase or construct two battleship or armoured cruisers of the latest Dreadnought type."

Some may say that he would be opposed by his Nationalist followers But we are assured by Government journals that the Nationalists are so thoroughly subjugated. They lie helpless at Mr. Borden's feet, ready to vote for anything if he will only allow them to exist. There seems to be no obstacle to the immediate gift of th Dreadnoughts, if Mr. Borden is sti in favour of that policy.

The Medicine of Generosity.

Generosity has wonderful power in curing trouble which by any other means would seem incurable. The story is told of a poor blind woman in Paris who put 27 francs on the plate at a missionary meeting. A friend remonstrated, "You cannot afford so much out of your small earnings." "Oh, yes, I can," she answered "I've figured it out and know just what I can afford to give." When asked to explain she said: "I am blind, and I said to my fellow straw workers, 'How much money do you spend in a year for oil in your lamps when it is too dark to work at nights?' They replied, 'Twenty-seven francs.' So," said the poor woman, "I found that I saved so much in the year because I am blind and do not need a lamp, and I give it to send light to the dark heathen lands."—Christian Herald.

Told His Fortune.

While crossing the East Boston ferry the other evening a little fellow approached me, saying, "Tell yer fortune for a nickel, mister."

After a few words with the young fellow I consented. He took my hand and said, "At first I thought you were going to become a rich man, but it's all off now."

I asked him his reason.

"Well, yer see, boss, anybody who parts with his money on a scheme like I played you for will never be one of them financiers."

They Used to Eat Crows.

Our forefathers despised some dishes which we regard as delicacies. In the thirteenth century, for instance, although partridges abounded in England, they were eaten only by peasants and were never seen in the houses of the nobles. Hares, too, were despised by the upper classes, and even among the poor a strong prejudice existed against them. On the other hand, gourmets in the middle ages ate herons, cranes, crows, storks, cormorants, bitterns and other birds which would revolt the least dainty feeder of today.—London Chronicle.

Turn About.

"Every husband ought to make his bride a regular allowance from the start," said a guest at a wedding reception in New York.

"This is but just," he continued, "because from the start every bride finds that she must constantly make allowances for her husband."

In a Pinch.

"Can't you assume a little more pleasing expression of countenance?" asked the photographer.

"I-yes, sir," hesitatingly answered the sitter. "Wait a minute and I'll take off these new shoes."—Chicago Tribune.

HER ENGAGEMENT.

It Started Conflicting Emotions at Work in Her Mother.

Mrs. DeGroff drew a deep sigh when her daughter told her that she had become engaged to Mr. Bobbin.

"I suppose it's foolish of me to feel so bad about it," she said, wiping her eyes, but I can't help it. I know it's a woman's destiny to be married, dear, and I have always hoped that you would marry and be happy. But a mother can never lose a daughter without feeling deeply on the subject. She can never help regarding it as an awful loss—a tragedy. She cannot give up her little girl, even to the best man that ever lived, without the deepest reluctance."

"But, mother, dear, I shall come and see you often. And you mustn't cry as if it were going to happen right away You will have time to get used to it."

"Will I? How soon are you to be married?"

"Not for nearly a year. Bob thinks that"—

"Not for a year? What on earth does he mean by putting it off that long? I don't believe he intends to marry you at all, the smirking young snip! If he did he'd insist on having the wedding right away. And I shall tell him so. You bring him to time, Clara. You tell him that he'll either marry you next month or never. Huh! I'll show him!"

MAKING UMBRELLAS.

In most umbrella factories the task of turning out ribs and stems is left to other factories making a specialty of those parts. These are sent to the manufacturer, and the man whose work it is to assemble the parts inserts a bit of wire into the small holes at the end of the ribs, draws them together about the main rod and adjusts the ferrule.

In cutting the cloth or silk seventy five thicknesses or thereabouts are arranged upon a table at which skilled operators work. In one department there are girls who operate hemming machines. A thousand yards of hemmed goods is but a day's work for one of these girls. The machines doing this job attain a speed of some 3,000 revolutions a minute. After the hemming has been done the cloth or silk is cut into triangular pieces with a knife as before, but with a pattern laid upon the cloth. The next operation is the sewing of the triangular pieces together by machinery.

The covers and frames are now ready to be brought together. In all there are twenty-one places where the cover is to be attached to the frame The handle is next glued on, and the umbrella is ready for pressing and inspection.

Bill Passes N. Y. Assembly.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 21.—A telegram, received late yesterday by the local Falls illumination committee from Senator Gittins in Albany, announced that the New York State Assembly has passed the bill, recently passed by the State Senate, appropriating $50,000 for permanent lighting of the cataracts. The bill provides that Ontario must appropriate a like amount before the fund is available.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THAT it is not only what one has to wear, but how it is worn, not only what furniture there is in a house, but how the house is kept, that makes a person or a house look attractive or unattractive, is a truism. And yet how often we seem to forget this fact.

We had been calling at a lovely new home the other day. The happy bride had proudly shown us all over it. She is decidedly well to do, and the furniture was beautiful. Dull, rich mahogany in the fine old lines, marvelously grained Circassian walnut, brass beds of exquisite dull finish and chastest of design, fragile gold and white china, heavy silver in the severest pattern, oriental rugs—linen, beautiful pictures and wonderful were antique paddied, everything that the heart of man or rather of woman, could desire, seemed to be in that house.

As we walked towards home my companion sighed enviously. "Wasn't it lovely? Oh, it just makes me sick to go into my house after that."

A vision of her home came before my eyes. The furnishings are good, though not expensive. The house is pleasant and has fine possibilities, and yet it is a distinctly unattractive home—far more unattractive than it has any reason for being. For the mistress of the house ignores the truism that it is not only what is in a home, but how it is kept that makes it pleasing or not. Take her bed-chamber, for instance. With its pretty white beds, its well-built oak dresser, its dainty cretonne hangings and comfortable wicker chairs, it would be a very pleasant room of it were kept perfectly clean and in good order. But when I last saw it, the hangings were awry, the dresser was littered and one drawer pulled a little way out, the covers on the wicker chairs were soiled, the beds were carelessly made and one of them was marred by a long scratch which might have been easily remedied by a bit of enamel. Naturally the effect was not pleasing. She evidently attributes the unattractive aspect to the lack of fine furniture. But if she had the finest furniture, the most expensive mahogany or Circassian walnut, and kept the room as carelessly, and was as neglectful of details a sabe now is, I maintain that the effect would still be far from pleasing.

A certain young married woman envies her girl friends their pretty clothes and sometimes feels aggressive, because she cannot have two suits a year and all the other dainty costumes and accessories that they buy for themselves. Apparently she is very ambitious to look well. And yet she often goes about the house without a collar or belt, and with a gown which has been simply thrown on. The finest clothes worn in this way would be unattractive. The cheapest machine made housegown, if it is of a becoming make and colour, and carefully and neatly put on, would look better.

We may not all have beautiful furnishings or expensive clothes. But we may all wear our clothes and keep our homes in a way that shall give us their full value in attractiveness.

Mahogany, dirty, scratched and in disorder, is not so attractive as oak kept neat and orderly and unmarred.

A silk gown carelessly put on, and worn without belt or collar, is far less effective than a gingham dress in proper condition.

The woman who not only acknowledges these truisms, but lives them, is practically sure of an attractive person and a pleasing home.

DURBAR IN KINEMACOLOR

The King-Emperor and Queen-Empress in their Regal Robes at Delhi

Zeus gazing down from Olympus never absorbed the details of the whole world's doings so surely as does the cinematographer, who operates that marvelous invention, the Kinemacolor camera, which faithfully records not only every motion of scenes and incidents, but also reproduces every tint and tone of Nature's own original colouring.

The Kinemacolor pictures of the great pageant of the Durbar in India, at which King George and his Queen were proclaimed Emperor and Empress, are like the realization of a portion of the Arabian Nights. One must rub their eyes when told that by a visit to the theatre it is possible to see reproduced with every fidelity of detail and gorgeous colour effects, the scenes and incidents of the greatest Oriental pageant known in the history of the world.

Yet this is all true, for the camera has given humanity absolute intellectual domain over the entire globe. It has reduced the world to the size of an orange, which can be turned about at will and minutely examined as if with a magnifier.

The age of wonders never ceases. Kinemacolor, first introduced to this country a year ago with the pictures of the London Coronation, won instant approval. Now come the pictures of the great Durbar in India and with the wand of a magician present to the spectator the glowing and pulsating scenes of the Delhi pageant, with all the same sensation as if that spectator had actually witnessed the events.

London and New York have received the Durbar pictures in Kinemacolor with marked enthusiasm. New Yorkers paying a dollar-and-a-half scale of prices at the New York theatre and crowding the playhouse to its doors.

This city is soon to have the opportunity of seeing the magnificent Durbar pictures in Kinemacolor, as they have been secured for the "Grand" for three days, commencing Monday, April 1, with matinees on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon.

This superb series include the Royal Arrival and Visit to Bombay; Preparing for the Durbar Ceremony; The State Entry Into Delhi; Rehearsing the Calcutta Pageant; The Grand Durbar Ceremonies at Delhi Plain; The King's Camp and the Receptions by the Indian Princes; The State Garden Party; and the Delhi Polo Tournament; The Elephant Stockade and the Decorating of the Royal Elephants for the Durbar Parades; The Princes of India paying homage to the King-Emperor, wearing more than six hundred million dollars' worth of jewels and the magnificent spectacle of the King-Emperor Reviewing Fifty Thousand British and Indian Troops.

Appropriate music and effects and an explanatory lecture will be features of the presentation of the Kinemacolor Durbar Pictures.

The scale of prices during this engagement will be 25 and 50 cents.

It is a matter of economy to buy a good home when you get a good chance. Attend the Auction sale of Houses to-morrow afternoon. See advt on page 12

MR. J. M. GREENE ILL.

Was Operated on for Appendicitis Last Night.

Mr. J. M. Greene underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Nicholls Hospital last night, having been taken ill at an early hour in the morning. He was resting as well as might be expected this morning, and his friends hope for a speedy recovery. On Wednesday night he was detained at the store later than usual, owing to a phonograph concert of new records that he gave. Shortly after he had retired he was taken ill and was finally removed to the hospital.

Please call on or before April 1st at 421 George St. (Middleton's Real Estate Office) and settle accounts for Furniture bought at the late Dr. Boucher's sale, and save further trouble. 2d-76

THE WRECK

A Story of Kidnaping

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Alice Lovett had come out of the east, where she had been for a year's visit, Percie Card succumbed at once to her loveliness and charm. It was by no means his first love affair, but it was without doubt his most serious one.

The beautiful Miss Lovett, however, looked with indifference upon the young millionaire—upon his extreme slenderness, his narrow face with its close placed eyes, sleek hair and rosebud mouth, like a girl's. She disliked his overdeferential manner, the touch of his white spatulate finger tips and, above all, his effeminacy. Mentally she wore a picture of a tall, brown faced man, with strong hands, keen blue eyes and a shock of chestnut hair. There was also the memory of a brief, blissful betrothal, a quarrel and the long ache after the parting. He, the artist, had sailed for unknown seas with sketch book and pencil, while she had fled home to California as being farthest from the scene of her heart disaster.

It was at the suggestion of his social sponsor, Mrs. Arlington, that Percie Card planned a cruise on the Harlequin. It required heroic resolve to do this, but the opportunity offered by long, delightful days on the Pacific with Alice Lovett, followed by dreamful, moonlit, tropical nights, was not to be denied, and so it was that one fine September morning the long black hull of the Harlequin slipped through the Golden Gate and disappeared into the enchanted west.

"Can you do it?" asked Card for the third time.

Captain Alveiro scowled. "I must think," he said sullenly. "I must plan it all out and consider it. There is a risk."

"Bah!" scoffed Card. "If you're afraid, say so! I thought you fellows were fire eaters. When it comes right down to turning off a job—well, say, you've got a kindergarten beaten to a standstill."

"Ah, you think so?" The captain's slim brown fingers caressed an ugly looking knife produced from his tightly girted waist. "Just the same, sir, I'll take my time and think about it."

Card shifted uneasily in his seat. "All right, take your time, old sport," he said, with a sickly grin. "And as for you, Colton, keep your mouth shut—savey?" He glared savagely at the old seaman.

Colton observed a respectful silence, and Alveiro, who had sheathed his knife, turned his somber face to the young millionaire. "Give yourself no uneasiness, Mr. Card. It will happen as you wish—about tomorrow evening or very early the following day." His voice dropped to a hissing whisper. "And the payment of the money—I may be assured of that, sir?"

"Sure thing," nodded Card carelessly, "and if you make a pretty job of it I'll make it twenty-five hundred."

All that night and the next day the Harlequin labored in the teeth of a gale. At nightfall Percie Card reported that the men were exhausted, a propeller shaft was broken and that the yacht was drifting helplessly at the mercy of the storm. There was a spare shaft aboard, but under present conditions no repairs could be made. He made this announcement to the three men in the smoking room after the women had retired.

"Then there is danger?" said Mansering coolly.

Card laughed nervously. "Of course," he said abruptly. "If the wind changes Alveiro says we'll come out all right."

Alice Lovett slept little that night. She as well as the rest of the women was a good sailor, but the pitching and lurching of the yacht prevented repose of body, while her mind was painfully active in its restive unhappiness. That day she had refused Percie Card's offer of marriage for the third time, and his open resentment was unpleasant.

She sank into a doze, to be awakened by an insistent rapping at her door. Some one was speaking hoarsely. "Miss Lovett, get up and dress at once. We are in great danger! Hurry!"

There were hoarse shouts from the boat that had been lowered, and Alice found herself hurried over the side and passed from one strong arm to another until she was seated in the pitching dory. There was a little delay while the boat rose and sank on the great rollers. Another boat was being lowered.

Once she raised her voice and called, "Mrs. Arlington, are you safe?" but the words died out on the gale. She reached out a hand and felt nothing save the rough flannel shirt of a seaman. Her friends were probably following in another boat.

Before she could think further the roar of the breakers drowned even her thoughts, and for a few moments it seemed as though animation was suspended while the dory burst through a booming mountain of water. She was drenched to the skin and panting for breath when, with a suddenness that was startling, they glided down the mountain of water and descended with a rush into infinite calm, and except for the long swell left by the receding combers the boat glided evenly under the impetus of the stout armed oarsmen.

All this while not a sound had been uttered by her companions. Presently the boat expanded an oar, yielding

AUTOMATIC BLOCK SIGNALLING SYSTEM

As a further evidence of the precautions taken by the Grand Trunk Railway to ensure the safety of the lives and property entrusted to its care, it may be said that plans are now being made to instal the automatic block signalling system, now being extensively used in Great Britain and heavy traffic districts of the United States, on the lines between Toronto and Niagara Falls, which is the heaviest traffic line in Canada; and also between Hamilton and Lynden Junction, where the main lines diverge to Harrisburg and Brantford. The G.T.R. is also planning to instal this system on the 26th district track in Indiana. Incidentally, this is the first important example of automatic block signalling to be installed by a Canadian Company in Canada.

There will be a meeting of the Automobile Owners and prospective owners of Peterboro, City and County, on Friday evening, March 29th, at 8 o'clock sharp, in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, for the purpose of organizing a Peterboro Automobile Association. All interested are invited to be present.

15 rolls @ 7¢ = 1 Class B Room.
15 rolls @ a fair price - Complete Satisfaction and grateful pride

WALL PAPER can be made cheap enough to sell for five or ten cents a roll. And it can be made good enough to be worth ten dollars a roll.

Between the two extremes lies a figure which represents a fair price for papers that will give you a keen sense of artistic satisfaction when intelligently used in the decoration of your home.

Now, very cheap papers are not bad because they are cheap, but are cheap because the things that go to make a good wall paper require a little money. In other words, wall paper is not different from dress goods, table linen or millinery.

In our shop we have all kinds of papers, but we are particularly interested in having you see the incomparable assortment of artistic papers at medium prices that we have gathered together this year. And you will be interested in receiving the suggestions we are prepared to make regarding unusual and distinctive methods of using these papers in your home decoration.

If you have not received our coloured portfolio, call or send for one to-day.

It is free.

MR. FRANK WISE GETS CONTRACT

A. A. Peters—For trees, $240.00; trees and planting, $275.00. $275.00.

B. P. Welch, Gladstone avenue, representing Stone and Wellington—For trees, $162.95; trees and planting, $210.31.

Frank Wise—For trees, $168.00; for trees and planting, $208.00.

H. A. Porter, representing the Pelham Nursery Co., Toronto—For trees, $190.45.

Mr. Porter offered to plant them if the city would provide a man to assist him. It was estimated that this would mean a week's work for an assistant at about $10 or $12, and this would have to be added to Mr. Porter's figures.

To Mr. Wise.

The tenders were all considered and it was finally moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the tender from Mr. F. Wise for the supply and planting of the trees at King Edward Park be accepted.—Carried.

Ald. Duncan was commissioned to arrange for the removal of a fence crossing King Edward Park. He stated that Mr. Overend had offered to buy it and the matter was left with the chairman, the fence to go whether anything at all were received for it.

Plumbing Inspector's Report.

The report for 1911 from the Plumbing Inspector, Mr. Peter Thompson, was read. It showed that 251 permits had been issued, and 10 smoke tests made; a total of 101 tests since the machine had been received. There were 579 visits made by the Inspector during the year. As the Council had asked for a report on this matter, it was decided to report that sheets had been prepared for the Inspector to fill which would be returned monthly and would give a detailed statement of what he had done.

The West End park was given a little consideration. It is on the file to be dealt with, and Ald. Brown remarked that something should be done about it. Mayor Bradburn considered the question a little premature regarding that with the snow feet deep it is difficult to determine the value of property for park purposes.

The meeting then adjourned.

Dr. Bruce Hewson, L.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., Edinburgh, has opened an office at the corner of Charlotte & Stewart Sts., for the general practice of Medicine. Special attention given to diseases of Eye, Ear, Nose & Throat. Phone Bell 220. Hours. 9 to 10 a. m., 2 to 4 p.m. & 7 to 8 p.m. 6d-73

TRADE MARK MUST BE KEPT SACRED

Court Upholds Owners of Trademark Name Made Valuable by Advertising

The value of advertising, especially to manufacturers, was never more clearly shown than in the decision of Mr. Justice Charbonneau, in the District Court of Montreal. A few days ago, a new retail firm, with the word "Vineberg" as a part of their firm name, in inaugurating its advertising campaign, caused to be inserted in two Montreal papers large advertisements, the most prominent features of which were the words: "Progress Proclaimed". Messrs. H. Vineberg & Co., Limited, proprietors of "Progress Brand Clothing" immediately made application for an injunction restraining this retail firm from using, for publicity purposes, the word "Progress".

Messrs. H. Vineberg & Co., Limited, claimed that the use of the word "Progress," especially in connection with the name Vineberg, was calculated to mislead the public into believing that the new arrival was somehow or other connected with the older firm of the same name. As a matter of fact, such an impression was created among the customers of the petitioner, several enquiries being made asking whether the petitioner had decided to enter the retail field. As the ethics of the wholesale business precludes this possibility, except at the risk of losing all its clientele, the injury brought about by the false impression which had gained currency might have been incalculable.

Messrs. H. Vineberg & Co., Limited, have made a specialty of their "Progress Brand" Clothing, which has been so widely advertised as to be sold to the trade in practically every town as well as city in Canada.

The application for injunction was not opposed and judgment was rendered in default. His Lordship, Mr. Justice Charbonneau, making the injunction so far reaching that the respondent, as well as the newspapers figuring in the case, are forbidden to publish any advertising material for respondent in which the word "Progress" is found.

A SPLENDID COLLECTION

In the curio sanctum of Mr. George Clarke of 207 Hunter street, there are many rare and antique relics. It is not often that one is fortunate enough to make a personal inspection of an ancient Grecian coin circulated some eight hundred years B. C. This pleasure was accorded an Examiner reporter yesterday afternoon. The coin in question was a misshapen bronze nugget with a die hammered in a crude manner on its face. Numerous curios of various descriptions were also presented. Among them was an old flint-lock pistol, dug out of a bog near Dublin, Ireland, which was about three hundred and fifty years old, and an Indian rifle a hundred years old. A sword from the South Sea Islands, the blade of which was the nose of a swordfish, and the handle of human bones, was also shown, as well as an Alaskan cartridge loader, also composed of bone. Another formidable looking weapon was an arrow with a sharp head of ivory, also from Alaska. A very interesting item was a belt, which was captured from a British soldier during the first Boer war, and recaptured on the last occasion of war between England and South Africa. The East Indian Tulwar, a sharp, curved sword, is a murderous-looking weapon, and an old Japanese sword of similar design was no less imposing. To return again to firearms there was an ancient French pistol of the usual number of four chambers, operated by a revolving striker. There were also a gun and a water-horn, relics of the 1812 Rebellion, an English Dragoon sword of the George period, a German and a South African Mauser rifle, a Spanish stiletto, a Remington and a Colt revolver of the Civil War, an old flint, which survived the Battle of Waterloo, and an old American ox whip, used for a twenty-ox team, thirty-one feet long, made complete in one piece, and costing, when sold, fifty Eagles. Time and space would not allow of a detailed description of the curios they were so numerous and varied.

The Evolution Of Australia's Organized Citizen Army Corps

The secret of the success which has marked Australia's progress in matters pertaining to the fighting forces of the commonwealth, was lucidly exemplified in Major G. C. Holman's address to an attentive gathering, that was composed principally of military men, at the armouries last night. Major Holman has been identified with the Australian military organization for a number of years and his exhaustive treatment of the subject, which he so ably presented last night, distinguishes him as a man thoroughly conversant with the inner workings of the highly developed fighting unit of Australia.

"It is not many years since Australia was divided into six states," said the speaker in his opening remarks. Each state boasted of its own responsible government and worked with its own individual paraphernalia irrespective of the regulations that existed to the north, south, east and west. This resulted in a condition that was difficult to contemplate. Each state had its own railways and they adopted a certain-gauge of track which made it necessary for anybody travelling from one state to another, to change cars whenever a boundary line had to be crossed. From a military standpoint this was considered to be an unwarrant. l handicap. Then again, each state boasted of its own militia force, and these in turn were recognized by the different uniforms which they wore and the different methods they adopted. State union has served to obviate many of these undesirable conditions. Especially in military circles is this improvement more noticeable. The states forces have been consolidated and they are now working together harmoniously along these lines, which are accepted as standards in the regular British army. From this source they also obtain many ideas as to drill and various other principles for which the British standing army is noted. This is not a very difficult thing to do when you consider that Australia's militia forces are recruited from a race of people, who are direct descendants of English, Irish and Scotch. There is no foreign element to cope with.

How System is Worked Out.

The organization of the country's militia forces is conducted systematically and along lines that have not been duplicated by any other nation in the world. They are directly responsible for the machine-like precision with which the mobilization of the forces can be accomplished when, or should occasion demand.

Each state is divided off into districts and these are again sub-divided into smaller districts, or what is commonly known as training areas. There are two hundred and sixteen training areas altogether. The forces located in these areas are listed as the junior cadet, the senior cadet and the adult force, the latter being known as the citizen army. The officers commanding these forces are drawn from the Imperial army and in addition to being able to perform their civil duties, they are compelled to devote a prescribed number of days to militia duty each year. A medical officer whose duty it is to examine incoming recruits and perform garrison duty that is usually associated with the work of an army practitioner, is also attached to each district. The radius of territory which he usually covers extends about thirty miles. The most important man of the lot is the Staff Sergeant Major. He is invariably picked for the position by reason of the vigorous course of training which he undergoes prior to his appointment.

Military Service is Obligatory.

Military service in Australia is not looked upon as compulsory, but more as a universal obligation. When a boy reaches the age of twelve he is registered, a function which is usually performed by the parent or guardian. The procedure is followed by a medical examination, after which he is registered as a junior cadet. This compels him to undergo a course of drill, which is carried out daily, usually by the master of the school which he attends. At the age of 14 the boy is supplied with a uniform and other equipment, including a rifle. He then branches out into the senior cadets. A systematic course of military training, including musketry practice then follows. At the age of 16 he takes another step and enters the adult forces, where his knowledge in matters pertaining to military life are further augmented by added obligations. These take the form of drills or parades, sixteen of which he is compelled to take part in during the year. These are proportioned at the rate of three a month and are usually of six hours' duration.

This system of military training has a tendency to keep the boy off the street and develops a type of manhood that cannot be equalled. The officers of the district battalions entertain no anxiety as to where they will secure additional men to keep their battalions up to full strength. They come too fast. Where two battalions existed last year, there will be three, this year and so on. The boys along and feed the militia auto cally. When the cadet has rea the adult army stage he is reli of further responsibilities as fa a cadet service is concerned. Sergeant Major of the district ta him in hand and additional inform tion is imparted to him with a vi to perfecting his military knowled The last niche in his military care is when he passes into the hands the company leader, who retain charge of him until he has reache the age of 26.

This system of militia training ob tains an organized distribution and the efficient training of a citizen army is acquired.

Colds Most Fatal At This Season

This is the time of year when colds seem to turn into pneumonia or quick consumption and to prove more generally fatal than at any other season.

With many people one cold follows another during the winter months until finally the human body becomes so run down that it can no longer resist the attack of the germs which cause lung trouble.

The best rule is to never allow a cold to get farther than the throat, and this you can do by the prompt use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Do not wait for chest colds and bronchitis to develop. Keep this well-known medicine at hand for use in case of emergency.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine loosens a cough, aids expectoration, and soothes and heals the irritated and inflamed membranes.

BIRTH

TREMAIN. — In Peterborough, on March 27th, 1912, to Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tremain, 300 Smith street, a daughter.

When The Food Ferments

Chronic dyspepsia is essentially a disease of the intestines rather than of the stomach. The trouble is caused by the food passing too slowly along the alimentary canal and fermenting instead of being digested.

It will be found that the liver is sluggish and the bowels constipated. The fermenting food gives rise to gas, which crowds the lungs and heart, gives rise to belching wind and to smothering sensations. The stomach gets sour, the food repeats and leaves sour taste in the mouth; you feel out of sorts and are unfit for work or pleasure.

By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can get rid of this congested condition of the digestive organs in quick time. The liver is awakened at once, the bowels are regulated and the system is thoroughly rid of the poisonous waste matter which has been causing so much trouble.

OUR HIDDEN WEALTH

The Hudson Bay Project Will Open up Northern Areas

The London Chronicle says: "A project that will certainly have far-reaching influence upon the market and the food supply of the United Kingdom will be launched in Canada. With it may arise a new era in the development of that vast Dominion. The great Wheat-bearing provinces of Athabasca, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Assiniboia are to be brought 2000 miles nearer to England by waterway, and a saving of approximately $5 per ton is promised upon the freightage between these Provinces and the United Kingdom. Mackenzie and Keewatin, vast territories possessing untold mineral wealth, will reveal to prospectors the secrets hitherto confined to Indians, and will become the paradise of fortune hunters. This project is as daring as it is extensive, has its foundation in the establishment of a gigantic harbor at Fort Churchill, on the western side of Hudson Bay. This port is to be the terminal point of a new railway intended to penetrate the Western Canadian Provinces. By the use of the port about 3000 miles of rail transit will be saved in respect of produce travelling eastwards towards Europe. The only publicity given so far to this momentous scheme is the announcement recently of the award to Messrs. Pethick Brothers, of Plymouth and London, of a contract amounting to one and a-half millions sterling for the construction of docks, granaries, and station buildings. The award is made by the Hudson Bay and Pacific Railway Development Company, which holds a concession from the Dominion Government. A partner in the above-named firm when interviewed, stated that the announcement of the award had been followed by innumerable applications for posts upon the constructional work. 'We have been inundated by appeals from all classes of people, including insurance officials, office boys, and divers. The telephone bell has been ringing continuously, and there has been a procession to our doorstep. Our contract is for specific docks, granaries and warehouses. The complete scheme includes, we understand, a large harbor approximately 3000 ft by 300 ft., but this is not of immediate importance. The Hudson Bay and Pacific Railway Development Company are about to build a line between Fort Churchill and Prince Albert, thereby penetrating the heart of Saskatchewan. It is understood that other developments will follow."

How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 98% of the people need a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head. If the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, lighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and prevent baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store —The Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

RARE INDIAN ART

Rock Crystal Toilet Tray Presented to Museum by Her Majesty

Queen Mary presented to the Indian section of the Victoria and Albert Museum a series of examples of Mogul, Rajput, and Tibetan industrial art of considerable beauty and interest. The most important among them is the toilet tray of a Mogul Princess of rock crystal, exquisitely carved and drilled with repetitions of a flowering plant motive; the sunk decoration was originally jewelled in the approved Moghul manner, that is to say, the hollows were filled in with solid gold set with rubies and emeralds. This tray was made in Delhi during the sixteenth or seventeenth century, and was evidently the work of one of the celebrated jewellers attached either to the Court of Akbar the Great, or that of one of his immediate successors. A depression in the centre marks the place where the Begam's toilet-box also of jewelled crystal, would have rested.

author of the new opera "Roma," whose insistence that the chorus men in his production be smooth-shaven, has increased the agitation against the moustache in France.

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It makes the Hair Beautiful

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

McDermid and Jury guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favourite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c. at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by McDermid and Jury. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

Also sold at Payne's Drug Store.

SUICIDE CLUB

Robert Louis Stevenson's Story Acted in Real Life in St. Petersburg

Grim and melodramatic details of an extraordinary suicide club, known as the "Friends of Death," are contained in a letter from St. Petersburg to London. The sender describes one of the meetings of the weird society which is said to have a large membership in St. Petersburg.

The meeting was held at night in a house in the heart of the city, where members arrived singly by a back entrance and included men and women both old and young. The large meeting room was thickly carpeted, and heavy curtains masked the windows. Over the door was the inscription, "All hope abandon ye who enter here." On the door itself two crossed scythes were shown on a burning red background. The president and members sat at a long table covered with a black cloth, bearing an urn in which the suicidal lots were cast. Three dull knocks from a hammer covered with black cloth intimated that the meeting was opened.

The president began by expressing sympathy with a member of the league—a lady—who had recently attempted suicide, but without a fatal result. He added his fervent hope that she would meet the death she desired. Discussion then turned on the question of devising original methods of suicides. The most favorably received was that a considerable number of the members should commit suicide at one time, and thereby attract new recruits to the league. It was proposed that a dinner should be arranged at one of the fashionable restaurants and that the diners should swallow cyanide of potassium out of champagne glasses.

CASCARETS INSURE INSIDE CLEANLINESS

The Millions of Cascaret Users Never Have Headache, Constipation, Biliousness or Sick Stomach

It is more necessary that you keep your Bowels, Liver and Stomach clean, pure and fresh than it is to keep the sewers and drainage of a large city free from obstruction.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

No odds how badly and upset you feel, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

At Dead Man's Bay near Kingston, Kenneth McMahon landed a twelve pound pike on the troll. This is the largest fish caught in the Bay for several years.

NEGLECT

To cleanse the system of undigested food, foul gases, excess bile in the liver and waste matter in the bowels will impair your health. The best system regulator is FIG PILLS. At all dealers, 25 and 50 cents or The Fig Pill Co., St. Thomas, Ont. Sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co. Ltd.

INVADED BY WOLVES

Hordes From Siberia Said to be Entering Saskatchewan

Here is what the London Chronicle says: "The invasion of Canada has at last come to pass; not, however from the south, but from the north, and the attacking force is an army of wolves. This grim migration is the trappers' tale, and Saskatchewan is threatened with an invasion of a particularly menacing nature. Several years ago a terribly cold winter drove many thousands of the great grey wolves of the Siberian steppes across the frozen sea into the warmer clime of northern Canada. Through the Canadian pine forests of the uninhabited north they have steadily come east, until the plain opened out before them which terminates to the south in the rich prize wheat belt of the Saskatchewan valley. According to Mr. Wood, a Saskatchewan delegate who is in London organising a party of emigrants, hunger is driving these terrible animals steadily toward the settlers. Terrible they are, indeed, for while the lighter Canadian brown timber wolf only attacks a man on provocation, and warns with a saving yelp before he leaps, his Siberian kinsman steals on his victim without a sound, and is an infinitely fiercer and grimmer antagonist. The Saskatchewan Government thinks enough of the danger to have set prices of $100 and over on the heads of these unwelcome visitors, and wolf hunts are being organised in many places to secure the bounties."

EMIGRATION TO CANADA

Americans Who Find Their Way to the Canadian North West

Champ Clark who wishes to stop the emigration of Americans to the Canadian North West said: "A man in my district sold his farm for $26,000 and his stock and other valuable assets ran the sum up to about $40,500. He moved to Manitoba, and entered or purchased 10,000 acres of that land up there. He gave to each of his eight children one thousand acres, keeping two thousand acres for himself. That is the kind of American citizens who are leaving this country and going to the British North-West. I am in favor of fixing it so that no American citizen will want to depart from the United States to secure a home in a foreign land."

RECORD OF FINGER PRINTS

First for Criminal Purposes Received at Ottawa From Dawson

The first finger prints of any criminal from Dawson were received at the office of the Criminal Identification Bureau, Ottawa. There were nine of these finger prints, photographs and records of criminals in all, and these were, as stated, the first from Dawson, although others have been received from different of the Mounted Police Stations in the West. There are now over 6,100 finger prints at the bureau, the increase for some time having been at an average rate of 150 a week.

When you pay a Company to assume your risk you want to be sure that the Company is financially able to take care of it. Do not be satisfied with a statement that shows enough assets to pay any loss you would individually sustain. If a conflagration occurs at the time your own fire comes along and the Company is heavily involved you may find, as thousands of others have found before you, that your policy is of little value. Make yourself secure by taking a policy of the Manitoba Assurance Company which is conflagration proof.—Agent, Davis Thompson, Co., Ltd.

Dover's New Marine Station.

At a cost of half a million sterling a new marine railway station is to be erected at Dover on eleven acres of reclaimed land near the Admiralty Pier. Work is already in full swing. About 1,900 piles will be driven into the old sea bed, their heads connected with concrete slabs and girders, which will be the foundation of the new building.

"Stage Play" in Church Hall

Canon Edwin C. Dawson, Ramsay Gardens, Edinburgh, was charged with having produced a stage play, "Discontented Susie," at the hall of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Lutton place, Edinburgh, without a license. The respondent said the play was in reality a "kinderspell, and was part of an organisation of a large children's club which existed for the wellbeing of children in the south side. The magistrate dismissed the respondent with an admonition.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

The Progress of the Movement Throughout the World

Much is heard in Canada of "Votes for Women." It is interesting therefore to note the progress of this suffragette movement in other parts of the world. John Stuart Mill was the first champion of women's suffrage in the House of Commons. This was a long ago as 1867, when the Mrs. Pank hurst of to-day had scarcely learned the art of dressing a doll. Nine years later, in 1876, the bantling was crushed under the weight of an adverse majority of eighty-seven; and a good many years were to pass before legislators would listen to such a proposal. In 1897 the tide had turned; a Bill conferring the suffrage came triumphantly through the second reading in the House of Commons with a majority of seventy-one; two years later, the majority had grown to 114; and last year, when the Conciliation Bill was put to the test of a second reading, 225 M.P.'s marched into the "Aye" lobby, while only a paltry eighty-eight said "No" to it.

The first woman registered her vote in New Zealand in 1893; the following year, 1894, South Australia took up the running; and West Australia followed in 1899.

In 1901 the women of New South Wales won the trophy; and in the same year the supreme prize of the Antipodes, the vote for the Federal Parliament, was awarded to women. Tasmania still withheld the boon; but she, too, succumbed to the inevitable in the autumn of 1903, and Queensland has since followed suit.

The United States are following in the wake of Australia. In more than half of them woman now enjoys a partial suffrage; while in four—Colorado, Utah, Idaho, and Wyoming—she has precisely the same franchise as man.

In the Isle of Man, woman has enjoyed the political franchise for more than thirty years; and in other islands as far apart as Jersey and Iceland she is man's political equal.

In Russia, woman has outstripped her sister in Britain. As long ago as 1864 the women of Finland began their struggle for the franchise, with the Baroness Gripenberg for champion; and so doggedly have they waged their fight that to-day, not only are they registering their votes for the Diet, but they are eligible themselves for seats in the House.

HUNTING THE SWORD FISH

Unless one can afford the time and expense of a whaling ship and a voyage into the Arctic, there is no sea-hunting that excels sword fishing off New London, Conn. Really you do not fish for the sword fish—you hunt him. When you find him, you fight him to a finish—his finish or yours. The season is the two adjoining weeks of June and July. In the dawn of morning you sail, or steam, or motor, into the open sea. By nine o'clock you are anchored in the Sword-belt with two men aloft, in the look-out. They sight a fin, signal and the boat speeds ahead. If the fish is at rest on the surface, it is easy to approach him. He treats the boat with contempt. He dislikes meeting a boat head-on, and he resents being followed, but if you get him crossing under your bow, the man in the "pulpit," away forward, usually drives a harpoon into him, and then the fight begins. There are 400 feet of cable attached to the iron, and a barrel at the other end. No, you do not make him fast to your boat. Maddened by the sting of the steel, he heads for the open sea. When in deep water, he goes down, taking the barrel with him. While this one is bobbing the barrel, you may spear another. In fact, there have been as many as four barrels afloat from the same boat at one time. When a barrel becomes comparatively quiet, two men put off in a small boat to fetch the fish. Often, at sight of the small boat, the fish revives and makes a last desperate fight for his life. One big fellow in these waters drove his sword through the boat and through the man who was handling it, killing him instantly. Usually the fighting boats are armored, having a thin piece of sheet iron along the water line. The average length of the sword fish killed there is 12 feet; the average time taken to kill one is three hours, and they are worth in the fish markets about fifty dollars each. A 50-foot boat with 15 ft. to 18 ft. beam is the usual thing for sword-fishing, and after a few cruises, following and fighting sword fish, the ordinary sports of the sea become tame.

Shiloh's Cure

BABY TERRIBLY SCALDED

Relieved by Zam-Buk

Doctor Agreed Zam-Buk Was "Best Possible Treatment."

Mrs. Albert Sawyer, of Midland (Ont.), says: "While living in Brantford last winter my little son spilled a vessel of boiling water over his neck. He was terribly scalded, and we immediately called in a doctor. The treatment did not seem to give the child ease or heal the terrible scalds, so after a week's trial we got some Zam-Buk and applied it. It gave the child ease almost immediately, and after a few days' use the scalds seemed to be getting along finely.

"To make quite sure that all was right, however, we called in a second doctor. He said everything was going along splendidly, the scalds were healing and the little one would soon be quite recovered. Then we told him Zam-Buk was what we were using, and he said we could use nothing better. Zam-Buk worked a complete cure."

Mrs. S. Smith and Mrs. J. H. Teakle, of 73 Brock street, Brantford, who knew of the above accident, and what followed, write: "We certify that these facts are true in every detail."

Mothers should know that for burns, cuts, scalds, bruises, eczema, piles, and all skin diseases, there is nothing to equal Zam-Buk. That was the opinion of the doctor connected with the above case, and is the opinion of hundreds of other doctors the world over. Zam-Buk is obtainable from all druggists and stores 50c box or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

BEETHOVEN'S LOCK OF HAIR

The Great Composer Took Delight in Practical Jokes

Beethoven took a keen delight in practical joking. The wife of a pianoforte player and composer in Vienna had such an ardent desire to possess a lock of Beethoven's hair, that she induced her husband to ask a mutual friend to endeavor to get the great composer to gratify her wish. The friend proved too fond of a practical joke to be a loyal messenger. He persuaded Beethoven to send her a lock of coarse grey hair resembling his own, but cut from another head—a billy-goat's! The lady, thinking she had the genuine article, was as proud as a peacock; but her joy was short-lived, for another friend, a party to the trick which had been practised, informed her of the deception. The husband of the deluded and disappointed lady wrote an indignant letter to Beethoven, upbraiding him; and so fairly was the composer ashamed for the discourtesy and unkindness of the jest in which he had joined, that he wrote a letter of apology to the aggrieved lady, enclosing a real lock of his hair, and thenceforth refused the visits of the instigator of such unpolished practical joking.

Well-Preserved Old People.

Mr. Jackson, an inmate of the Tooting Home for the Aged and Infirm, has just celebrated his 103rd birthday. Though her age is 101, Miss Lomas, the local hon. secretary, attended a meeting of the Church of England Zenana Mission at Ilfracombe.

MAN LOST AMBITION

It seemed strange to so active and energetic a young man as Arthur H. Scott of Brooklyn that he did not attack his work with the usual enthusiasm last spring.

He knew it was not "spring fever" for his health failed and, to use his own words in a recent letter, "I could not sleep, had no energy or ambition and could not do my work properly.

"I must say that Vinol has done me wonderful good for I feel strong and ambitious again, just like I used to before my health failed. I rest well at night, have a good appetite and no more nervousness, all because I took your excellent tonic, Vinol."

One reason Mr. Scott was willing to try Vinol was because he knew he could get his money back if Vinol did not benefit him. This delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil, positively has no equal as a spring medicine, to enrich the blood and make weak, worn-out men, women and children, rugged, rosy and strong. We guarantee it to do this, and give back your money if it does not.

AN OWL INTRUDER

While a Grand Trunk train from Guelph to Toronto was running between Brampton and Georgetown the other night, an owl flew through one of the open windows, startling the passengers and the colored porter who however succeeded in capturing the intruder. It is thought that the bird was confused by the sudden flare of lights from the passing train but the occurrence is nevertheless remarkable as the train was running at the speed of 40 miles an hour at the time.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

"I WILL HAVE A BALL CLUB UP IN THE RACE, FIGHTING ALL THE TIME"

—MANAGER TEMPLIN

Peterborough Manager Has Completed a Successful Trip, Landing Two More Twirlers and an Outfielder.

SQUAD NEARLY COMPLETED

Manager Templin of the Peterborough Ball Club, writes Secretary Davidson that he has just returned from a trip through the New England state and also to Philadelphia. As a result of his jaunt the roster of the Peterborough club has been augmented by two promising pitchers, Elmer D. Baver, formerly of the Jacksonvill Fla. club, and Percy Davis of Philadelphia, and a fast infielder, Joseph Ulmer also of Philadelphia. In addition, the manager sends along the contract of R. A. Connolly, first baseman and outfielder. He now has two catchers, four pitchers, six infielders and two outfielders under contract and his squad is practically complete with the addition of two or three men with whom he has been dickering. He also expects to pick up another player or two before the training season opens. All the members of the Peterborough roster have been notified to get into shape at once as they will be in good condition when they arrive here at the end of next month. Manager Templin himself is taking daily runs and will soon be in shape. He says: "I will have a ball club up in the race, fighting all the time, and I am only too anxious for the time for the bell to ring to start in." Here is some information about:

R. A. Connolly, first baseman and outfielder. If necessary he can also catch. He is 23 years old, 5 ft. 10 3-4 in. tall and weighs 170 lbs. in uniform. He is a right hand batter and thrower. In 1910 he was with Clarksburgh in the West Virginia League until that league disbanded, and last season with Bluffton, Ind., of the Indiana League, which also blew up. He finished the season playing around New York and New Jersey with fast professional clubs. Connolly is highly recommended by Scout Dick Coogan, coach of the Bucknell College team.

Joseph Ulmer, infielder, is very fast. He hit over the .300 mark on the fast Manayienk team, which beat everything in and around Philadelphia. Ulmer is 22 years of age and stockily built. He can be used at third or short has a great whip and is a good batter. The securin got this boy prepares Manager Templin for any break that may take place in his infield. Speaking of Ulmer, he says: "The boy is a comer and I expect a lot out of him."

Pitcher Percy Davis is 22 years old, 5 ft. 7 in. tall and weighs 150 pounds. He pitched for the Manayienk club last season, winning 21 out of games. Davis, who is a spit-ball artist, has good curves and fine control and above all works with his head as well as his arm. He was the best semi-pro. pitcher the city of Philadelphia had last season.

Manager Templin says the Sharon and McKeesport teams of the Ohio and Pennsylvania League were hot-foot after both Davis and Ulmer, but he managed to land them right under the noses of the class B clubs.

Pitcher Elmer D. Baver is a right handed twirler, 23 years of age and 5 ft. 8 in. in height. He was with Jacksonville, Fla., in the spring and finished the season with Schuylkill Haven, one of the fast teams in the coal regions. Baver is a graduate of the Kutztown State Noraml school and Manager Templin saw him in action for the team of that institution. He has brains, good curves and speed and in addition can hit some.

So far the club roster consists of Catchers Trout and Brode; Infielders Rothenberger, Connolly, Templin, Ulmer, Tully and Hartman; Pitchers Bartlett, Baver, Scull and Davis; Outfielders Schwartz, Beard.

A PLEASANT EVENING.

The members of Charlotte Street Methodist Church Choir paid a visit last evening to their old choir leader, Mr. J. H. Callender, of Morrow St., and passed a pleasant social evening in music and singing.

GETTING READY FOR SEASON C. G. E. CHAMPS. ORGANIZE

Enthusiastic Meeting Was Held on Wednesday Night---Midland League Winners Have Plenty of Material for the Coming Campaign.

The annual general meeting of the C.G.E. Football Club was held on Wednesday night at the Y.M.C.A., and was attended by a good number of club members and supporters. Secretary Patterson reported a small balance on the season's working which, having regard to the heavy expenses of the Ontario finals, was considered highly satisfactory.

Last season was the most successful in the short, but brilliant career of the local club, as they succeeded in winning for the second successive year, both the Midland League ('Stratton Cup') and the Peterboro' county championship, ('R. R. Hall Cup') and also reached the Ontario senior finals. Although beaten out of the highest honours in the latter, the locals by no means lost their reputation for ability to play fast, clean and clever football. The loss of several prominent players at this time undoubtedly minimised their chances of success.

Prospects for the coming year are of roseate hue, and players and officials alike mean to spare no effort to outshine even the splendid performances of last year. Most of the old brigade are again available, and the cream of the local talent has been alread signed up.

The boys will again disport themselves on the Exhibition Park ground where some little alterations are contemplated to improve it from a playing point of view. The following were elected:

Honorary President—Mr. R. Anson.

President—Mr. A. Lingard.

First Vice-President—Mr. Geo. B Wilson.

Second Vice-President—Mr. P. D Fitzgerald.

Secretary-Treasurer—W .Patterson.

Captain and Team Manager—Arthu Pagett.

Management Committee—Messrs. T Madeley (chairman), J. Ridyard, W Boycott, A. Pagett and W. Patterson

A series of practice games will be played as soon as outdoor conditions permit, of which notice will appea later. In the meantime local enthusiasts who aspire to become star in the football firmament can get on their shooting boots and practise in their back lots.

MORE GRAND-STAND ACCOMMODATION AT THE PARK

Peterborough Ball Club and Riverside Park Owners Will Co-operate in Erecting More Seating Accommodation and Putting the Park in Shape for Season---More Stock Will Be Sold.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club Limited last night, final arrangements were made for the use of Riverside Park for the season. Not only were satisfactory arrangements made for the use of the park this summer, but the club has also been given the option of using the park in 1913 and 1914 on the same terms as this year.

The question of more grandstand accommodation was discussed and it was decided to build more stands which will be absolutely necessary if the game draws as it is expected to this season. While the details have not been definitely decided upon, it is altogether likely that a stand will be erected at the north-west corner of the grounds, where the present clubhouse is situated. This will place the grand-stand patrons in their favourite place behind the home plate. The ball club and park owners will co-operate in bearing the expense of providing more accommodation.

The project will, of course, add considerably to the initial expense of the club, but the stand will pay for itself in a short time. Grand stand accommodation is necessary, especially as the home club retains all the extra admission into the stand, only splitting on the general admission charges with the visiting club.

In view of the decision to erect a stand the club has decided to place on the market another small block of stock and this will please the people who were disappointed in not getting some of the first issue. There were a number of fans who wanted stock, but found it was all gone. They will now have their chance and the shares will undoubtedly be speedily picked up.

NEWS FROM THE LEAGUE CIRCUIT

HAMILTON, MARCH 29.—Jo Jo Keenan, last year manager of the London baseball team in the Canadian league, is a free agent. Joe was given his release yesterday by the London directors, thus ending all speculation as to what course would be followed with the peppery little fellow, who lost out in London simply because he sided in with the losing party in the recent franchise controversy. While yesterday's action was not unexpected, it is the opinion of many of the fans that a mistake was made, for Keenan deserved consideration for the manner in which he brought his team from last place into second place in the League race, climbing into second position in the last week of the race after the Cockneys had trailed the other five teams for the first month of the season. Keenan, while the oldest player in the league, is still one of the best, and it is a safe bet that he will not be allowed to get out of the league; in fact, he has already signified his intention of signing a contract with one of the clubs, so that he will still be on the job this year, affording amusement to the many fans with whom he is very popular.

It will be particularly pleasing news that Chaucer Elliott, manager of the St. Thomas team, and all-round sportsman, is fighting a winning battle down in New York where he is being treated by America's leading specialist on the complaint from which the popular Chaucer is suffering. Chaucer has been up against a pretty stiff proposition for several weeks now, and went to New York as the last resort. Failure to fight his malady, which is a very malignant one, meant loss of a leg, and possibly of his life, but the old coach set at it just the same way as he would if it was the ninth inning, and his team was several runs behind. This has helped considerably, and has had its effect, as is shown in a letter received yesterday, in which he says that the worst appears to be over, and he expects to soon round into shape again.

"I am here," he says, "in a private hospital under the care of the greatest cancer doctor in America—the man who discovered the serum. People afflicted with the same trouble are here from all over America, and hundreds of worse cases than mine have been cured.

"They are doing me good here, and I think I have a chance for my life, and don't you think this old boy is not going to fight good and hard for that one chance."

HAMILTON, MARCH 29—It is expected that the Canadian league schedule will be ready for publication early next week. It will be sent to the various clubs for approval this week and after the magnates have had a chance to find fault will be given out to the public. The schedule has proven a difficult one to handle, owing to the peculiar location of the various towns, the Eastern division, Peterborough and Ottawa, forming a loop that is at the best awkward to handle. However, this has been made up for by reason of the fact that a eight-club circuit always allows for a better working arrangement than is possible with six clubs and there is no doubt but that the various clubs will be well pleased.

The Berlin Club will not have such a soft time of it this year as last. They will be on the road continually until June 6, when they will open at home. The Berli grounds will not be ready until that date, and Pop Williams has no other recourse. He expects, however, that when he does get back on the home lot he will have the best ball park in the circuit behind his team, and in the meantime the Berlin fans are showing more interest than ever in their club.

* * *

Bill Kenney, last year's Hamilton firstbaseman, has been given his unconditional release. Kenney did not measure up to the required standard ad this, combined with an inflated idea of his own ability, has resulted in his being given a chance to seek a job in new pastures.

MORE NAMES FOR THE BALL CLUB

More ball team nicknames:

Nickname Editor,—I notice a number of fans propose the names Electrics or Electricians for the Peterborough Ball Club. Why not call the team "Elektrons," which is Greek for Electrics?

"C. S."

Nickname Editor,—I understand the Ball Club will wear white caps. This suggest "White Caps" to me as a suitable name for the team. Many clubs are named from some detail of their uniforms, i.e., the Chicago White Sox, the Boston Red Sox, the Berlin Green Sox, the St. Louis Browns, the St. Louis Cardinals, etc.

W. H. D.

Nickname Editor,—I would suggest the name of "Bees," as an appropriate title for Peterborough's aggregation, the city being on the Otonabee, and many simple Limericks could be quickly made up as a slogan for fans or rooters.

Aught on a bee I can't see,
When they're busy guess you'll flee;
Peterborough must have fame,
Watch them closely in the game,
That's the swarm with big blue "P"
Peterborough's Bee Bee. See.

M. Noir.

EDUCATE THE PUBLIC

For the W.C.T.U.:

Dear Sisters,—It has been the painful experience of the writer to see little boys smoking cigarettes on their way home from Sunday school. Oh, how we should endeavour to get every mother of a boy and girl to join our W.C.T.U., because while putting forth every effort to do away with the open bar and treating system is praiseworthy, yet it is my candid opinion that even these will not accomplish the good they would until the public are educated from their youth up, the injurious effects of alcohol and tobacco on the system. I link tobacco with the liquor, for I think it a shame to see children of ten to twelve years of age going along our streets smoking cigarettes. It is the writer's opinion that there should be a text book in our Public school, teaching in no uncertain terms the injury alcohol and tobacco is to the young.

When a generation grows up knowing full well the evil of these two, then and not till then, will prohibition be possible.

Yours For the Boy.

Boat Not Wholly to Blame.

Ottawa, March 30.—New light is thrown on the circumstances leading up to the disastrous wreck on the Canadian Pacific Railway near Hull on March 8 by the announcement that the company has dismissed from its service the despatcher who transmitted the order to Harvey Boal, the Hull operator, to hold the passenger train that was subsequently wrecked.

Boal's failure to hold the train, as ordered, caused the wreck, but it will come as a source of some comfort to his friends to learn that the order was not sent in the regular manner.

Highland Regiment for Galt.

Galt, March 30.—News comes from Ottawa to Col. A. J. Oliver, commanding the 29th Battalion, that the Militia Department will spend $15,000 on the Galt armory, and agrees to the formation of a city regiment of Highlanders.

Are Beaver Skins Contraband?

North Bay, March 30.—The trunk full of beaver skins seized on the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway was forwarded to its destination at Mattawa,. accompanied by Game Warden Parks and Provincial Constable Clayman, who watched the baggage from at Mattawa and arrested a man who asked that the trunk be shipped to Pembroke. The man took an affidavit that the skins were secured in Quebec, and were being taken through Ontario, but could produce no permit for so doing.

Taxes Went Up In Smoke.

Belleville, March 30.—The residence of Mr. Thomas McMunn, Mayo Township, was with all its contents, destroyed by fire. Mr. Munn was tax collector for the Township of Mayo in this county, and $200 which he had collected went up in smoke. There was no insurance on house or contents.

A. B. MORINE ARRAIGNED

TELLS OF THE REID DEALS

Ottawa, March 30.—Parliament was given striking and startling opportunity yesterday to pass judgment upon another member of the "Hunt-for-scandals" Commission, which the maker of the Halifax platform hastened to appoint when the Canadian people gave him their confidence last autumn. Parliament heard from Mr. F. B. Carvell in a vigorous address something of the career of Chairman Morine of the Public Service Commission. So serious were the charges of Mr. Carvell and so startling was the character of the evidence he adduced that the Government benches remained dumb and silent at the conclusion. Finally Premier Borden arose and complained that sufficient notice had not been given him of the charges.

The members of the commission, which involved almost the liberties of many public servants, said Mr. Carvell, should be above reproach. They were not only judges, but prosecuting attorneys as well.

He said that Mr. Morine, when he went to Newfoundland, became connected with The St. John's Mercury, which raised a violent creed cry, at first against the Roman Catholics. Then about 1890 he turned and supported them.

"The alacrity with which this man was able to get from one side to the other was surprising," said Mr. Carvell.

But this, he continued, was not the point he wished to emphasize. In 1898, he said, when Mr. Morine was Finance Minister and Minister of Customs for Newfoundland, he made an agreement with R. B. Reid, a prominent railway contractor, by which the colony of Newfoundland gave away to Reid almost all the colony possessed, in order to secure the operation of railroads.

The colony under Mr. Morine spent $13,000,000 on this railroad, said Mr. Carvell, handed it over with all its branches to Reid for fifty years, with the condition that it should become Reid's property on his paying $1,000,000. Reid was also given 5,000 acres of land a mile, which with the other concessions he had got would take up almost all the available land in the colony. He was given all the coal with the understanding that there should be an import duty of $1 a ton.

He was also given a monopoly of steamship lines on the coast, with a subsidy of $100,000. He was given control of the docks at St. John's for $325,000, a monopoly of telegraph lines and certain other franchises totalling $13,000,0000 to $15,000,000.

Then Mr. Morine had fought the election of 1897, with the deal with Reid as his principal plank.

Continuing, Mr. Carvell read an extract from the reply of Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, to the governor of Newfoundland, dated March 23, 1898, refusing to ratify the agreement, in which he referred to the "extraordinary powers" handed over to Reid. Meetings of protest were also held at St. John's against the agreement.

On Mr. Morine admitting in 1898 that while he was a member of the executive council of Newfoundland, he was the legal adviser of Reid, the governor of the colony, Mr. Carvell declared, dismissed him from office, stating in a letter that he should "not give him the choice which master he would serve for the future."

"It was impossible to conceive," commented Mr. Carvell, "that any man who had been so disgraced would have the hardihood to hold his head up and seek public office in this country."

Then a general election was held and Morine had the hardihood to join himself to Reid in an attempt to get back into office, but though he had been elected himself, only three of his followers were.

"Having betrayed the colony for the benefit of his employer, he then attempted," said Mr. Carvell, "to betray his employer for the benefit of himself."

Morine and Reid, he said, had quarrelled over The St. John Mercury, on which Morine held a mortgage of $35,000.

The law suit with Reid over The Mercury, continued Mr. Carvell, had resulted in a supplementary agreement which had driven Morine out of Newfoundland. He was allowed his pension, bribe, or whatever it could be called of $10,000 a year on condition that he wouldn't come back.

"For $10,000 a year," vehemently declared Mr. Carvell, "he became an exile from the colony of Newfoundland, and now he comes to this country, forces himself into our politics, and becomes the head of the most important commission this Government has created since it came into power."

He charged that Premier Borden knew all about Mr. Morine's record; that he was made acquainted with it when Mr. Morine was a Conservative candidate in Nova Scotia in 1908.

Mr. Carvell topped his charges against Mr. Morine by reading a letter of Rt. Rev. F. Howley, Bishop of Newfoundland, to Mr. Winton of Toronto, which contained some choice morsels of denunciation. Mr Morine was, according to the bishop, "the greatest scoundrel that ever entered the narrows—an unmitigated rascal." Reid had "found him out embezzling from him," held it over him as a threat and driven him from the colony.

"I'd like to know," said Mr. Carvell in conclusion, "what credence will the people of Canada place on the evidence of a court presided over by a man of the reputation described in the document I have read. I want to know how my hon. friend can square this appointment with the professions he made in his Halifax platform of 1907. Does he not think that the time has now come when he should call a halt? If he is going to investigate the public service of this country he should do it by men who, as he said in his platform, are above reproach, men in whom the people will have confidence, men in whose judgment the people will have confidence."

Premier Borden in a dignified reply stated that the details of the allegations of Mr. Carvell were absolutely new to him, and were of an exceedingly grave character. "I stand exactly with regard to appointments to public office," said the Premier, "where I stood when I made the statement my hon. friend has referred to (the Halifax platform of 1907). I shall place the charges which my hon. friend has made before Mr. Morine and give him an opportunity of making an answer to them. When Mr. Morine's answer has been made to these charges, I will announce to this House of Commons and to this country what action the Government purposes to take in regard thereto."

TALK NO. 4
The Eye Like a Camera
The eye is constructed so wonderfully and ingeniously that the handicraft of man has not as yet been able to construct as delicate an instrument. It is like a camera—the lens to focus, the lid as a shutter, the iris or colour as the diaphragm, and the thick coatings of the eye-ball as the dark room, the nerve as the sensitive plate, and strange as it may seem, the image is bottom side up exactly as the image in the camera. Now so delicate and sensitive an instrument as the eye should have good care. Let us explain more fully to you how to care for the eyes.

Crothers and Grand Trunk.

Ottawa, March 30.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, gave what seemed an ultimatum to the Grand Trunk Railway last night. He made a careful statement of his position.

He suggested, though, that the powers of the Railway Commision should be broadened so that they could arbitrate in cases of disputes between employers and employes. There were 120,000 men in the employ of Canadian railways and these men should not be dismissed afte. years of service at the whim of officials.

Mr. Crothers went into the history of the dispute with the Grand Trunk Railway and showed how in his opinion the company has failed to live up to the agreement it had signed, both in regard to reinstating its men and to the schedule of wages. In closing he declared that there was no legislative machinery by which the G.T. ... could be compelled to observe the agreement entered into with them by another party and then repudiated by them. It seemed to him the time was not far distant when Parliament would say that any quasi-public institution such as a railway, must be compelled to treat its employes decently.

Young Doctor Died From Apoplexy.

Galt, March 30.—No inquest will be held on the death of Dr. E. Pearson James, whose lifeless body was found on his surgery floor Wednesday night by the chief of police. Coroner Varden gives the cause of death as apoplexy.

The young doctor was 34 years of age, a Toronto University graduate in arts, and before settling here six years ago, was a ship surgeon.

Head of Canadian Jesuits.

Winnipeg, March 30.—Father Joseph Carriere, rector of St. Boniface College, was last night notified that he had been elected principal of the Order of Jesuits in the D[illegible] of Canada. This is the head [illegible] Jesuits of British America. Father Carriere comes from Quebec and has been here two years.

Died on Hearing of Son's Election.

Victoria, B.C., March 30.—C. E. Pooley, K.C., former Speaker of the British Columbia Legislature, and a pioneer Conservative leader, died Thursday night just after he received news that his son, R. H. Pooley, had been elected as a Conservative member of the Provincial Parliament from Esquimalt, the district which the elder Pooley had represented for many years.

Mr. Pooley came to Esquimalt with a party of English gold-seekers in 1863. He was a member of the Robson, the Davie and the Turner Cabinets.

K·RYPTOK·
INVISIBLE BI-FOCAL
Why Look Older Than You Are?
Double vision glasses need not mar one's appearance. They need not make one look older, or cause embarrassment by being conspicuous. KRYPTOK LENSES in your frames or eyeglass mount would be an aid to good appearance. KRYPTOK LENSES—a recent achievement in optical science—combine near view and far view lenses in an integral piece of glass.
They have an absolute smooth surface, and are entirely free from the seams, dirt-catching, blear, cramped and badly appearing characteristics of old-style pasted double vision lenses.
KRYPTOK LENSES
are being eagerly adopted by all who require double-vision glasses or who have been using the pairs of glasses. They are good looking and in no way do they suggest advancing years.

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World —Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. William S. Bourque, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

RUPTURE

Our Success in Fitting Trusses

Is phenomenal. Yet it is not to be wondered at. For 30 years we have studied, tested, examined, invented. To-day we guarantee to fit every ruptured person with a truss that is not only easy and comfortable, but also a truss that will retain the rupture.

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"Oswald!" The tone was controlling, and yet that of one strong man to another. "Is it for us to read the heart of any woman, least of all of a woman of her susceptibilities and keen inner life?" The wish to end all comes to some natures like a lightning flash from a clear sky. It comes, it goes, often without leaving a sign. But if a weapon chances to be near—(here it was in hand—then death follows the impulse which, given an instant of thought, would have vanished in a back sweep of other emotions. Chance was the real accessory to this death by suicide. Oswald, let us realize it as such and accept our sorrow as a mutual burden and turn to what remains to us of life and labor. Work is grief's only consolation. Then let us work."

But of all this Oswald had caught but the one word.

"Chance?" he repeated. "Orlando, I believe in God."

"Then seek your comfort there. I find it in harnessing the winds; in forcing the powers of nature to do my bidding."

The other did not speak, and the silence grew heavy. It was broken, when it was broken, by a cry from Oswald:

"No more," said he, "no more." Then, in a yearning accent, "Send Doris to me."

Orlando started. This name coming so close upon that word comfort produced a strange effect upon him. But another look at Oswald and he was ready to do his bidding. The bitter ordeal was over; let him have his solace if it was in her power to give it to him.

Orlando, upon leaving his brother's room, did not stop to deliver that brother's message directly to Doris; he left this for Truda to do, and retired immediately to his hangar in the woods. Locking himself in, he slightly raised the roof and then sat down before the car which was rapidly taking on shape and assuming that individuality and appearance of sentient life which hitherto he had only seen in dreams. But his eye, which had never failed to kindle at the sight before, shone dully in the semi-gloom. The air-car could wait; he would first have his hour in this solitude of his own making. The gaze he dreaded, the words from which he shrank could not penetrate here. He might even shout her name aloud and only these windowless walls would respond. He was alone with his past, his present and his future.

Alone!

He needed to be. The strongest must pause when the precipice yawns before him. The gulf can be spanned; he feels himself forceful enough for that; but his eyes must take their measurement of it first; he must know its depths and possible dangers. Only a fool would ignore these steeps of jagged rock; and he was no fool, only a man to whom the unexpected had happened, a man who had seen his way clear to the horizon and then had come up against this! Love, when he thought such folly dead! Romance when Glory called for the quiet mind and heart!

He recognised its mordant fang and knew that its ravages, though only just begun, would last his life time. Nothing could stop them now, nothing, nothing. And he laughed, as the thought went home; laughed at the irony of fate and his nearness to a barred paradise. Oswald loved Edith, loved her yet, with a name time would take long to quench. Doris loved Oswald and he Doris; and not one of them would ever attain the delights each was fitted to enjoy. Why shouldn't he laugh? What is left to man but mockery when all props fall? Disappointment was the universal lot; and it should go merrily with him if he must take his turn at it. But here the strong spirit of the man re-asserted itself; it should be but a turn. A man's joys are not bounded by his loves or even by the satisfaction of a perfectly untrammelled mind. Performance makes a world of its own for the capable and the strong, and this was still left to him. He, Orlando Brotherson, despair while his great work lay unfinished! That would be to lay stress on the inevitable pains and fears of commonplace humanity. He was not of that ilk. Intellect was his god; ambition his motive power. What would this casual blight upon his supreme contentment be to him, when the wings of his air-car spread; he should spurn the earth and soar into the heaven of fame simultaneously with his flight into the open.

He could wait for that hour. He had measured the gulf before him and found it passable. Henceforth no looking back.

Rising, he stood for a moment gazing, with an alert eye now, upon such sections of his car as had not yet been fitted into their places; then he bent forward to his work, and soon the lips which had uttered that sardonic laugh a few minutes before, parted in gentler fashion, and song took the place of curses—a ballad of love and fondest truth. But Orlando never knew what he sang. He had the gift and used it.

Would his tones, however, have rung out with quite so mellow a sweetness had he seen the restless figures even then circling his retreat with eyes darting accusation and arms lifted towards him in wild but impotent threat?

Yes, I think they would; for he knew that the man who thus expressed his helplessness along with his conviction, was no nearer the end he had set himself to attain than on the day he first betrayed his suspicions.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE HUT CHANGES ITS NAME.

That night Oswald was taken very ill. For three days his life hung in the balance, then youth and healthy living triumphed over shock and bereavement, and he came slowly back to his sad and crippled existence.

He had been conscious for a week or more of his surroundings, and of his bitter sorrows as well, when one morning he asked Doris whose face it was he had seen bending over him so often during the last week: "Have you a new doctor? A man with white hair and a comforting smile? Or have I dreamed this face? I have had so many fancies this might easily be one of them."

"No, it is not a fancy," was the quiet reply. "Nor is it the face of a doctor. It is that of a friend. One whose heart is bound up in your recovery; one for whom you must live, Mr. Brotherson."

"I don't know him, Doris. It's a strange face to me. And yet, it's not altogether strange. Who is this man and why should he care for me so deeply?"

"Because you share one love and one grief. It is Edith's father whom you see at your bedside. He has helped to nurse you ever since you came down this second time."

"Edith's father! Doris, it cannot be. Edith's father!"

"Yes, Mr. Challoner has been in Derby for the last two weeks. He has only one interest now; to see you well again."

"Why?"

Doris caught the note of pain, if not suspicion, in this query, and smiled as she asked in turn:

"Shall he answer that question himself? He is waiting to come in. Not to talk. You need not fear his talking. He's as quiet as any man I ever saw."

The sick man closed his eyes, and Doris watching, saw the flush rise to its emaciated cheek, then slowly fade way again to a pallor that frightened her. Had she injured where she would heal? Had she pressed too suddenly and too hard on the ever gaping wound in her invalid's breast? She gasped in terror at the thought, then she faintly smiled, for his eyes had opened again and showed a calm determination as he said:

"I should like to see him. I should like him to answer the question I have put you. I should rest easier and get well faster—or not get well at all."

This latter he half whispered, and Doris, tripping from the room may not have heard it, for her face showed no further shadow as she ushered in Mr. Challoner, and closed the door behind him. She had looked forward to this moment for days. To Oswald, however, it was an unexpected excitement and his voice trembled with something more than physical weakness as he greeted his visitor and thanked him for his attentions.

"Doris says that you have shown me this kindness from the desire you have to see me well again, Mr. Challoner. Is this true?"

"Very true. I cannot emphasize the fact too strongly."

Oswald's eyes met his again, this time with great earnestness.

"You must have serious reasons for feeling so—reasons which I do not quite understand. May I ask you why you place such value upon a life which, if ever useful to itself or others, has lost and lost forever, the one delight which gave it meaning?"

It was for Mr. Challoner's voice to tremble now, as reaching out his hand he declared, with unmistakable feeling:

"I have no son. I have no interest left in life, outside this room and the possibilities it contains for me. Your attachment to my daughter has created a bond between us, Mr. Brotherson, which I sincerely hope to see recognized by you."

Startled and deeply moved, the young man stretched out a shaking hand towards his visitor, with the feeble but exulting cry:

"Then you do not blame me for her wretched and mysterious death. You hold me guiltless of the misery which nerved her despairing arm?"

"Quite guiltless."

Oswald's wan and pinched features took on a beautiful expression and Mr. Challoner no longer wondered at his daughter's choice.

"Thank God!" fell from the sick man's lips, and then there was a silence during which their two hands met.

It was some minutes before either spoke and then it was Oswald who said:

"I must confide to you certain facts. I honored your daughter and realized her position fully. Our plight was never made in words, nor should I have presumed to advance any claim to her hand if I had not made good my expectations, Mr. Challoner. I meant to win both her regard and yours by acts, not words. I felt that I had a great deal to do and I was prepared to work and wait. I loved her—" He turned away his head and the silence which filled up the gap, united those two hearts, as the old and young are seldom united.

But when a little later, Mr. Challoner rejoined Doris, in her little sitting-room, he nevertheless showed a perplexity she had hoped to see removed by this understanding with the younger Brotherson.

The cause became apparent as soon as he spoke.

"These brothers hold by each other," said he. "Oswald will hear nothing against Orlando. He says that he has redeemed his fault. He does not even protest that his brother's word is to be believed in this matter. He does not seem to think that necessary. He evidently regards Orlando's personality as speaking as truly and satisfactorily for itself, as his own does. And I dared not undeceive him."

"He does not know all our reasons for distrust. He has heard nothing about the poor washer-woman."

"No, and he must not,—not for weeks. He has borne all that he can."

"His confidence in his older brother is sublime. I do not share it; but I cannot help but respect him for it."

It was warmly said, and Mr. Challoner could not forbear casting an anxious look at her upturned face. What he saw there made him turn away with a sigh.

"This confidence has for me a very unhappy side," he remarked. "It shows me Oswald's thought. He who loved her best, accepts the cruel verdict of an unreasoning public."

"He has not had my dream," she murmured, with all the quiet of an unmoved conviction.

Yet as the days went by, even her manner changed towards the busy inventor. It was hardly possible for it not to. The high stand he took; the regard accorded him on every side; his talent; his conversation, which was an education in itself, and, above all his absorption in a work daily advancing towards completion, removed him so insensibly and yet so decidedly, from the hideous past of tragedy with which his name, if not his honor, was associated, that, unconsciously to herself, she gradually lost her icy air of repulsion and lent him a more or less attentive ear, when he chose to join their small company of an evening. The result was that he turned so bright a side upon her that toleration merged from day to day into admiration and memory lost itself in anticipation of the event which was to prove him a man of men, if not one of the world's greatest mechanical geniuses.

Meantime, Oswald was steadily improving in health, if not in spirits. He had taken his first walk without any unfavoring results, and Orlando decided from this that the time had come for an explanation of his device and his requirements in regard to it. Seated together in Oswald's room, he broached the subject thus:

"Oswald, what is your idea about what I'm making up there?"

"That it will be a success."

"I know; but its character, its use? What do you think it is?"

"I've an idea; but my idea don't fit the conditions."

"How's that?"

"The shed is too closely hemmed in. You haven't room—"

"For what?"

"To start an aeroplane."

"Yet it is certainly a device for flying."

"I supposed so; but—"

"It is an air-car with a new and valuable idea—the idea for which the whole world has been seeking ever since the first aeroplane found its way up from the earth. My car needs no room to start in save that which it occupies. If it did, it would be but the modification of a hundred others."

"Orlando!"

As Oswald thus gave expression to his surprise, their two faces were a study; the fire of genius in the one; the light of sympathetic understanding in the other.

"If this car, now within three days of its completion," Orlando proceeded, "does not rise from the oval of my hangar like a bird from its nest, and after a wide and circling flight descend again into the self-same spot without any swerving from its direct course, then have I failed in my endeavor and must take a back seat with the rest. But it will not fail. I'm certain of success, Oswald. All I want just now is a sympathetic helper—you, for instance; some one who will aid me with the final fitting, and hold his peace to all eternity if the impossible occurs and the thing proves a failure."

"Have you such pride as that?"

"Precisely."

"So much that you cannot face failure?"

"Not when attached to my name. You can see how I feel about that by the secrecy I have worked under. No other person living knows what I have just communicated to you. Every part shipped here came from different manufacturing firms; sometimes a part of a part was all I allowed to be made in any one place. My frame, like my ship, must rise with one bound into the air, or it must never rise at all. I was not made for petty accomplishment, or the slow plodding of commonplace minds. I must startle, or remain obscure. That is why I chose this place for my venture, and you for my helper and associate."

"You want me to ascend with you?"

"Exactly."

"At the end of three days?"

"Yes."

"Orlando, I cannot."

"You cannot? Not strong enough yet? I'll wait then,—three days more."

"The time's too short. A month is scarcely sufficient. It would be folly, such as you never show, to trust a nerve so undermined as mine till time has restored its power. For an enterprise like this you need a man of ready strength and resources; not one whose condition you might be obliged to consider at a very critical moment."

Orlando, balked thus at the outset, showed his displeasure.

"You do not do justice to your will. It is strong enough to carry you through anything."

"It was."

"You can force it to act for you."

"I fear not, Orlando."

"I counted on you and you thwart me at the most critical moment of my life."

Oswald smiled; his whole candid and generous nature bursting into view, in one quick flash.

"Perhaps," he assented; "but you will thank me when you realize my weakness. Another man must be found—quick, deft, secret, yet honorably alive to the importance of the occasion and your rights as a great original thinker and mechanician."

"Do you know such a man?"

"I don't; but there must be many such among our workmen."

"There isn't one; and I haven't time to send to Brooklyn. I reckoned on you."

"Can you wait a month?"

"No."

"A fortnight, then?"

"No, not ten days."

Oswald looked surprised. He would like to have asked why such precipitation was necessary, but the tone in which this ultimatum was given was of that decisive character which admits of no argument. He, therefore, merely looked his query. But Orlando was not one to answer looks; besides, he had no reply for the same importunate question urged by his own good sense. He knew that he must make the attempt upon which his future rested soon, and without risk of the sapping influence of lengthened suspense and weeks of waiting. He could hold on to those two demons leagued in attack against him, for a definite seven days, but not for an indeterminate time. If he were to be saved from folly—from himself—events must rush.

He, therefore, repeated his no, with increased vehemence, adding, as he marked the reproach in his brother's eye, "I cannot wait. The test must be made on Saturday evening next, whatever the conditions; whatever the weather. An air-car to be serviceable must be ready to meet lightning and tempest, and what is worse, perhaps, an insufficient crew." Then rising, he exclaimed, with a determination which rendered him majestic, "If help is not forthcoming, I'll do it all myself. Nothing shall hold me back; nothing shall stop me; and when you see me and my car rise above the treetops, you'll feel that I have done what I could to make you forget"—

He did not need to continue. Oswald understood and flashed a grateful look his way before saying:

"You will make the attempt at night?"

"Certainly."

"And on Saturday?"

"I said it."

"I will run over in my mind the qualifications of such men as I know and acquaint you with the result tomorrow."

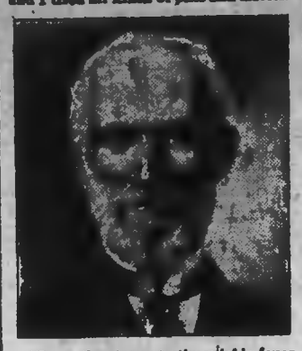
When I Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

HARDWICKE, N.B., Jan. 27th, 1910.

"I feel it my duty to give you a statement in respect to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered from for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease, and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit, and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets.



"I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by New Brunswick's 'Grand Old Man' Senator Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-men. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered with for years." A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" will cure you, just as they cured Mr. Williston. Get a box today—take them—and begin to feel better. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited—Ottawa.

KIT'S COLUMN

It is refreshing to read in these days when the papers teem with recitals of spring openings, Easter bonnets, ruffles, frills and fichus that the "dip in the waistcoat" has gone out of style, and the padless coat, with the distinct waistline, and meager shoulders is "in" for the dear men. Honestly now, lady, did you ever notice the dip in the waistcoat when it was "in"? And how does the "distinct waistline" affect you? The meager shoulders I know you despise for do we not all love to think of our men as big broad-shouldered chaps, and so strong—we are strong on strong men. "He can lift me just as easily!" You know how it goes and how we secretly delight in the thought of his strength, and what contempt we cherish—also secretly— for the frail, puny little chap with narrow shoulders and legs so thin they seem to rattle about within his wide trousers. Now a man may be small of stature, but he must be broad and well-knit, a trifle on the brawny side in fact if he would have our dear sex admire him. Never mind whether his little waistcoat dips in the back or the front so long as it covers a manly chest. We forgive the "waistline" but despise man as he is to-day in the matter of narrow shoulders. Pad them, by all means, gentlemen, if you haven't got them naturally. Take a leaf out of our fashion books and resume your deceptions. We have, as the saying goes, "got on" to your shoulders. You are not the manly athletes our fond but foolish fancy would believe. We suspected you for a long time but had no means of finding you out (what true wife would reveal her husband's weakness! Now we see you in your true colours or rather bones, and we entreat you to cover them up, to round them out, to appear again as the splendid broad-shouldered chaps, who, alas! only appear these days between the pages of the novels.

Perhaps you felt that you must do something along narrower lines to match the hobbies and walking stick figures. Doubtless you felt that peg-tops would look incongruous walking beside those short, rigid little skirts, and severe coats that the charming sex affect with such success. It is no doubt necessary to do something to detract attention from the amazing nov-elties woman has been of late springing on the world in the matter of fashions therefore the fuzzy hat, the dip in the waistcoat, and the extraordinary wide-skirted great coat reminiscent of the days of Dickens or Thackeray, or maybe it was Tom Jones. It hath an ancient flavour anyway. We forgive the fuzzy hat (why wear it so far back—to show your noble brow?); and the waistline, and the short trousers, and the other idiosyncrasies of fashion in which you may indulge, but, to a woman we beseech you to resume your curves and pad your shoulders.

It is not amazing that people as highly educated as are the czar and czarina of Russia should be the prey of spiritism, and what is termed religious mysticism to such an extent as we read in current comment. As referred to before in this column, the young son and heir to the throne of Russia—the littleprince with the beautiful gentle face of his mother—is being brought up without restraint in the natural cruelty born with most of us, and with this terrible quality even encouraged "since," his father says, "Russia is in need of a strong ruler" such as Peter the Great, of whom the charming little boy is believed to be the re-incarnation! Could folly go further! And now we find this imperial couple sitting in fear of a prophecy uttered by some wretched Tzigane or astrologer seven years ago which runs this wise: "Beware the year 1912. After that all is dark." Is not such a thought almost enough to draw disaster? What if it is "all is dark" or to be dark in a certain year or month or day? Need the fact —each one knows it—that one day we must meet our hour, and pass from the pleasant fields of life here to others elsewhere prevent us from playing in the sunshine while we are here? I am looking out of my window at the little garden which looks so shabby and so unkempt after the assault of winter. The slush is deep. The solitary tree hangs bare arms that droop from the beating of the winds. But the warm sun is brooding over all; the earth is sending up fresh spring-like odours; the sparrows are fighting lusty love-fights, and a little lilac tree close by — the very first little tree of the season—is in a hurry to burst forth in all its delightful bravery of green, and in me—the human —in my heart and soul "Hope springs eternal." The whole bright world is bursting into song. The eternal miracle is again happening. The exquisite Intelligence which rules and directs all the world is at work upon the joyous season of spring—for Lo! the winter is past . . . the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come."

If my dark hour should arrive tomorrow what of it? The darkness will be brief. Why should I not enjoy the sunshine of to-day?

Poor Czar! With all his power, all his rank, all his riches, his vast possessions, his titles, his jewels, to be sitting in his palace, terrified, in a panic of fear because one day he will be "in the dark."

One who signs herself "Young Litterateur" writes to this column asking would the writer advise her to "jump into newspaper work by means of a Babies' Department." First find your department, my dear young friend, then find the babies, and gather them into it. It is more difficult than catching hares. And why a 'Correspondence Department?' Would it be something like this. "Babykins — gurgle, gurgle goosh! ickle-ackle." "Yes, dear Babykins, would umslittleums tootsums wootsoms hurtums little ickle monsey? Tell its Auntipanties. Ums? Ditty witty teenums tantums rubuns ickle gum-ums?" I don't see what other way you could conduct a Babies' Department that any properly-being-brought-up baby could understand. Advice to the Love lorn, and certain fools who put preposterous questions is bad enough—but has journalism sunk to such a level as "Answers To Babies?" Suppose you get married and try it on one of your own first?

The other day a man shot a number of holes through the picture of his wife, which, by the way, is a manifest improvement over shooting the iwfe herself. Much of the family violence which the divorce courts reveal would be obviated if one's temper was exercised on the family portraits until the impassioned fit had passed. The business of making dummy figures would receive fresh impetus if people adopted methods like this for calming family resentment. A man could shy the burnt biscuits at the wife's dummy, and she might retaliate with hair brushes at his. One of the favourite pastimes of spirited persons who are united in the holy bonds, that of throwing lighted damps at one another's heads would be comparatively harmless if the lamp were aimed at the Aunt Sally in the corner. A room at the top of the house might be set aside for this performance, and the lamp and dummy could be tipped, but the window afterwards and the hose turned on. Only, of course, by the time you had climbed all those stairs your rage would have lost its wind. However, to return to the picture, I would much prefer having my portrait, however flattering—shot at in place of my own homely phiz, while as for your dummy, Himself could shy your pie at it until his arm tired since you could take it out in your turn with boot brushes. As long as we neglect engenics and permit fools to marry some means of ameliorating their life together is desirable.

Apropos to this, I know a man who took a long trip through the northern woods recently. Going in, he met a man on his way back to civilization. The two stopped to talk. My friend naturally thought that he would be expected to furnish the latest news of the outer world in the larger things men affect, politics—reciprocity was on the tapis about the time, or perhaps the outcome of the "series" or things of that sort. But the first question eagerly asked by our friend of the woods was, "Say are peektops and athletic shoulders in yet?" Mournfully he received the news that 'English' clothes were the last shout, and inquired indignatly what "me with no figgers were going to do?"

"He" (presumably the tailor) "won't put no paddin' in me shoulders. Says it ain't the style."

"Naw," said his fellow, "th' athletic shoulders are running now. You want to have the paddin' where you won't see it."

And to this day a bewildered feminine mind is wondering where that could be.

BRONCHITIS,

Huskiness, Throat Catarrh

Delightful Cure Discovered That Cures Quickly.

Old-fashioned remedies were administered through the stomach only, but as it is impossible to swallow anything into the lungs, little benefit ever resulted.

Strong drugs, such as opium, chlorodyne and cocaine, were resorted to, but did more harm than good.

Nowadays, when a doctor meets a case of catarrh — finds the throat filled with mucous—sore all the way down, he prescribes Catarrhozone because he knows it goes direct to the disease.

Catarrhozone cures by antiseptic balsams that are carried by the air you breathe direct to the source of the trouble.

In one minute you experience decided relief with Catarrhozone and invariably it does cure every type of Catarrh, Bronchitis, irritable throat and hoarseness.

Just think of it—a sure cure with, not noxious drugs—one that is guaranteed and delightfully pleasant at trial. Catarrhozone only, complete for two months use, $1 00; small (trial) size 25c, at all dealers.

CATARRH ZONE A SURE CURE.

ONE MORE LITTLE JOB TO BE DONE

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—While the street people have looked after streets pretty well this winter in the matter of clearing away the snow, there is one more thing they should do at once. On the south side of Hunter St., from George to Aylmer, there is a lofty mountain range of snow. In the shadow of the high buildings it never gets hit by the sun. If it is not levelled, spread about or carted away, it will be there till sometime between April 1st and June 1st. I am not a teamster looking for a job, but I drive a vehicle a good deal and don't like any more than other drivers to plough muddy Hunter St. any longer than necessary.

—Yours, etc.,

OXO CUBES

HAVE MADE GOOD

They Have Hosts of Friends

HARDLY a pantry but has a place on its shelves for the neat little tins of the carefully packed OXO CUBES—the concentrated goodness of Prime Beef.

By many, OXO CUBES are used to make a "Beef Drink," and they do make the most health-giving nourishing drink in the world, but very large quantities earn their pantry reputation, with many of our OXO friends, in numerous other ways.

What are they?

Culinary Discoveries

Why, it didn't take the good housewife long to see that OXO CUBES were Concentrated Prime Beef pressed into handy form. So if the hash happened to be a little tasteless, in went an OXO CUBE, and perhaps two — to strengthen it up — and it did strengthen it up.

If the gravy wasn't all it might be, an OXO CUBE set it right. The meat-pie was made a little more appetizing in the same way. For the little children, potatoes, with a half cup of gravy made from an OXO CUBE, is ideal—the potatoes are made more nutritious and more easy to digest.

OXO CUBES entered the home as an extra and were kept on permanently. They started as a bouillon or a beef tea and became the mainstay of meat dishes of every kind. They bridged the gap between failure and success many and many a time. The little squares of OXO were responsible for many a square meal. Is it any wonder that they have made good?

We want to be sure you are making the most of OXO Cubes

So many ladies are every day finding new ways of using OXO CUBES. You may have discovered one new use for them; your neighbor another. How do you use them?

Won't You Tell Us?

If you are using OXO CUBES for Beef Tea only, try them in other ways, and write and tell us about it.

We should like to hear from you the ways in which you find OXO CUBES valuable in your household; to receive a letter from you, and we want to offer gifts in return for the courtesy.

Useful Household Size, 50 Cubes, $1.15

A FREE GIFT

To each of the writers of the best 3 letters we receive each day for the next 3 days, telling us of your uses for OXO CUBES and in what ways OXO CUBES are most popular in your home, we will send postpaid a box of fifty OXO CUBES free of charge.

Write to-day. It will take only a few moments.

The meaty goodness you would like to add to soups, meat-pies, and other meat dishes will be found only in OXO CUBES. Do not take a substitute. Your dealer has OXO CUBES and will be glad to supply you. Be sure to say "OXO CUBES," and you will get the neatly packaged CUBES—the concentrated goodness of Prime Beef in handy and economical form.

The Quest of Gentle Hazard

Being the Adventures in Love and Chivalry of Lord Richard Jocelyn — By H. M. Egbert

A Midnight Elopement

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman.)

Lord Richard Jocelyn was bored. He had tried every expedient that was known to him as tending to alleviate this condition of mind, but without effect. He had read three evening papers, played a couple of games of solitaire, looked out of the windows of his apartment on Madison avenue, and cleaned his pipes. At last, in desperation, he rang for his valet.

"Talbot," he said, when his servant entered, "I'm bored again. Shall I go to bed?"

"No, sir, I'd take a bit of a stroll, sir," his servant answered.

"Excellent idea, Talbot," cried Lord Jocelyn enthusiastically. "Bring me my boots."

As he put them on the last traces of ennui vanished from his countenance. Walking was to Lord Jocelyn the best refuge against that state of mind when the world commences to look stale and unprofitable, for a stroll about the city seemed equivalent to a plunge into unknown depths, fraught with possibilities. Since he had been in New York the enthusiasm he felt for America had steadily increased.

"You may talk about romantic London," he said to his friend Jack Stanfield, "but I tell you it doesn't begin to compare with this city. With us the improbable is a possibility; with you it is a fixed condition."

He passed into the street and started walking at a brisk rate in the direction of Madison square.

"Now here, for example," he said, halting and looking up at the electric lights which gleamed through the thick foliage of the trees—"here is the very deuce of romance; a primeval forest within the city's heart. Who knows but that any moment something may happen—yes, even an adventure?"

Just then he bumped into a pedestrian, and turning, perceived that this was Jack Stanfield himself.

"It's begun," said Jocelyn solemnly.

"What's begun?" asked Stanfield irritably.

"What?" repeated Jocelyn. "Why, my adventure. Come along, Jack; fate had evidently decreed that we are to share it in company."

"I'm in no mood for adventures," said his friend shortly. "I'm going home."

"And I am going home, too—to your home," answered Jocelyn gayly, taking him by the arm.

"Look here," said Stanfield, disengaging himself suddenly when they had proceeded some distance in silence, "I don't feel well. I'm going to bed. I'm sick."

"Then I'll come in and doctor you," he said. "It's the grippe you've got. Everybody's got it. Now we'll stop at a drug store and get some mustard plasters, and as soon as you're in bed I'll put one on your chest and another—"

"O, the devil!" said Stanfield explosively. "See here, Jocelyn, I'll tell you the truth. The fact is, I don't want to see anybody. I'm leaving town tonight, and what's more, I don't know when I shall be back."

"I'm leaving town also—with you," said Jocelyn. "It's no use talking, Jack. Much as I hate to intrude upon your thoughts, fate sent me out tonight to have an adventure, and you are obviously destined to bring it to me."

Stanfield stood stock still upon the sidewalk and regarded his friend uncertainly. Then he frowned out.

"I do seem inhospitable, old man, don't I?" he said. "But the fact is I'm in a deuce of a fix. I'm going to be married tomorrow."

"Ah, no wonder you're leaving town. Honeymoon—or running away?"

"Come up to my rooms and I'll tell you," Stanfield answered. "I'm in trouble, Dick, and I want a friend—want him badly."

Jocelyn accompanied him and the friends walked on in silence. Presently they stopped at an old-fashioned house on a quiet street leading out to Fifth avenue. It had been built before the day of the elevator; but, once the climb up the dark stairway was concluded, Jocelyn entered a spacious, oak-panelled room that would have shamed many an abode in the new, sumptuous apartment houses that have sprung up of later years in fashionable residential quarters. The floor was just now strewn with personal belongings in the shape of books and articles of attire, while others bulged out of two gaping suitcases.

"Sit down, Dick," said Stanfield, indicating a chair. "There's whisky; help yourself. There are cigarettes. Now hear me, old man, and for the Lord's sake, help me!"

Jocelyn sat down obediently. He listened avidly, for he sensed the fact that his adventure had begun.

"I'm engaged to be married," his friend commenced. "Her name—though that isn't important—is Eileen, Eileen O'Connor, the daughter of the rich lumber merchant who died last winter. You know her?"

"I've heard of her," Lord Jocelyn answered.

"I thought you knew her by the way you pricked up your ears. Well, listen, Dick. We met last year at the seashore. The father took a violent aversion to me; said if ever he allowed Eileen to marry she should have a worker and not a shirker, by which latter term he meant a poor devil like Jack Stanfield who was unfortunate enough to have inherited his money instead of earning it. I told him I was willing to go to work if he'd teach me how, but he turned me down, said he wouldn't employ me as a janitor, and the upshot was, seeing that Eileen stood by me, they sent her away to a sort of finishing school up state, where all the male species are banished from within a radius of a couple of miles. Know those places, Dick?"

"Well, Eileen went, weeping and vowing eternal loyalty and all the proper thing, you know. But she was true to me, and the laundress smuggled through letters for us from time to time.

"Last winter old man O'Connor died very suddenly, and just when I was beginning to slap myself on the back on account of all obstacles being removed—for the mother died some years ago—up there pops a veritable gorgon in the shape of a guardian, whom, by the way, Eileen has never seen. He's the administrator of the estate. I went to plead with him and found one of those flinty, cold-blooded icicles, hard as nails and punctilious as a grandee. He said he had to carry out the father's instructions, which seem to have been that Eileen shouldn't marry until she comes of age in a couple of years' time. Result, stricter supervision, no more letters, and Jack Stanfield down and out, matrimonially speaking. So we arranged to elope, through the medium of an ad. in the personal column of last week's paper.

"Yesterday Eileen's chance came. She flung a few things into a grip and got away on the night train. I was to have met her this morning at the Grand Central station, and we expected to have been married by now and over the state line. But our plans miscarried."

"What happened?" asked Jocelyn sympathetically.

"There was a block on the line and the train won't get in till tonight. Lucky thing, too, in its way, for when I went to meet Eileen I saw the gorgon waiting. He must have got a wire from the school mistress. He has her photograph—I saw it on his mantel when I called on him—and it wouldn't be hard to spot her, for, Dick, you can't imagine how beautiful she is. Her eyes are like twin stars, and her hair's a mass of spun gold, and—"

"Yes, yes, I understand all that," said Jocelyn.

"Well, to continue," said Stanfield, looking at his watch. "I got a wire from Eileen at Utica this afternoon telling me to be on hand about seven o'clock, when the train was due. I got there for the third time today just before meeting you, and they told me the train wouldn't be in till ten, so back I came to see if there were any more telegrams. O, I've had a lively time of it.

"Now, Dick, old man, I want you to stay here while I go off once more, so that in case we miss each other by any possible chance you can stand by. If we miss and she eludes the gorgon she'll make straight for my apartment, and you must meet her and reassure her and see she doesn't get hysterics."

"I'll stand by," said Jocelyn.

"Right, old man," said Stanfield, snatching up his hat. "And if I'm not back by midnight finish packing for me and express my things to the Hotel Richmond, Peterfield, N. J., for, like as not, I won't be back." He thrust a toothbrush and a piece of soap into his packet and, gripping Lord Jocelyn by the hand, bounded off down the staircase.

"The anxious lover!" soliloquized Jocelyn as he watched him disappear down the last flight. "It's an adventure, sure enough, but not one of mine. I'm beginning to think nothing is ever going to happen to me."

He passed along the hall to Stanfield's bedroom, gathered up some of the loose articles of clothing that lay strewn upon the floor and brought them back to pack them. On the way he struck his head with violence against the edge of an open door.

"Confound it," he said, lighting the gas in the hall and looking at the obstruction. The door was that of a large closet, wherein his friend kept his spare suits. He closed the door, and returning to the sitting room, began to fill the suit cases, having completed which operation he began to put the room into some semblance of order. While engaged on this task he heard a ring at the bell.

"Back again," he soliloquized. "Well, if his frame of mind wasn't more settled than when he left I suspect the gorgon got—"

He opened the door.

"The girl!" he concluded, as a strange young woman, in a large hat, and carrying a light suit case, fell into his arms and hung around his neck. The next instant Lord Jocelyn blushed deeply, for he felt two soft lips imprinted on his own.

"Jack—dearest," she murmured; then raised her eyes to his. He saw the pupils dilate; she tore herself out of his arms and shrank back with a cry of fear—more fear, in Jocelyn's estimation, than the circumstances of the case warranted.

"Who are you?" she gasped.

Lord Jocelyn introduced himself with diffidence, but the young lady did not seem to hear. She continued to shrink away from him, until the wall of the passage precluded further removal, and gazed at him in terror; and, as he had deftly interposed himself between her and the stairs, in order to stop her in case she might be tempted to flee, she made a left turn and continued to shrink back and back until they found themselves inside Jack Stanfield's apartment.

"Where's Jack? Where's Mr. Stanfield?" she cried.

Lord Jocelyn laid a hand soothingly upon her shoulder. He was not wholly indifferent to the charm of her appearance; indeed, as he gazed upon her he found himself admitting that Jack had told the truth concerning this; nevertheless it was a very paternal manner that he adopted as he replied:

"Jack will be back soon, my dear young lady. Now compose yourself, I beg, for you distress both of us greatly. I assure you that your parting will not be for long."

"Let me go," she cried, and darted past him. Jocelyn, entirely at a loss to account for this singular behavior, followed her into the hall, for, in her haste, she missed the location of the stairway and came to a halt opposite the large closet.

"Please—please do not be afraid of me," begged Jocelyn. And, as she gazed at him in absolute fear, he began, deftly, as he imagined, to explain the circumstances. Suddenly he broke off. The fair visitor was gazing with a look of utter vacuity, at the opposite wall. What was it she saw? Lord Jocelyn turned to observe what she was staring at.

Instantly he felt himself pushed backward by a pair of singularly muscular hands—a minute later he heard something click, and darkness enveloped him. The young lady had very deftly locked him in the closet.

Exerting all his force, Jocelyn strained against the door. He felt it give; he strained again, and it burst open. He rushed out to the head of the stairs, the perspiration streaming down his brow. If Stanfield should return and find that he had not kept faith with him— He heard the faint swish of her skirts upon the last flight and, hatless, plunged down in pursuit. At all cost he must overtake her and explain the situation to her. As he emerged from the door of the house he saw her getting into a taxicab some fifty yards up the street. She saw him as she stepped in and called to the driver. Jocelyn was too far off to hear her words, but he could infer them from the sudden spurt of the vehicle. It started off in a cloud of dust and began to make a record pace up the road. Just then another taxicab came slowly by. Jocelyn hailed it.

"Follow that cab," he cried to the driver. "Catch it. There's a young lady inside."

The driver grinned and, bending down, remarked in an exasperating way:

"How much, boss?"

"Twenty dollars," cried Jocelyn in desperation.

"I'm wise," answered the driver, and hardly had Jocelyn entered before he was flung back upon the cushions by the speed of the pursuit. Up the road the vehicle raced in pursuit, now sighting the young lady's taxicab, now losing it. Soon it became evident that she was driving in the direction of the Grand Central station and a cry of thankfulness escaped from Jocelyn's lips. If she went there they would meet Jack Stanfield and explanations could ensue.

But why had she shrunk from him in such unsimulated terror? Why had she, in her desperation, locked him into the clothes closet? Even in his anguish Jocelyn found time to speculate:

"I knew that I was going to find an adventure."

His calculation had not been an erroneous one. The flying taxicab turned into Forty-second street, dashed swiftly along the crowded way, to the imminent danger of sundry pedestrians, and skimming the curb, came to a halt in front of the station. Lord Jocelyn's vehicle was only twenty yards behind. He sprang out, tossed the money to the driver and darted up the steps in pursuit of the young woman, chased her through the waiting room, and cornered her in front of the baggage room.

Eileen looked at that moment like a hare that turns upon a greyhound.

"You didn't let me explain," panted Lord Jocelyn. "I am Jack's friend. I wanted to guard you."

These unfortunate words seemed to set a climax to her terror.

"Please—please let me go," she sobbed, and suddenly, in desperation, turned to a dignified stranger who had sauntered cooly up and was watching the proceedings with evident amusement.

"Save me from this man," she begged. "I don't know who he is. He followed me here. I—I have an appointment. Don't let him molest me."

Jocelyn cast a swift glance around him. Several travelers were lingering in the vicinity, obviously suspicious. A few words from her and a hostile crowd would gather. Some daring stroke was necessary. At all cost he must keep faith with Jack.

"I am this young lady's guardian, sir," he said to the stranger. "I understand that she has just run away from the school—a very excellent finishing school—in which I placed her, in order to contract a marriage with a worthless scamp. I have followed her to exercise the authority which the law allows me and to plead with her better nature."

"You look very young to be a guardian, sir," replied the stranger, a smile of cynicism spreading over his face.

"Nevertheless, sir, it is true," Jocelyn answered. "And permit me to say, sir, that I am not accustomed to having my statements questioned."

"It's true. He is my guardian. And I won't go back. I won't go back to the finishing school."

Lord Jocelyn had completed his discomfiture. The hasty subterfuge, meant only to enable him to maintain his attitude pending the arrival of his friend, had destroyed his last chance of persuading Eileen. He understood now why she had locked him in the clothes closet; she had mistaken him for the gorgon.

"I cannot doubt your word, sir," said the stranger with a significant smile. "May I ask what you intend to do?"

"I intend to take my ward back to her school by the next train," Lord Jocelyn answered. "Eileen, it is futile to make any further resistence."

She looked around piteously. "O Jack, why didn't you come!" she cried. And from behind the crowd which had collected an unexpected rejoinder came.

"I'm here," bellowed a masculine voice, and Jack Stanfield, wild-eyed and furious, thrust himself forward and placed himself squarely between Lord Jocelyn and Eileen.

"So this is how you keep faith with me, is it?" he sneered. "I wasn't quite so blind as you thought me to be. I saw the guilty look on your face when I asked you whether you knew Miss O'Connor, but I didn't think that you were capable of quite such a dastardly trick as this."

"What have I done, Jack?" cried his friend.

"What have you done?" re-echoed Jack Sanfield, thrusting his face within six inches of his erstwhile friend's. "You want to know that, do you? You have tried to induce my fiancee to elope with you, you miserable cur. And I am going to thrash you within an inch of your life for it."

The dignified stranger, seeing that hostilities were imminent, now interposed to keep the peace.

"One moment, gentlemen," he said. "There seems to be some trivial misunderstanding here. What is your grievance, friend?"

"Grievance?" cried Stanfield, still keeping his eyes menacingly upon Jocelyn. "This young lady is engaged to marry me. I was to have met her at the station this evening, but, owing to a mistake, she came on to meet me at my house, where I had left this fellow to guard against just such an occurrence. And how does he take advantage of my confidence? By running away with her! And he would have succeeded had not the sight of these surroundings awakened remorse in her."

"Your name," said the stranger, "is Mr. John Stanfield, I believe."

"Well, what of that?" cried Stanfield, spinning round on him. Next moment he recoiled in astonishment. His arms dropped to his sides.

"The guardian!" he ejaculated.

"Exactly," replied the stranger. "I am, or was, the guardian of this lady. And now, sir," he continued, addressing himself to Jocelyn, "will you kindly explain to me, since I cannot doubt your word, how you come to be this young lady's guardian also?"

"I am guarding her from you," Lord Jocelyn muttered.

The guardian smiled.

"Suppose that we adjourn to some place where we can talk this matter over quietly," he said. "My name is Bayliss, and, outside my official duties, I am generally considered a good enough fellow. I am sure Mrs. Bayliss will be happy to offer Miss O'Connor shelter for the night."

"But we were to get married tonight," exclaimed Jack Stanfield helplessly.

"You've got your license, of course," said the guardian grimly.

Stanfield's mouth opened. "I never thought of it," he muttered.

"Then tomorrow will be early enough," said Mr. Bayliss. "And if you can impress me with the same degree of confidence that you have obtained from my ward, it is possible—I said possible, mind you—that I may rescind the adverse decision that I gave you when you solicited her hand from me recently, for I see that I have to deal with two very determined young people."

As they turned to go Stanfield grasped Lord Jocelyn's hand, and with a world of repentance shining in his eyes, started to speak.

"Don't say anything, old chap; it isn't necessary," said Jocelyn, anticipating him. Thereupon the hand clasp of the two friends tightened for an instant. Then, arm in arm, they followed the other two out of the station.

Lord Jocelyn found his servant waiting up for him when he returned home at three o'clock on the following morning.

"Talbot," he said, "I've had my adventure."

"Ah, sir," said Talbot, "there's nothing like a bit of a stroll when a gentleman feels bored. Your slippers, sir?"

DID MOSES MAKE MISTAKE?

We have often heard "the mistakes of Moses" in the first chapter of Genesis commented upon, but what especially strikes us in that chapter is not its contraventions of science, but its harmonies with late discoveries. How did the writer, many centuries before the story of the rocks had been deciphered, know that there was a beginning and then a pause before life appeared on the earth? Who taught the writer that the earth was "without form and void" before it was divided into continents? How came it that the long delayed, slow emergence of land should be set forth as it is? Was it mere guesswork that prompted the writer to say grasses were created before animals, and not for animals already existent? Is it a happy accident that life in the water appears before life upon the land? And ages before the scientist dreamed of paleontology we find man last in the series just as he appears today by his remains in the drift instead of in the stratified rocks? Further investigation may explain discrepancies, but what except inspiration can account for these coincidences?—The Advance.

Shakespeare in 1793.

What, we wonder, would happen to the London manager nowadays who should dare to put on the stage such a version of a Shakespearian tragedy as was played in Ireland a hundred years ago? Mrs. Earle in her book, "Memoirs and Memories," gives a Dublin play bill in 1793, which is worth quoting.

The play was "the tragedy of 'Hamlet,' originally written and composed by the celebrated Dan Hayes of Limerick and inserted in Shakespeare's works." The title role is taken by a gentleman "who between the acts will perform several solos on the patent bagpipe, which performs two tunes at the same time."

"EIGHTS" ARE THEIR HOODOOS

Postal Clerks Say Stamps of That Denomination Cause Them Much Financial Loss.

When a meek little man stepped up to the stamp window in a branch office and asked for an eight cent stamp he caused as much consternation as if he had demanded "your money or your life."

All the clerks came to the window to take a look at him. They muttered to one another and made strange and fantastic signs, crossed their fingers, knocked on wood and did various other things that are supposed to drive away evil spirits.

"We're just out of eight cent stamps," a clerk finally stammered. "Got lots of two and ones."

"Well, gimme a five and a three," said the meek little man, upon receiving which he paid for them and departed.

"What's the matter with the eights?" queried an inquisitive spectator.

The stamp clerk was still too nervous to answer, but one of the others said, with a smile:

"Eights are hoodoos. None of the small offices handle them if they can help it. It's this way: They are just a wee shade different in color from the ones and it is no infrequent thing for a stamp clerk in a hurry to hand out a lot of eights when ones are asked and paid for. It always costs him seven cents a stamp when he does it. The clerk here the other day, during the rush hour, when the offices are closing, was called upon for a dollar's worth of ones. He handed out a hundred eights instead. Cost him seven dollars. Then he got rid of all the rest of the eights and now he won't have anything to do with eights. Even says 'eaten' instead of 'ate.'"

Oregon to the Sea.

A remarkable work, second to the Panama canal alone in magnitude, is being effected at the mouth of the Columbia river. To dredge the storm-swept shoals which prevent the passage of large vessels it was necessary to build a jetty four miles long into the sea, confining the current to a small channel, which, by its own force, it scooped out eleven feet deeper than before. But the passage silted up again, and now the jetty is being extended for three more miles. As the foot of the rock wall advances the river scours ahead of it. When the supplementary jetty has been completed and the river bound on two sides Portland will become a deepsea harbor.—Harper's Weekly.

IS SHOCK TO BOTH NATIONS

German Waiter Objects to Newsboys Shouting War With France Has Been Declared.

The German waiter in the Waldorf cafe at luncheon time the other day was very much disturbed as he brought the bill of fare.

"Pardon me, sir," he said, "but is it true that war has been declared between Germany and France?"

The man who was about to eat hadn't heard of it, and asked how the waiter had got the information.

"Why, those half a dozen young men who call 'Uxtra, special uxtra!' every other night through the winter in this part of the town were yelling outside about half an hour ago that war had been declared and were selling papers on the strength of it," was the reply. "If they were shouting false news like that there ought to be a way of punishing them, for every German and every Frenchman who heard them must have got a terrible shock."—New York Sun.

Salt on French Roads.

As a general rule the roads in and around French towns are tarred at the commencement of the summer in order to abate the dust nuisance. It has, however, been found that tar, although excellent in the case of macadamized roads, is of little or no value where car lines exist and paved street crossings intersect the roads in every direction, as tarring cannot be carried out on stones.

The authorities, basing their action on the well known hygrometrical properties of common salt, have made a test of its value in laying the dust. Twenty yards of roadway have been sprinkled liberally with salt and then watered freely. If the results are satisfactory salt will be used throughout the town of Havre, it being impossible to tar the majority of the streets, as they are paved with rough stone blocks.

April 1st May See Big Strike Of Union Miners In The U.S.

THE MINERS' DEMANDS

NEW YORK, MARCH 30.—One by one the coal miners and the coal operators are going over their differences — the bituminous representatives in Cleveland and the anthracite representatives in New York. But there seems to be little hope of a settlement. At the conference in Cleveland all the demands of the men were turned down.

Some of the independent operators in the east have signified a willingness to sign the new working agreement demanded by their employees. The large associations of mine owners, however, are persistently refusing to yield.

The miners are doggedly holding out for their demands. With this situation and with both sides asserting their positions are immutable, it is believed a strike on April 1 cannot be averted.

350,000 Men Involved.

Over 350,000 men are involved in this trouble. This is but a handful compared to the vast army now struggling for higher wages and better conditions in England. But the American miners declare they will pursue their battle with the same bitterness and tenacity as their English brothers in the event that a great walkout takes place.

President Taft has interested himself in the controversy. He has set the machinery of the federal government in motion in an attempt to maintain harmony. It is charged that the miners have taken advantage of the presidential year to push their cause. Leaders of the miners deny this charge, but they do admit that the way they vote next fall depends entirely upon the settlement of their trouble.

It is well known that a large percentage of the mine workers are Socialists. The element is the most radical toward the mine owners. They aver that nothing short of their demands can adjust the controversy. They say they will countenance no compromise.

The New York meeting, however, is the most promising of the two. It is reported that the anthracite operators have decided to reconsider their ultimatum to the union. This answer was in effect that there would be no submission to the demands and that no counter proposals would be made.

Demands of the Unions.

The demands of the miners vary in different ways. Here are the demands of the bituminous workers:

Ten cents a ton increase for lump coal and the mining of all coal on a tonnage basis.

Seven instead of eight hours a day. Five hours on Saturday instead of eight.

Pay every week instead of every two weeks.

The demands of the anthracite miners have but little material difference.

Miners and Mines Affected.

	Miners.	Mines
Pennsylvania	60,000	250
Ohio	47,000	450
Indiana	24,000	147
Illinois	72,000	320

Fifty-five thousand miners from Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Iowa and Michigan, who are members of the United Mine Workers, will also suspend operation because they will have no basis upon which to fix agreements in the event the miners in the lake states walk out.

As an offset to the demands of the miners the operators ask a ten per cent. reduction from the present rate. They say the output of their mines and the prices they are getting for coal will not permit them to increase the wages of their employees. This assertion is ridiculed by the miners.

Output in Illinois.

The output of the Illinois mines last year was approximately 50,000,000 tons. The average selling price at the mines was $1.20 a ton. The average miner earned $2.98 a day, working 201 days of the year. Statistics show that a miner was killed for each 319,000 tons of coal mined. This rate shows that one man out of every 403 employed gave up his life while at work. The total number of deaths was 157.

The mining laws of Illinois are so strict that during the year but thirty-two boys were found working underground. This is an infinitely small number compared with Pennsylvania and some of the southern states. Since the Cherry disaster the mining board has been especially active to promote careful and thorough inspection of every mine.

The installation of every possible life-saving and accident prevention has been required. This has minimized the element of hazard in the industry until the Illinois mining law will compare favourably with the most advanced coal producing states in the union.

Operate to Full Extent.

For the last few months every mine in the country has been operated to its maximum of output. Railroads and other important consumers have stored large quantities of coal. But the amount in storage has been lessened by the abnormally severe winter and it is said by coal dealers that a general suspension of work would result in a coal famine before many months had elapsed.

Large coal dealers say they would not be surprised if the operators finally would offer a 5 per cent. increase. This would mean an annual total increase of $5,000,000. They also say that they would not be surprised if the miners would accept the compromise.

President White says the miners will be ordered to strike if the operators are obdurate. The new leader of the miners is in a strategic position. For years he has been identified with the workmen in the soft coal fields and he has the more powerful and richer organization behind him. His strength is reinforced by the fact that the bituminous miners are irritated. They recently asked for a 10 per cent. increase and were told that instead their wages would be cut that amount.

The operators will be forced to fill the miners' places in the event of a strike, and it is believed much disorder would result.

SPEAKS OUT HIS FIRM BELIEF

That There is No Better Medicine Than Dodd's Kidney Pills.

NEW LISKEARD, ONT., March 29.—(Special.)— Mr. Isaac Grant, well-known and highly respected here, is a firm believer in the old and still growing belief that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure for all forms of Kidney Disease.

Mr. Grant is outspoken in his belief. "Any person suffering with kidney disease," he says, "should use Dodd's Kidney Pills, as there is no better medicine on earth to-day."

When a man makes a statement like that he believes what he says. Hundreds of others in Canada are making the same statement every day, and for the same reason. They have used Dodd's Pills and found them good. Dodd's Kidney Pills not only cure the backache or rheumatism or dropsy, or other ailment at which they are aimed, but they build up the system and make you feel stronger and healthier all over the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys, and cured kidneys mean pure blood. Pure blood cures the ailment by making the body strong enough to shake off any and all disease.

WILLIAM CALLAGHAN KILLED IN THE WEST

Word reached Peterborough today of the death in Vancouver of Mr. William Callaghan, late of Emily. He was struck by a C.N.R. train on March 9th, and, as a result, passed away on the 22nd.

The deceased, when in Emily, run a thresher and a saw mill, but has been a resident of Vancouver for the space of two years. He was well known in Peterborough, where many of his friends and distant relatives lived. He had two brothers, Patrick and Richard, both of whom are said to be in the west.

He is survived by his wife (formerly Miss Mary Meehan), four sons and four daughters. Mr. Wm. Callaghan, of Lindsay, is an uncle.

LEAVES FOR MONTREAL.

Mr. Allen Harper Remembered by S. S. Class on Eve of His Departure.

A number of friends of Mr. Allen Harper gathered together in St. Andrew's Sunday School room on Thursday evening for the purpose of bidding Mr. Harper God-speed on the eve of his departure for Montreal. Mr. Jack Laing, on behalf of the Utopia Bible Class, presented the departing guest with a handsomely-bound Bible, on the fly-leaf of which was inscribed the autographs of the members of the Class. Mr. Harper made a suitable reply and thanked his many friends for their kindly recognition.

Mr. Harper leaves for Montreal this evening where he has accepted a lucrative position with the Hudson Bay Company.

JEWS ARE MUSIC LOVERS

Unique Temple of Music Built, Owned And Operated by Hebrews

In the heart of the East End of London a Jewish Opera has been opened, the first of its kind in the world, in so far as it is intended to appeal musically to Jews alone, is run by Jews, controlled by Jews, has an entire working staff of Jews, with all the artists in the orchestra and on the stage belonging to the same religion and race.

The building is the result of capital raised, not among the rich, highly educated class of West End Jews, but among the poor of the East End whose earnest desire it is to organise some representative place of artistic amusement, where they can listen to opera sung in their own language. The only rich man who appears upon the list of shareholders is Sir Francis Montefiore, who laid the foundation stone, and who has taken a lively interest in the progress of the scheme. Otherwise the shares are held by about 2,000 people, who have given a few shillings or a few pounds, as they could afford it, in return for shares which have all been taken up among East End Jews.

CANADA THE PLACE

A Lecturer Advises Young Londoners To Come to This Country

Mr. Thomas Sedgwick who is responsible for the emigration of young people within the Empire addressed two thousand young Britons in South London recently. They plied him with questions as he held out to them the prospect of an open-air life, a thousand times more profitable and more fascinating than an existence spent in the poorer suburbs of London. The lecturer, drawing on his experiences in New Zealand, made the vast gulf between life in London and in the Oversea territories more vividly apparent by displaying on a screen typical pictures of the slums, in which many of them spend their lives, and following them with slides showing first the vast untenanted areas of Canada, and then the preparation for farm life, draining, dairying, fruit, sheep, and cattle farming, ploughing and harvesting. He was frequently loudly applauded, particularly for the statement that it had been proved up to the hilt that town lads make the best farm laborers, settlers, and colonists.

THE NEED OF MEN

Work in Every Field Not Only Remains But Increases

More men are needed in the world to-day than ever before, because there is more to do—more different things to make, more actual people to support. Fifteen years ago the bicycle makers would have been frightened into bankruptcy if you had told them that in 1910 their trade would have almost disappeared. But what do we see now? The coming of automobiles has given work to all the bicycle men and thousands more. And it is so in other businesses and professions. The point to remember is that, while the form of work changes, the work in every field remains, and even increases. The real claims are not all taken up. Alexander the Great was only a fool when he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. He didn't use his eyes to see with, but only to weep with.

WIPE OUT BLACK HAND

Cell or Gallows for Them, Said the Chief Justice

Chief Justice Falconbridge, referring to the charge against Grino, who is alleged to have killed Frank Terra, said: "He (the defendant) will urge that he was being hounded down by members of the Black Hand or Camorra, as they commonly are called. Now, I may say here that if there are any importations of these people to this country, this is not the clime nor the soil for them. These people need have no doubt of the result of their operations. They will be vigorously wiped out. There will be no comic opera accessories, and the men will be dealt with severely and sent to the gallows or behind prison walls, as the case may be."

SIX GENERATIONS

The Remarkable Longevity of a French Family

Writing to the "Echo de Paris," a correspondent declares that his wife who is twenty-one, has a little daughter of eighteen months. The baby's grandmother is forty-five, and this lady's mother is seventy-four and her grandmother ninety-five. These five generations are all Paris-born and bred, except the junior sprig, who saw the light in the suburbs.

From Libourne, however, another correspondent hastens to inform the world that a baby girl has just been born to him by his young sixteen-year old wife. The following is the ascendant family tree in the feminine line of this newcomer into the world: Grandmother 33, great-grandmother 52, great-great-grandmother 71, and great-great-great-grandmother 88, whilst the mother of this last old lady died at the age of 105, just three months too soon to allow of her being one of the greatest of all great-great-grandmothers.

FACILITIES FOR WHEAT

The New Hudson Bay Route is Selected to Revolutionize Transportation

"Is the Hudson Bay route feasible for general communication with Europe?" This question was addressed to a member of the firm that will build docks at Fort Churchill. He replied: "Certainly! I believe it is open nine months in the year to suitable ships. Only three boats have been lost, so far as is known, in navigating the straits. The ony risk is that of encountering ice from Baffin Bay, but engineering may overcome that difficulty once it is seriously faced. At present there are millions of bushels of wheat held up in Canada owing to the congestion on the St. Lawrence. Anything of this kind will be obviated by the development of the new scheme."

An experienced projector possessing an intimate knowledge of the northern Canadian Provinces, also interviewed upon the scheme, stated that it promised the development of the whole of Northern Canada. "It will create such a boom," he added, "that the Dominion Government won't know where they are. There are thousands of miles of country practically unexplored yet abounding in natural wealth. My friends who have traversed the Peace River state that nugget gold is in abundance, whilst I myself know that the Indians get their coal upon the surface. If I am not mistaken, Fort Churchill may eventually prove the eastern terminal of a line penetrating right into the heart of Athabasca and the richest grain country in the dominion."

DYSPEPTIC
Food Does You No Good

Half the time you're afraid to eat; your tongue is coated, mouth tastes bad, stomach is bloated. If you want to get well, stop using dyspepsia tablets, and go to the source of the trouble before it is too late. Strengthen your stomach, cast out the bile, regulate the bowels—do this, and dyspepsia will be no more.

For your condition the best prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are made specially for the stomach, kidneys and liver. No better remedy will be devised, for Dr. Hamilton's Pills are perfect.

DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS A SURE CURE

"No one could realize my sufferings from stomach trouble and indigestion. For five years I have not been well. My food did me no good, because I couldn't digest or assimilate. My doctor said constipation was at the root of my trouble, so I got Dr. Hamilton's Pills. My appetite improved, pain after eating ceased, and my food digested quickly. I am delighted with the thorough cure I derived from Dr. Hamilton's Pills.
"(Signed) MARTIN E. WALKER,
"Bridgewater."

Quick results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills: this medicine cures all trouble in the stomach and digestive organs by removing the cause.

QUEEN MARY AVOIDS ALL RACE MEETINGS

Believes That Gambling is One of the Greatest Curses of Great Britain

Queen Mary loves best of all the quiet life at Buckingham Palace. She does not accompany King George to race meetings, as she takes not the slightest interest in the turf. Moreover, she regards gambling as one of England's greatest curses.

The hours Queen Mary enjoys most are those spent supervising the work and amusements of her children. Although they spend practically the whole of their time indoors at Buckingham Palace, she sees to it that they do not suffer from this sedentary mode of life, and insists on regular hours of exercise, as well as for work and recreation. A brawny Highlander, who is always in native costume, is the children's instructor in Swedish drill. The splendidly carpeted corridors on the upper floor of the palace are the track for many an impromptu race between the young princes. When tired of games they turn their attention to their pets, an aviary of foreign birds and a squirrel house being their favorite haunts.

The Chances Against You

"Oh, I will be all right in a few days," says the person who is tired out and has to drag himself to his daily work because the nervous system is exhausted.

Unfortunately nervous diseases do not right themselves, and the wasting process which has brought you to this condition keeps right on until there is a complete breakdown.

You must get the building-up process started, so that, instead of being a little weaker at the end of each day, you will find the balance on the other side and know that you are gradually getting strong and well.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you wonderfully if you only give it a reasonable chance. As the system is built up you will find such symptoms as headache, sleeplessness and indigestion leaving you. You will find the old energy coming back. The mind and body will better serve you and you will see a new pleasure in life.

GREAT AEROPLANE FLEET

Germany is Devoting Much Attention to Air Warfare

"Germany has at last consecrated itself in earnest to the development of an aeroplane fleet," said Major von Tschudi, the distinguished aeronautical officer, who has developed Johannisthal to its present eminent position. "We have not lost our faith in the superiority of dirigible airships for the carrying of men and explosives, but the aeroplane has now come fully into its own. Hundreds of Germans are learning to fly. At Johannisthal Leipsig, Munich, Mayence, Frankfort, Weimar, Teltow, and Mulhausen, where the most important training camps are maintained, the utmost activity and enthusiasm prevail. In the Army airmanship has become almost a passion. Many more young officers are volunteering for the new arm than the War Office can possibly use. Army orders for aeroplanes are rapidly putting the construction industry on a sound commercial basis. If the Reichstag were suddenly to pass a huge 'aerial programme,' it would find that the plant exists capable of carrying it out. There is talk in official circles of a scheme of Government subsidies for privately owned aeroplanes, such as now exists with regard to motor-cars. If this project should materialise, Germany will become possessed of an air fleet which need not fear a brush with the most powerful rival." The German Army Estimates for 1912 provide for $20,000 of additional funds for the Verkehrstruppen, which include the flying arm. It is believed that the Hon's share of this increase is destined for the expansion of the aeroplane fleet and for the creation of "flying garrisons" at strategic points on the frontiers.

WOMEN IN A DUEL

A duel with pitchforks took place at Dijon, France, between two women. They both worked in a biscuit factory and were continually quarrelling. The women in their workroom, tired of the perpetual bickering, advised them to settle their differences in a fight. The two women armed themselves with pitchforks and fought in a lonely field. News of the duel soon spread, and the police hurried to the field, where they found one of the women lying unconscious with a wound in her head.

This Coffee Pot FREE

Why Dalton's French Drip Coffee is so Wholesome, Delicious and Economical

When you have once tasted Dalton's delicious French Drip Coffee, made in a Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot, you will never be tempted to drink ordinary boiled Coffee again.

The Coffee berry, or bean, is protected by nature from the insect world by a tough outer shell or husk which contains tannin and other acid, bitter principles which are poisonous to insects and certainly not wholesome to the human system.

Other roasters of Coffee do not remove this bitter husk, and this is why many people find that ordinary Coffee does not agree with them. Not only that, but the usual way of roasting Coffee in cylinders over coke or gas fires, drives off the volatile essences, so essential to aroma and flavor.

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

The DALTON way is to throw the Coffee berries against an intensely hot flame. This roasts them in half the time and prevents the volatile essences being driven off. Then the Coffee is cooled by a special process, during which a strong suction air-blast blows off all foreign substances. Next comes the grinding, during which another powerful air-blast removes the poisonous, bitter outer shell. The Coffee contains absolutely no chicory and is packed in sealed tins, which preserve all the delightful flavor.

We make Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two strengths Mild Blend and Strong Blend. You cannot tell however which you will like the best until you try both and that is why we ask you to buy two tins in our special offer.

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

We feel so sure that you will find either Dalton's Mild Blend or Strong Blend French Drip Coffee just the Coffee that you have been looking for that we have made arrangements with your Grocer to give you one of these handsome pots (worth $1.50) absolutely Free with your first purchase of 2 tins each of Mild and Strong Blend. You buy two tins of our Coffee—one of each kind—at 35c. per tin, to give it a fair trial, and we give you the means of testing it FREE, satisfied that you will use nothing but Dalton's French Drip Coffee thereafter.

CHAIR AND SWING

Hangs on Back of Ordinary Dining-Room Chair

Two West Virginia men have invented a combination chair and swing, which, in addition to its latter use, provides a high chair for the baby by merely hanging it on the back of an ordinary dining-room or kitchen chair. The seat of the small chair is pivoted to the back and sides are pivoted to the seat, so the whole can be folded up flat. Chains run from the outward corners of the seat to the top of the back and hold the former up. Hooks at the top hook over the back of the larger chair. A table is removably fastened on the arms of the baby's chair and answers the double purpose of providing a place for baby's tray and holding the arms in upright position. This same seat can be used as the seat of a swing by attaching it to chains suspended from ceiling or porch roof.

AGRICULTURE AT WAINWRIGHT

Range and beef cattle were shipped out of Wainwright, Alta., on the G.T.P. to the number of 2,000. Although the country there is naturally adapted for grazing and ranching, larger area near the town are rapidly becoming settled, and it is prophesied that, in another decade, "old timers" of the district will look back to the cattle days with a sigh and tell how things used to be before the cowpunchers were pushed out by the tillers of the soil.

SWEETNESS THAT LASTS

Dick—"She ought to have. It cost me about sixty pounds of candy in the last six months."

WAS TROUBLED WITH Weakness and Palpitation
OF THE HEART.

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart, but when it starts to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can and will give prompt and permanent relief.

They do this by their restorative influence on every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. John J. Downey, New Glasgow, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I was troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies, but got none to answer my case like your Pills. I can recommend them highly to all having heart or nerve troubles."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

March 31st, 1912.
(Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)
REVIEW.

Golden Text—The people which sat in darkness saw great light, and to them that sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up. Matt. iv: 16.

The following questions may be used as an original lesson or as a review of the twelve preceding lessons.

The date and title of each lesson, where found, Golden Text and one question from each lesson follow.

Jan. 7. The Birth of John the Baptist Foretold. Luke 1: 5-23. Golden Text—Without faith it is impossible to please him. Heb. xi: 6.

(1.) Verse 7—Which is the greater blessing under present day conditions, a large or small family, and why?

Jan. 14. The Birth of John the Baptist. Luke 1: 57-80. Golden Text—Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people. Luke 1: 68.

(2.) Verse 59—When should the religious education of a child commence and how is it best accomplished?

Jan. 21. The Birth of Jesus. Luke ii:1-20. Golden Text—For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. Luke ii: 11.

(3.) Verses 11-12—Why was the birth of Jesus good tidings to the shepherds and to all men?

Jan. 28. The Presentation in the Temple. Luke ii: 22-39. Golden Text—For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples. Luke ii:30-31.

(4.) Verses 22-24—Why would it not be a good practice to formally present in the church all children to the Lord?

Feb. 4. The Wise Men Led by the Star. Matt. ii:1-2. Golden Text—Look unto me and be ye saved all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else. Isa. xiv: 22.

(5) Verse 2—What evidence is there, if any, that God has revealed Himself to other peoples besides the Israelites? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Feb. 11. The Boy Jesus in the Temple. Luke ii: 40-52. Golden Text—How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be in my Father's house? Luke ii: 49.

(6.) Verse 40—Was this experience of the boy Jesus of growth, spirituality and wisdom any different from what any other boy might have?

Feb. 18. The Ministry of John the Baptist. Mark. 1: 18; Luke iii: 1-22. Golden Text—Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Matt. iii:2.

(7.) Mark 1: 4-8— What did John's baptism stand for?

Feb. 25. The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus. Mark i: 9113. Matt iv 1-11. Golden Text—For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted he is able to succor them that are tempted. Heb. xi: 18.

(8.) Mark 1: 9— Repentance was a condition of John's baptism. Did Jesus have any need of repentance? Give your reasons.

March 3. The Call of the First Disciples. Mark i: 14-28; Luke v: 1-11 Golden Text —The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth labourers into his harvest. Matt ix: 37-38.

(9.) Verses 19-20— Why did Jesus have a preference for unlearned fishermen rather than scholars to become his chief apostles?

March 10. Jesus the Healer. Mark 1: 29-45. Matt. iv: 23-25. Golden Text—Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses. Matt. viii: 17.

(10.) What reason is there to expect that God in these days will heal our sick in any way resembling the manner in which Jesus healed sick people?

March 17. The Paralytic Forgiven and Healed. Mark ii: 1-12. Golden Text—Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases. Ps. ciii: 2-3.

(11.) Verse 3—Of how much benefit is it in these days to bring our sick ones to Jesus?

March 24. Feasting and Fasting. Mark ii: 13-22. Golden Text — I came not to call the righteous, but sinners. Mark ii: 17.

(12.) Verse 15—What good or harm is done the cause of God by having banquets or other festive gatherings in connection with Christian work?

Lesson for Sunday, April 7, 1912. The Appearances of the Risen Lord. (Easter lesson.) I Cor. xv: 1-11.

The Best Treatment for Itching Scalps and Falling Hair

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It is well to place a light covering over the hair to protect the pillow from possible stain. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura soap and hot water. Shampoos alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is generally sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair. Notwithstanding Cuticura soap and ointment are sold everywhere, those wishing to try this treatment may do so without expense by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. 4M, Boston, U. S. A., for a free sample of Cuticura soap and ointment, with 32-p. book on skin and hair.

FROM POVERTY TO AFFLUENCE

A romantic and wonderfully successful career was closed by the death of Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, the well-known paper proprietor. Mr. Pulitzer was born near Buda-Pesth on April 10, 1847, his parents being Germans who had been living at the Hungarian capital for some years. Revolutions and rebellions were destined to break out all over Europe when he was still an infant, and the unrest occasioned by the abnormal political conditions was clinched by the great Hungarian famine of 1863. It was in the following year, 1864, that young Joseph Pulitzer, deciding that there were no attractions for him in his native country, started for the United States. He landed at Boston Harbour with but very little money in his pocket. It was said indeed, that he jumped overboard and swam ashore in order to avoid paying the head-tax on aliens. The young emigrant had another disqualification besides lack of means. He could not speak English. In spite of this he was not long in making his way from Boston to New York, where he arrived with exactly twenty cents. Bewildered by the noise, the confusion, the strange language, and finding himself at the end of his resources, Pulitzer began his life in the New World by enlisting as private in the Lincoln cavalry. He served as an orderly, and did no fighting, except on one occasion, when he knocked down an insolent officer who had insulted him. At the close of the war Pulitzer passed for a while through the bitter ordeal of unemployment, doing such odd jobs as he could get, and serving part of the time as a footman, and occasionally taking his night's rest in the public park. By and by he drifted to St. Louis, and for a while served on a Missouri ferry-boat; he also worked as a coal heaver, a coachman, a butler, and a waiter, and he thought himself exceptionally fortunate when given 16 Government mules to take charge of at Jefferson Barracks. But Pulitzer devoted every moment of his leisure to reading and self-education, and eventually, he got a situation as a reporter on a German paper published in St. Louis, working for a few dollars a week. The proprietors were contemplating ruin when young Pulitzer took the paper over from them and made it a success. He saved money, bought the "St. Louis Post-Dispatch," and made a fortune out of it in that fast-growing city. Meanwhile, having studied law, he turned attention to politics, and was elected as a Democrat, to the Missouri Legislature. The next move was to New York, and in 1883 Pulitzer purchased the "New York World" from Mr. Jay Gould. His success with that journal has rarely, if ever, been excelled. In the end he had overcome all the difficulties of his foreign extractions, and could dictate leading articles in fluent English which never failed to arrest attention. He made a huge fortune, but his success was not without its pathetic side. The strenuous work of his youth had weakened his eyes, and he was blind for the last 24 years of his life, and invalid, wandering everywhere in search of health and rest. Pulitzer, however, never lost his grip on the paper, and he kept it all the time America's foremost Democratic organ. Mr. Cleveland attributed his election as President, breaking the long run of Republican supremacy at the White House, to the "World;" but Pulitzer declined to bind himself to support the President's policy, and when Mr. Cleveland, in his autumn message to Congress on the Venezuela question, brought the United States seemingly to the verge of war with Britain, Mr. Pulitzer denounced the Message and the policy in terms which did him infinite credit. He was blind then, had been for several years, but he dictated strong leading articles attacking the statesmanship of men who, on a trifling question, and in the intended interest of a paltry South American Republic, would risk, if they did not even provoke, a war between two great kindred nations, leaders of the world's commerce and civilization, except tactful response to the challenge, the President met no other rebuke for that strange act at once so dignified and so earnest as those in the "World." Mr. Pulitzer's fortune is estimated to exceed $30,000,000—consisting partly of his newspaper properties and railway securities, and the rest real estate. Amongst his many benefactions he contributed $1,000,000 to the Columbia College of Journalism, which is founded on lofty ideals. His eldest son, Mr. Ralph Pulitzer, succeeds his father in the proprietorship and directorate of the "World."

RICHEST PART OF EMPIRE

Dr. Alfred Thompson Gives Yukon the Lead in Wealth.

Dr. Alfred Thompson, M.P., Yukon, says: I shall seek to enlist the support of the Dominion Government in a vigorous policy for the internal development of the Yukon district. The possibilities of that whole northern region are so great that I believe in the building of a railway from a point on Lynn canal in American territory, south to Skagway, right through to Dawson. I understand that there are two charters in existence virtually covering the same route, which has a decided advantage over the White Pass & Yukon Railway and steamboat route. The Dominion Government will also be asked to contribute more liberally in aid of a project for building a system of roads and trails, now badly needed throughout the region with Dawson as a centre. With proper encouragement by the Government I look for new discoveries which may equal if not surpass the former glory of the Klondike. I regard Yukon as the richest piece of territory under the British flag."

Piles Not Taken Seriously

"Annoying, but not dangerous, seems to be the way many think of piles in the early stages. But gradually they become worse, until they prevent sleep, undermine the nervous system and make a wreck of life.

When the doctor is finally consulted he considers the case so serious that he recommends the surgeon's knife as the only means of cure. It may cure, or it may kill. The risk is yours.

But there is an easier and surer way to relieve and cure piles. That is by applying Dr. Chase's Ointment. The earlier you begin the cure of this ointment the quicker the cure. But you need not be discouraged because you have suffered for ten or fifteen years. It would be difficult to imagine worse cases than have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. Relief comes at once and cure is just as certain if you persist in the use of this great ointment.

MERCY FOR THE HORSE

The Duke of Connaught Condemns Docking and Reckless Driving

"I think the docking of horses' tails is a relic of barbarism. The dealers may not agree with me—the horses sell better when they are docked. I think it is a shame to deprive this dumb animal of the tail which God has given it." This was the declaration of the Duke of Connaught at the annual meeting of the Ottawa Humane Society. His Royal Highness also spoke strongly against reckless driving and overloading, which the Humane Society is fighting in Ottawa. "I hope there will grow up a strong sentiment against reckless driving and overloading," he continued.

The well-to-do man is generally hard to do.—Leon Herald.

CAUGHT A BAD COLD.

DEVELOPED BRONCHITIS. SHE COULD HARDLY SPEAK.

Bronchitis begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, and there is a dry, harsh, croupy cough.

After a few days mucous begins to be raised. This is at first white, but later of a greenish or yellow color and is occasionally streaked with blood.

Cure the first symptoms of bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning to consumption.

Mrs. Edward Travers, Campbellton, N.B., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and let you know what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I caught a very bad cold which developed into bronchitis. I was so choked up I could hardly breathe. I tried many medicines but they did me no good, and I had almost given up in despair. A friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle and felt much better, and by the time I had taken four I was completely cured, and I can assure you I cannot say too much in its praise, as it is all you claim for it, and more."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

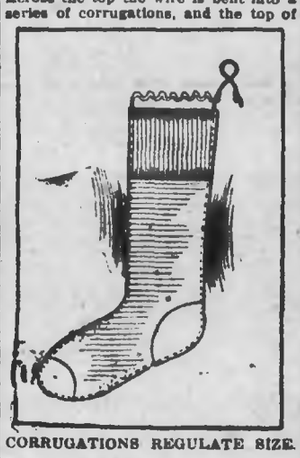
STOCKING STRETCHER

Wire Frame Can be Adjusted for Stocking of Any Size

An ingenious device is the stocking dryer and stretcher designed by a New York man and displayed here. As will be noted at first glance, it consists of a wire frame of the general shape of a leg and foot. What may not be seen at once, however, is the fact that this frame can be adjusted so that it will fill hosiery of any size. Across the top the wire is bent into a series of corrugations, and the top of



CORRUGATIONS REGULATE SIZE.

The wire fits into these corrugations—any one of them, according to the size of the stocking. For small hosiery the back wire is drawn up and in, and for larger goods, of course, is allowed to go out and down. Thus any pair of stockings can be dried and stretched on this frame as if the apparatus were made for that pair alone.

ASSISTING THE TOILERS

The Commendable Work of a Large Number of College Men

Since the inception of the Reading Camp Association work eleven years ago, 250 college men have donned the rough dress of the frontiersman and engaged in every kind of manual labor in order to share with him the benefits of education. One of the qualifications for a reading camp instructor is ability to do any kind of manual work, from building a dump on railway construction to breaking a jam of logs. This is an effort on the part of University men to mix things up a bit and share their blessings with the toilers in lumbering, mining, fishing and railway construction camps. It has the support of not a few employers of labor and many Canadian people, including H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, Sir Edmund Osler and Sir William Whyte. It has also the co-operation of five Provincial Governments. Almost from its inception the Presbyterian and Methodist Home Mission Committees have contributed to it. This is the first time that funds collected for denominational purposes were spent in undenominational work. In the early days Queen's and McGill provided traveling libraries to be used in the association reading rooms. Recently the students of the Presbyterian College, Montreal, contributed $100 to the work. Not only are students interested but some of the younger professors take an active interest in the work. Prof. Edwards, dean of the faculty of applied science, University of Alberta, voluntarily offered to pay periodical visits to the association's night schools on the G.T.P. in the Yellowhead Pass and carry in fresh literature. Ralph Connor has contributed $50 to furnish Prof. Edwards with a horse.

The same relief is ready for you. Are you sure you do not need it? If Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy helped Charles Holmes, why won't it help you?

"I was troubled with heart disease, and after reading about Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I got a bottle. Before I got the Heart Remedy I had to sit up most of the night, and felt very bad at my stomach. Whatever I would eat made me feel worse, and my heart beat very fast. But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I am all right now. I eat good, sleep good, and feel like a new man, although I am almost 66 years old. I have been a soldier in the late war of the rebellion, and was badly wounded." CHARLES HOLMES, Private Co. TOOK THE SHILLING

A recruiting-sergeant one day met an ignorant country youth idling, with his hands in his pockets, and standing before a house on the front of which was a notice informing the public that the building was to be sold. The notice ran thus, "To be Sold by Private Treaty."

The sergeant approached the youth and asked him if he had ever thought of joining the Army.

"Not me," was the reply. "You'd have nothing in the Army worth talking about."

"Is that so?" said the other. "Well, how is it then, Private Treaty has a house for sale, and him only a private yet?"

The youth looked thoughtful and puzzled, and presently, over a pint of ale, the possibility of owning a house by joining the Army grew into a certainty, and the shilling changed hands.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron.

The older I grow the more deeply I am impressed with the interterxture of character—that is, the invariable effect of self-indulgence and lack of control in any one direction upon the whole character.

For instance, I believe that the child who is freely allowed to give way to his temper in his youth, in nine cases out of ten, will be the man who gives free rein to his passion in his manhood.

And conversely, I believe that every time a man exerts control over himself in any way—overcomes passion, restrains temper, gives up some self-indulgence, masters his tongue when it would speak foolishly or unkindly, compels concentration, or in any way does the wiser, harder thing, instead of following the course of least resistance, he strengthens his whole character and increases his ability to do only that particular thing, but each and everyone of these things again.

It seems to me it is as if a king should make some strong demonstration of his authority against a rebellious faction in one part of his kingdom, and should thereafter find it much easier to control other factions in the rest of his realm.

Let us imagine for instance, a man whose doctor has told him he must walk more if he wants to keep well and strong and efficient. "Don't swing onto a street car every time you have a few blocks to travel," the physician has warned him. "Walk man. If you don't want to rust before your time, you've got to exercise more."

Let us also suppose that this man has a terrible temper, which all his life he has had to fight to concontrol.

Now some cold unpleasant morning this man comes out of his office to go downtown for his lunch. It is only a fifteen-minute walk, and he knows he ought to walk it, but just as he comes out of the door he sees the downtown car stopping right in front of him and jumps on. Now, I believe that this man, in doing that, has not only weakened his power to obey the doctor's orders another time, but has also lessened his ability to control his temper.

Suppose some other day this man has been put in a most irritating position and has managed to keep his temper. Don't you think that that success will help him not only to control his temper the next time, but also to do the right thing by his health?

I do.

And because of this intertexture of character, I believe that mothers who are so unselfish that they get their children into habits of self-indulgence do their offspring far more harm than they realize. For the whole texture of the child's character is weakened. Not only will he find it harder to be unselfish, but he will find it harder to control his temper and his tongue, to master his passions or to exert control over himself in any one of the thousand directions in which life will demand it of him.

Perhaps you are laughing at my psychology, and thinking my doctrine of the intertexture of character absurdly strained and overdrawn. If you are I wish you would watch your own character, and see if my theory does not work out true.

Try to see if periods of self-indulgence in any one direction do not weaken your control in all directions; and efforts toward self-restraint and self-government in any one direction do not make you more the master of your whole great kingdom.

Ruth Cameron

THE HIGHER CRITIC

(BY JUNE GUYTHORNE FISKALE)

Here's to the "Higher Critic," who now holds a pulpit down,
In any church of Jesus Christ, no matter where the town.
I want to speak, this openly, just what I think of you;
And of the things you're preaching from the pulpit to the pew.

You boldly state that Moses never wrote the Pentateuch:
In fact, you tear to pieces all that's good within The Book.
You tell us that poor Adam never was in Paradise;
That Enoch never walked with God, translated to the skies;

That Israel never crossed the sea, a walking on the sand;
That there were never giants, in the fabled Canaan land;
The walls of Jericho fell not, when ram's horns sounded loud;
There was no ark of covenant, or fiery pillar cloud.

You relegate to mystic lore, that Noah built the ark;
That Cain his brother Abel slew, and after bore God's mark;
God never gave commandments, from the mount of Sinai;
And never loved His people, as the apple of His eye.

Nebuchadnezzar, for his sin, was made to eat no grass.

Elijah on Mount Carmel, never met the priests of Baal;
Nor prayed to God, who sent the fire, their wicked souls to quail.
And Abraham, the faithful, never offered up his son;
Nor was Job ever tempted, till the victory he won.

The water never turned to wine; the widow's son, of Nain,
Was never raised to life and health by Jesus, once again;
The multitudes were never fed, by loaves and fishes small;
You say, when all is done and said, there's nothing true at all.

You dare to teach that Jesus never healed the lepers ten;
Nor broke the hold that demons had upon the sons of men;
The Holy Ghost did not descend, on day of Pentecost;
Poor sinners were not purchased, by the Blood, at such a cost.

'Tis foolishness, "Come sinners, weak and wounded, sick and sore;"
The Blood has lost its healing, and the cross of Christ its power.
He's not in vale of shadows, near the sick on dying bed;
He's not, "The resurrection and the life," as once He said.

Paul never shook the viper from his hand into the fire:
And John, the revelator, is a most prodigious liar.
There never was a Satan, and there won't be any hell;
This, is the song you love to sing, the story which you tell.

Since this is all so different, from the truths the church has taught;
I wonder what's the matter; is the church by Satan caught?
I find the doctrines, disciplines, and creeds are just the same;
That isn't where the trouble lies; who then must bear the blame?

You preachers, who are pastors, fill the pulpits, far and near;
And preach from these same pulpits, 'gainst the truths the church holds dear
You secured your ordinations, by subscribing to the creeds;
But prove yourselves dishonest by your words and by your deeds.

You teachers, in the colleges, supported by the church;
Who pretend to wondrous knowledge, and to marvellous research;
Who are really jackals, tearing at the vitals of all truth;
Sowing seeds of dire disaster, in the fertile minds of youth.

Your preaching sounds like Ingersoll's; but lacks his wit and spell;
Supported too, you are by those who love the Saviour well;
Even Methodists, of Canada, have lived to see the day,
When you have dared to openly upon their pulpits prey

If you were true, or honest, you would instantly resign,
From any church, whose doctrines you so constantly malign
You're under solemn contract, to declare the Bible true;
That contract makes your living; while the Bible you eschew.

Then, is it false to say that you are mongrels of low breed?
You snap the food up quickly; but you bite the hands that feed.
As sheep, you gained admission to the lambs you now assail;
You're wolves, but far too lazy to go hunting on the trail.

How dare you stand as minister of such and such a church,
And by your teachings foul your nest, its best loved truths besmirch!
How dare you make a liar of the holy Son of God!
How dare you slime the very paths His sacred feet have trod!

How dare you say that that is false, which Jesus says is true!
And palm off long exploded lies, and claim they're something new!
Your "New theology," all false, is old as sin and death.
It bites just like the Serpent's fang; it smells of Satan's breath.

You claim a higher privilege, than man has ever known.
The right to criticise your God, and drag Him from His throne:
The right to make a hypocrite of Jesus Christ, the Lord.
The right to judge the Infinite, and tear His holy word.

Don't let them run your schools, and steal the pulpits of your land!
They're anarchists, and traitors, 'gainst the kingdom of our God!

CONTRACT IS BENEFICIAL

Mr. Morine Replies in Defence of His Public Career in Newfoundland

DEALS WITH RESIGNATION

Ottawa, March 30.—A. B. Morine, K.C., issued a statement last night to the press. It is, in part, as follows:

"Being informed over the telephone, that Mr. Carvell, M.P., was speaking about me in the Commons, I at once went to the gallery to listen, and I now submit a reply to what I then heard him say.

"I can give an outline only of the facts relating to my resignation from the Government of Newfoundland in 1908, at the request of Governor Murray. They are as follows:

"Governor Murray was personally opposed very bitterly to the Reid railway contract, adopted by the Legislature, and after is passage became embittered against me for some fancied slight I was accused of showing him. The opponents of that measure urged him to punish me, the man most connected with the measure, in their opinion, and the most energetic member of the administration. One of the most active of these politicians was the Very Rev. M. F. Howley, whose letter abusing me was read by Mr. Carvell.

"It was a public fact that I was and had been the general legal adviser of R. G. Reid, the contractor. No secret had been made of this, for I openly acted in that capacity in the courts. I had specially asked the Premier, Sir James Winter, if it were desirable that I should remain in the Cabinet, and had remained at his request. Other counsel for the contractor had sat in the previous Cabinet with the knowledge and acquiescence of Governor Murray himself. The governor knew that I acted for Reid, and he made no protest or took any action till moved to do so for party ends and because of his personal feeling. Any objection that might be to the situation on principle was offset in this case by the fact that the Reid railway contract, 1889, was unanimously supported by the members of the Legislature supporting the Government and by half of the Opposition, led by the present Premier of Newfoundland, Sir E. P. Morris. Though amended disadvantageously, that measure remains in force to this day, to the general advantage of the country, and now it is almost universally admitted that the contract was a splendid one for the country. I may add that St. John's newspaper, which asserted that corrupt influences were used to support the measure, was sued for libel and most unreservedly withdrew its imputations.

"After my resignation my colleague urged my appointement. Governor Murray though reconciled to me personally, demurred to a reappointment and soon retired. His successor, Governor McCallum, immediately restored me to office, officially sending me a letter."

Mr. Morine here cites a portion of a eulogistic letter by Governor McCallum at this time, and continues:

"I may add that at the next general election in 1904 I was re-elected by my constituents, whose confidence was given to me for twenty years without a single defeat. I became and continued leader of the Opposition until I resigned to come to Canada.

"I served in office under Governor MacCallum for several months in 1899, and then on a question of policy I again ceased to be a member of the Government of Newfoundland. Then, free from office, I once more became Reid's legal adviser, entering into a contract for my exclusive professional services. I acted under it till 1906, when it was terminated by agreement.

"It was represented to Mr. Reid that his relation with the Government could never be friendly and that the political opposition of the Rt. Rev. Dr. Howley, a strong supporter of the Government, would not cease while I was Reid's legal adviser. Mr. Reid came from Montreal, where he resided to solve the difficulty after consultation with me. I had abandoned my private practice to become his legal adviser, and had a moral and legal claim for my unexpired time. Mr. Reid had also promised me extra remuneration for what he was pleased to regard as peculiarly good work done for him by me in a large arbitration. He was anxious to compensate me properly, but he desired to avoid the further friction which he feared might occur if I remained in the colony. Knowing that I had long contemplated a return to this, my native country, he offered to commute my claim on him by paying to me annually, if I resided in Canada, a portion of the yearly salary which I was entitled to under my contract.

"Very strong language derogatory of me was quoted by Mr. Carvell from a letter written by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Howley of St. John's, Newfoundland, the Roman Catholic archbishop of St. John's, not, as Mr. Carvell called him, 'the bishop of Newfoundland.' My deference to the office Dr. Howley holds overcomes my anger at his wanton assault, and I refrain from saying more than this, that where we are both equally well known in Newfoundland—no surprise would be felt at any violent thing he might say about me.

"As proof of the place I hold in the public opinion of Newfoundland, may I be pardoned by saying under the great provocation which has been given that I have repeatedly been urged to return to the colony to lead a party, and that for two years I have been unanimously elected president of the Newfoundland Society in Newfoundland."

DISCUSSION OF BRIDGES

S. Mageau Wonders Why There Are So Few Bridge Items on the Card For His Constituency

MAY SECURE MORE

Toronto, March 30.—That the income of the Ontario Government for rental of the T. & N. O. Railway line may not be at all limited to the $300,000 received from the G.T.R. for running rights between North Bay and Cochrane, was brought out in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, when the agreement was under consideration in committee. The Opposition leader took occasion to remark that the $300,000 rental for the use of the T. & N. O. line looked pretty cheap from the standpoint of the G.T.R., whatever advantage there was in it for the Government.

Hon. W. J. Hanna did not agree with Mr. Rowell. He cited as a comparison the G.T.R. line between Toronto and Hamilton, for the use of which the C.P.R. paid $40,000 rental. This amount to $1,000 per mile, while the G.T.R. was paying $1,200 per mile for running rights on the T. & N. O., with only one-fifth the traffic of the Toronto-Hamilton line.

Mr. Rowell was afraid that if another railway came to secure running rights over the T. & N. O. tracks, the G.T.R. would receive an abatement in the rental of $300,000.

Hon. W. J. Hanna explained that the agreement with the Grand Trunk Railway giving that company running rights over the T. & N. O. line did not mean that the commission could not make a similar agreement with other companies and still further increase the large revenue of the Government-owned road. If a similar arrangement was made with another railway for running rights, it would not affect the G.T.R.'s present rental.

Mr. Rowell had endeavored to convince the members that the Grand Trunk was getting the long end of the deal. This company would only pay 4 1-2 per cent. on half the cost of the road, but still would have full use of it.

After firing a volley of questions at Hon. Dr. Reaume, the leader of the Opposition veered on the subject of the Elk Lake road. "Can the hon. Minister tell me if the Government sent a party of surveyors up to Elk Lake to make a survey of the proposed line immediately preceding the election?" asked Mr. Rowell.

The hon. Minister referred to, said that he could not keep track of all the movements of the engineers employed by the Government at the particular time mentioned by Mr. Rowell.

"Can the hon. Minister tell me when the Government decided to build this Elk Lake line?" persisted the Opposition leader.

"I can't tell you exactly," answered the Minister of Public Works. "We don't keep dates of what goes on from time to time. If the hon. member wishes to get facts in regard to the date of the Government's decision, he had better ask Mr. Englehart, chairman of the T. & N. O. Commission." The incident here dropped.

The bill regarding charitable institutions and hospitals was given its second reading. The Provincial Secretary made an amendment to the effect that all hospitals receiving aid must admit patients suffering from tuberculosis. He said that four years ago there were only nine or ten hospitals which would attend to people suffering from consumption. All doors will have to be open to these sufferers now.

Z. Mageau, Liberal member for Sturgeon Falls, stirred up a lively debate when he charged the Government with discrimination in the construction of bridges in Conservative and Liberal constituencies.

"I don't find a bridge for Sturgeon Falls district in these estimates," said Mr. Mageau. "Six petitions have been sent to the Government for a bridge and improvements to roads."

Dr. Reaume said petitions did not matter. The Department did the best it could, but couldn't please everybody.

Military Tactics at Brockville.

Brockville, March 30.—A number of men, prominent in the Army Medical Service of the Canadian militia, spent a day in Brockville and vicinity doing some practical field work. Last spring the culmination of the big "war game" was an imaginary action in the valley to the west and south of Lynn between two large forces. The medical men went out to the scene of the action to carry out their part of the game, that is to say, the care of the injured.

Among the officers in the party were: Col. G. Carleton Jones, director general of the Canadian Medical Service; Major C. A. Hodgetts, medical officer of the Conservation commission; Major F. L. Vaux, Major R. Lorne Gardner, Major Newtalley, Ottawa; Major Potter of Toronto, Capt. A. E. Snell, Kingston, and Major F. T. Murphy of Halifax.

The party dispersed yesterday after putting in a solid day's work in the field.

A Valuable Aid in Fighting Tuberculosis

The modern weapons against the "White Plague" are fresh air and nourishing food. For years Cod Liver Oil has been recognized as probably the best form of nourishment.

The difficulty has been with its nauseating taste and its tendency to upset the digestion. In the nasty taste and the indigestibility have been done away with entirely. The Compound is very agreeable both to the palate and the stomach. At the same time it retains the nutritive and curative properties of the pure Norwegian Oil, strengthened by the addition, in just the right proportions, of Extract of Malt, Wild Cherry, and Hypophosphites of Lime, Soda, Potassium, Manganese and Iron.

When a cold or cough "hangs on", particularly with a child or growing boy or girl, don't take chances. Start right in with a bottle of Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound—it will quickly build up the strength to throw off the cough or cold.

Ask your druggist about Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound. He has it—or can get it—in 50c. and $1.00 bottles. 103

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 30.—Business men in this city are up in arms against clergymen, who petitioned the council to force the Sunday closing of theatres, holding the conditions in Niagara Falls, Ont., as model.

At a meeting yesterday afternoon representatives of theatrical and business houses decided to attempt to close grocery stores and all other places of business if the theatres are forced to close.

If the threats are carried out, thousands of dollars of Canadian money will be lost to the city every Sunday. Every Sunday hundreds of people come here from nearby Canadian places. The police court is filled with Canadian drunks every Monday morning. This is the most wide-open city in the state.

"There," a self satisfied commercial traveler said; "that's what I think you should do in the matter. I'm not a lawyer, but this is a bit of advice that costs you nothing. What do you think of it?"

"Well," replied his companion mildly, "it's worth it."—New York Mail.

A HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR

A Little Sage and Sulphur Makes Gray Hair Vanish—A Remedy for All Hair Troubles

Who does not know the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of colour and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its colour or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented. Special agent, Warne Drug Co.

Suffragette Advises Boycott.

London, March 30.—At a meeting of suffragettes held last night in protest against what the speaker described as their "Base betrayal by the House of Commons," Mrs. Despard, who was sentenced to prison in 1909, and was once arrested for picketing Premier Asquith's house, said the time had arrived for the militant suffragettes to adopt more effective methods to gain their desires.

She urged, in effect, a boycott. She said the women should not buy hats, which would hurt the tradesmen worse than window-smashing, declared that they should not go to a seaside resort represented in Parliament by men of anti-suffragist tendencies, and should not subscribe funds to churches or institutions or invest their money in England.

Advent of Porcupine

The most important event in the mining industry of Canada takes place this afternoon when the stamp mill at the Dome Mines, Porcupine, is placed in operation. This will mark the advent of this camp among the great and permanent gold-producing centres of the world.

In order to keep our clients accurately posted as to actual conditions at the properties now being energetically developed by thoroughly trained engineers we wish the great investing public to know that we will have a practical man make a personal examination during the next few days.

HIS EYES ARE TRAINED AND NOTHING WILL ESCAPE HIM.

The expense of this trip is a trifle in comparison to the benefit which such information will be to those interested in the mining resources of Porcupine as well as a guide to future investments in this market.

To all who wish a synopsis of this tour of inspection or a complete report on any of the actively developed properties in Porcupine we will gladly send on request. In the meantime WE ADVISE THE IMMEDIATE PURCHASE OF DOME EXTENSION AND CROWN CHARTERED. Much higher prices are predicted. Write for our Weekly Market Letter which contains the most authentic information obtainable.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE WADED INTO GARBAGE SCHEME AND RECOMMENDED APPOINTMENTS

Will Ask Council to Confirm Appointment of Mr. J. Meharry as Sanitary Inspector and Mr. Chas. Scriver as Contractor for Garbage Collecting.

THE INSPECTOR'S DUTIES

THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE RECOMMEND.

That Mr. John Meharry be appointed Sanitary Inspector, at a salary of $780 a year, duties to begin May 1st.

That Mr. Chas. Scriver's tender of $2,750.00 to collect garbage in the district outlined by the City for a year, be accepted.

That a garbage by-law be passed.

That a by-law defining the duties of the Sanitary Inspector be passed.

A meeting of the Property Committee was held on Friday night with Ald. Duncan presiding, and with Mayor Bradburn, and Aldermen Morgan, Brown and Graham present.

One tender for the contract of collecting the garbage in the city, according to the proposed scheme, was received and one only.

Mr. Charles Scriver was the applicant and agreed to do the work in the district outlined by the Council, for $2,750.00. He stated that he would do the work as prescribed by the by-law, and give a guarantee as to its fulfillment.

Moved by Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Morgan, that Mr. Scriver's tender be accepted.—Carried.

The Calls to be Made.

City Clerk Armstrong had prepared a list of the residences, shops, etc., that would have to be called upon in the district outlined. This has already been given in detail in these columns. They are practically as follows:

1,130 residences at 15c a month.
35 hotels, fruit and fish stores, at 40c a month.
222 stores at 25c a month.

Thus, the city will receive approximately $254.65 a month from those who are served by the garbage collecting system, or a yearly sum estimated at $3,055.80.

Upon Ald. Graham's suggestion it was decided to leave out the schools and churches in the district. However, the garbage collector may contract to remove ashes, etc. from these institutions, if he desires.

Other Calls to be Made.

In the area outlined there are in addition to the above, 6 liveries, 11 blacksmith shops, 2 carriage works, 9 laundries, 1 fire hall, 2 rinks, 4 theatres, and 14 club rooms. These are included in the places to be called upon and a charge of 15 cents a month will be levied.

Collection of the Money.

Ald. Duncan—"How are you going to collect the money?

Ald. Morgan—"I think the easiest way would be to put it on the taxes, and the landlord could take it out of his tenant. You won't lose anything that way."

Ald. Duncan—"That means that it will have to be collected yearly or half-yearly.

Mayor Bradburn—"The only objection I have is that it is getting back on to the taxpayers, and we have been trying to keep the rate down.

Ald. Morgan—"If a house was vacant would you have to pay just the same for it?"

Ald. Duncan—"Yes, that's the way they pay for the water. There followed a general discussion during which Ald. Duncan remarked: "This looks like a small problem, but the more you get into the details the worse it seems to get."

Sanitary Inspector to do it.

It was then suggested that the Sanitary Inspector could do it. He had to cover the ground regularly, anyway, and this might not prove too much of an extra burden.

The money could be collected quarterly.

Mayor Bradburn—"Would you have it paid in advance?"

Ald. Graham—"I think I would."

Ald. Duncan—"Personally, I would favour that, but I think there would be a large number who would object."

Begins May 1st.

The Chairman stated that the system is to be begun on May 1st. He also stated that the agreement did not call for the removal of ashes, etc., that had been allowed to collect all winter. The collector began on May 1st and only the garbage from after that date was to be collected.

Moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham, that it be a part of the Sanitary Inspector's duties to collect the money from those who benefit from the system. It was de-

STRUCK BY BROKEN BELT

Mr. Wilfrid Dwyer Loses Sight of Left Eye in Quaker Oats Co's Plant Last Evening

PAINFUL ACCIDENT

An accident of a very serious and painful nature occurred last evening to Mr. Wilfred Dwyer of 645 Rogers street, whilst employed in the Quaker Oats Company's plant.

He was working in the grinding department when suddenly a belt broke and struck him a blow across the face tearing away the flesh of the left eye. Dr. McNulty was summoned and attended the injured person, when it was discovered that although the eye had not been actually removed, the chances of his recovering the sight of the eye are very remote. He was afterwards taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Happily the belt was only revolving at a moderate speed for had it been running at full speed he must surely have been killed. As it is he will be prevented from working for some time.

THE HERPICIDE GIRL KNOWS

While shopping the most annoying thing for me is to have someone try to sell me something "just as good" when I ask for Newbro's Herpicide. To be sure there are not many druggists who do this, but what few there are should know that such a poley will destroy the customer's confidence. When they try it on me I never wait for the story, simply hunt a store where they will sell me what I want.

It is absurd for anyone to say that a preparation is as good as Herpicide. I don't think they believe it themselves. Every druggist knows that there is but one genuine, original dandruff germ destroyer and that is Newbro's Herpicide.

It keeps the head free from dandruff, prevents the hair from coming out and stops itching of the scalp.

Herpicide is really a wonderful remedy which does just what you want and expect it to do.

One dollar size bottles are guaranteed. Sold by all druggists. Applications at good barber shops.

MANY DISMISSALS NO REASON GIVEN

BEAVERTON, March 30. — Five lock masters, five bridge tenders and one lighthouse tender on the Lake Simcoe and Balsom Lake Division of the Trent Canal received word from Ottawa yesterday that their services would not be required after March 31. No reasons are given for the dismissals.

ONTARIO BADLY PREPARED FOR STRIKE ONLY A WEEK'S COAL SUPPLY IN TORONTO

Price of Coal All Over the Province Will Go Up With a Bound if a Strike is Declared ---Bituminous Miners Have Come to Terms With the Operators But Hard Coal Difficulties Are Not Yet Settled—Latest Despatches on the Situation.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, MARCH 30.—A canvass of the large local coal yards this morning reveals the fact that there is no more than a week's supply of hard and soft coal on hand here, or known to be in transit. If a strike occurs in the coal fields in Pennsylvania and Ohio next week, there will be nothing to spare for the outside cities and towns of Ontario. It is learned by wire from representative places in both Eastern and Western Ontario, that most coal distributing points in Ontario are in a similar position. Coal dealers here fear that the first move of the United States' officials, if the strike is declared, will be to peremptorily commandeer all Canadian coal in transit on that side of the border and hold it for United States' use. This would be quite according to international law and precedent.

MONTREAL, Q., MARCH 30.—The dealers here say the price of coal all over Ontario and Quebec will go up with a bound if a strike is declared. It is stated here that there is not enough coal in stock to keep the city and district going one week.

Soft Coal Difficulty Settled.

TORONTO, MARCH 30.—A private message received here this morning intimates that the soft coal miners in the Pittsburg district, have agreed to the terms of settlement offered by the operators. No settlement has been made yet in other districts, or with the hard coal miners.

Wind Was So High and Water So Choppy on the Putney Course That Inter-collegiate Race Was Postponed.

CAMBRIDGE SWAMPED

Special to The Examiner:

PUTNEY, ENG., MARCH 30.—The Cambridge crew's boat swamped, and the Oxfords shell practically waterlogged to-day in contesting for the famous classic rowing honours, owing to high winds and choppy water. Both crews stuck to it bravely for some miles. Finally, with Oxford leading, the race was declared off.

The Oxford-Cambridge race will be rowed again Monday. It was almost the unanimous opinion of the thousands of spectators that it was Oxford's race.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 30.—"To use the power of filling positions as a reward for party service without regard to the character and capacity of the individual selected is a gross breach of a solemn public trust. A Big Merger

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, MARCH 30.—Sir Rodolphe Forget, M. P., this morning met representatives of the Richilieu Ontario, Inland Navigation Co., the Niagara Navigation Co. and other smaller concerns, regarding a merger of these interests into the biggest fresh water steamship connection in the world. To newspaper men before the conference commenced, Forget admitted that most points of difference had been settled and the details only of the amalgamation had to be arranged.

SEVENTY-FIVE AUTOS ARE OWNED IN THE CITY

Fact Brought Out at Organization Meeting of Automobile Association—Mr. A. H. Stratton Elected President.

TO JOIN MOTOR LEAGUE

The Peterborough Automobile Association was formed last night at a meeting of about twenty-five car owners in the Bank of Montreal chambers. A good list of officers was elected and prospects appear to be bright for an effective auto organization.

The officers elected were:
Hon. Pres.—Dr. Halliday.
President—Mr. A. H. Stratton.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. R. W. Travers.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Chas. Ackerman.
Committee—Messrs. J. J. Duffus, (chairman), A. E. Coulthard, Vincent Eastwood, E. G. Patterson, W. H. Denham and Dr. Frederick.

Among those present at the meeting were Messrs. A. H. Stratton, J. J. Duffus, F. R. G. McPherson, B. D. Hall, G. Rakkham, Vincent Eastwood, Dr. Amys, Chas. Banks, Alex. Miller, P. Bond, Dr. Halliday, Dr. Hammond, T. Brightman, Dr. Halloway, W. H. Denham, Jas. Moher, Dr. Greer, Ald. Buller, F. W. Doan.

Mr. A. H. Stratton was appointed chairman pro tem and briefly reviewed the purposes of the meeting.

To Affiliate With O. M. L.

It was decided to affiliate with the Ontario Motor League in order to enjoy the benefits of that association. The membership to the local association is $5.00, of which $3.00 goes to the Ontario Motor League. If a member thinks he has been unjustly fined by a magistrate the League will take up his case and will also look after appeals.

Mr. McPherson moved, seconded by Mr. F. W. Doan, that an effort may be made to have the secretary of the Ontario Motor League visit Peterborough.—Carried.

Ald. Duffus expressed himself as being heartily in accord with the idea of a local automobile association and would like to see the local branch affiliated with the Ontario Association. Automobile owners would be protected in case of accident, and at the same time insist that the laws governing speed be regarded. This would be in the interests of both owners and the public. He explained how careless individuals brought a bad name on all auto owners or drivers.

Mr. V. Eastwood brought up the subject of good roads and thought automobiles would help that desirable end, which would be a general benefit to the community.

Mr. Frank MacPherson spoke along similar lines. It was stated that there are 75 automobiles in this city.

MR. J. A. ELLIS, M.P.P., for West Ottawa, whose tax reform bill will be considered by a committee of the Legislature which will sit during the recess.

What Drovers Say About The Market

Drovers, farmers and those who to any extent deal in hogs, and require the use of the market scales for weighing purposes are not strongly in favour of the prospect of the removal of the cattle pens from the market.

Yesterday morning Mayor Bradburn looked over the place and returned ore impressed than ever that the pens should go. The drovers say that they will get a scales and pens for themselves, but this appears to be an idle threat. Farmers and others also stated in a census that was held yesterday, that they would take their goods to Lakefield, Keene, Indian River, and other places where there is every accommodation. They point out that the removal of all the pens will be a great inconvenience to those bringing in cattle and hogs.

A drover goes on a buying trip through the country and arranges to have cattle delivered at the market on a certain day. Then when they begin to come a pen is practically necessary in order to handle them before they are taken down to the car where they will be loaded or disposed of in any other manner.

NEW HOME OF THE VICTORIA MUSEUM WILL BE THROWN OPEN TO THE PUBLIC IN A FEW DAYS

RELICS OF BOER WAR

Through the indefatigable efforts of Mr. T. A. S. Hay, a new and well appointed public museum is destined to become a reality. For several weeks past Mr. Hay has been working quietly and unostentatiously upon the task of converting a portion of the upper storey of the Public Library into rooms suitable for the display of curios. The entire collection of historical relics that for many years have found refuge at Inverlea, have been transferred to their new quarters, where they have been systematically arranged in attractive cases. The larger exhibits, which are too cumbersome to store in glass cases, have been conveniently arranged around the walls.

A collection of tropical plants also an alligator and a striking specimen of the business end of a sword fish, all from Florida, occupy a prominent place in the building. Several historical documents and pictures, among the latter being an excellent photograph of the inauguration of the first Legislature dated 1867, and an invitation to a Mansion House ball in celebration of the successful issue of the peace negotiations following the battle of Waterloo, are also included among the collection. Mineral collections obtained from the geological survey and from the coral islands of the South seas are extensive and interesting, representing as they do, samples of the wealth-producing ores and other minerals that are both unique and rare.

An interesting relic of the Boer war adorns the glass case at one end of the room. It is a large, blood-stained, bullet-riddled flag, representing the Boer colours, and was taken down by the British troops at the capture of Johannesburg.

Among the collection of birds are included all of the species known to exist in Canada, and many foreign specimens. A vulture which fell before the gun of a hunter in Dummer, and is the only known specimen ever shot in Canada, finds a conspicuous place among the collection. Bears, opposums, wolves and a full representation of all the fur-bearing animals of Canada are here exhibited.

It will be several days yet before the museum will be opened to the public, pending the decision of the Library Board, as to what days of the week the public will be admitted to the exhibit. It has been suggested that the museum be thrown open to the public two afternoons of each week.

Mr. Hay, to whom the credit is due for the innovation of a long felt want in the way of a public museum suitable for the satisfactory housing of the vast collection of relics which have long found an inadequate resting place at Inverlea, has been appointed curator. It will be several days before the work of arranging and labelling the exhibit is completed and until such time as this is done the doors of the museum will remain closed to the public.

BUTTER WAS SCARCE TO-DAY

Market Small and Even Grocers Were More Numerous Among Buyers---No Potatoes

COUNTRY ROADS BAD

The market was limited all the way around this morning for some reason or other, the country roads contributing somewhat by reason of their present condition. Butter was extremely scarce and sold at 27 and 28c by 11 o'clock, although previous to that time it was down to 25c.

The market is a place of small financing. For instance a farmer's wife wanted to change a dollar. She had sold two lbs. of butter at 27c, and she did not have a copper to make change. She leaned towards a neighbor, and said, "Can you lend me a cent, Agnes?" and the difficulty was overcome.

Eggs sold at 22 and 23c with the offering limited.

SCRAMBLE FOR BUTTER

The trouble this morning was the absence of many of the regular sellers. As a result the market resolved itself into a number of groups of buyers who surrounded a basket of butter after the manner of a morning bargain counter scramble.

BUTTER VERY SCARCE

It was noticed this morning that a number of grocers were looking for butter. The fact was that some came to the market as a last resort. One grocer stated that he had telephoned all around the country and had tried in the city, but was unable to secure anything worth while. He therefore had to depend what what he could secure at the market.

P. C. Kidd stopped what appeared to be an ambitious attempt on the part of a Jew to corner the egg market. He had bought about one hundred dozen when the policeman took a hand in the game.

There were no potatoes offering today and those who wanted them had to depend upon the grocers who were quoting $1.85.

ONLY BEN DAVIS

Apples have dwindled down to the humble Ben Davis with but a few of other varieties being sold. The lean season for apples has arrived.

Poultry was scarce and there were not many buyers. One display was of five ducks, that had been black instead of white before they had been shorn of their feathers, and the woman who said she was selling for a neighbor was kept busy explaining the dark appearance of the skin.

On the whole the market was slimly attended and no special advantages were offered to buyers this morning.

There was only a little beef on the market to-day, an indication of the passing of the fresh meat season.

Prices were as follows:
Butter per lb., 25c to 28c.
Eggs per doz., 22 and 23c.
Pork—fronts, 11c; hinds, 12c.
Beef—fronts, 8 and 9c; hinds, 9 and 10c.
Potatoes (stores) $1.85.
Live hogs, $7.75.
Dressed hogs, $9.75.
Farmers' hides, 9c.
Butchers' hides, 10c.

Overfatness Condemned

Fat, or even fattish, women readers who want to be in the mode this year must understand that the demand is for lines, not curves, and govern themselves accordingly.

That means OFF with the fat. It has become a duty. Many are trying exercise or dieting; but it is certain they will find these methods too slow, and undesirable. The cheapest and safest way to get in form for the Directoire mode is by means of Marmola Prescription Tablets. Any druggists (or the Marmola Co., 503 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.) will give you a large sized case of these elegant little fat reducers, containing a good, generous supply, for seventy-five cents and even this quantity should be enough to make a decided impression on your excess fat. Many have lost as much as a pound a day.

These Marmola Prescription Tablets may be used with impunity and likewise perfect confidence, for, being made strictly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription, they are, of course, quite harmless. They are rather beneficial than otherwise, in fact, never disturbing the stomach or causing a wrinkling of the flesh.

A PREPOSTEROUS PROPOSAL.

A proposal is made to expend $100,000 for the purpose of placing Niagara Falls in the picture-show class—to subject the greatest natural beauty in the world to electric flash-light illumination. It is stated that the state of New York has contributed $50,000 on condition that Ontario will contribute a like amount for this circus feature. It is hoped that Ontario won't do anything of the kind. The spirit of utilitarianism in the form of electrical development, a justifiable enterprise, has destroyed the natural beauty of Niagara Falls enough without adding the freak idea of illumination and degrading the grandest and most majestic work of nature to the vulgar level of a 'Coney Island.' The world is going daft over loud display and flamboyant reachings after sensational effects, but the disgusting cheapness of the idea of de-naturing Niagara Falls as proposed, represents the halting point. To spend $100,000 to "paint the lily" is the acme of absurdity, an act of costly vandalism.

WHAT ABOUT NICKEL?

What's the objection to Sir James Whitney's treating Ontario nickel on the same principle that Hon. A. S. Hardy applied to saw logs and pulp wood, preventing their exportation in an unmanufactured condition? Pulp wood exported in the log brings about $7 per cord; manufactured into pulp it is worth about $35 to $40 per cord, and manufactured into paper it is worth from $80 to $100 per cord. We allow nickel matte to the value of four million dollars a year to be exported. This, fully refined, gains a value of forty-six million dollars. The nickel matte is exported to the United States, where its value is increased nearly a dozen fold by refinement. The Toronto World advocates the imposition of an export duty, which will give Canada the benefit of the greatly increased value (largely represented by labour) which comes from refinement of the matter to the ultimate point of purity. The question is one well worth discussing and the Conservation commission might set itself the problem for solution. The value of our great natural resources we boast so much about, is relative, to the extent to which their economic utilisation gives employment to labour and other wise keeps in the country the fullest possible advantages to the people who own these resources.

THE BRITISH COLUMBIA ELECTIONS.

The British Columbia general elections have resulted in the return of 40 Conservatives and 2 Socialists. Some persons may regard Socialism as something undesirable and dangerous, but it is easily possible that forty Conservatives, left with, practically, a free hand, may do more harm to the province than if the conditions were reversed and there were 40 Socialists and 2 Conservatives elected. Mr. McBride got his unanimous majority, so to speak on the appeal to popular imagination of gigantic railway subsidies. The people apparently, got the idea that railways will make them rich. It is to be hoped, though it is not hopeful, that the people of British Columbia will not repent in sack cloth and ashes and bankruptcy, their excess of confidance in electing a legislature practically without opposition. A legislature of angels, without opposition, without a check upon expenditure, would go wrong and play fast and loose with provincial interests. And nobody will claim that British Columbia's new legislature is composed of angels—not as we know some Conservatives in this corner of the continent. The British Columbia elections are a genuine triumph of Conservative principles, according to latter day manifestations.

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

The influence of change of viewpoint and condition upon policy and action is illustrated by the homely but pithy, couplet—

"When the devil was sick, the devil a monk would be;
When the devil got well the devil
a monk was he."

When Mr. R. L. Borden was leader of the opposition, he was on safe ground in enunciating many noble abstract sentiments, policies and resolves—he could do so without having to answer any responsibility.

In his Halifax platform—now a noble ruin—he declared:

"To use the power of filling positions as a reward for party services without regard to the character and capacity of the individual selected is a gross breach of a solemn public trust. The character of the government may be judged by its appointments."

Never since Canada was Canada has a policy or platform been so absolutely and shamefully discredited.

Never in the history of the country has the headsman's axe left such a bloody trail or so ghastly a heap of lopped off heads of officials following a change of government; and never has there been such utter disregard for capacity in new officials, or regard for anything but partisan service — dirty or clean, as the case may be. Never has any public man stultified himself and swallowed himself so completely as has the Premier of Canada, in respect of the beautiful sentiments expressed in the above declaration. There's a mighty difference between opposition and power in regard to giving effect to lofty sentiments. Does the Premier still believe that "a government may be judged by its appointments?"

THE INFLUENCE.

Nationalism is strong in influence in the Borden Government. At the instance of Mr. Bourassa and his Nationalist band, Mr. Borden took three Nationalists into his cabinet. At the behest of Mr. Bourassa and his Nationalist band, Mr. Borden knocked the infant Canadian Navy on the head. Not satisfied with having this act of infanticide to its credit, the Nationalist element seems to have brought about the "damming" of Welland Canal enlargement "with faint praise." Hon. Mr. Monk, one of the three Nationalist ministers in the Borden Cabinet, has a weakness for the Georgian Bay canal and we who think we can read between the lines, think we see Mr. Monk's fine Nationalist hand in the picayune—the merely nominal—appropriation of $200,000 for a work that will cost 45 millions of dollars—enlargement of the Welland Canal. Aroused and indignant at this trifling with a momentous national question, the Council of the Toronto Board of Trade, has passed resolutions, which, considering that they come from Tory Toronto, which sends a solid Tory delegation to back Mr. Borden, are very strongly condemnatory of the Government's puerile appropriation for so important a work as enlargement of the Welland Canal—"profound regret" " " that no serious appropriation has been made, or any definite or comprehensive measures taken for reconstructing the Welland Canal."

A government that does not recognize the pre-eminent importance of dealing largely and generously with the transportation interests of Canada is not the government for Canada. And we do not see the present Government showing undue solicitude in this direction. A thorough-paced local Conservative, who would vote "Tory" if a wooden image wore the label of the party candidate, is complaining, privately, a good deal about the slow progress of the Trent Canal. This gentleman was never heard, because he never had occasion, to make a complaint of this kind during the fifteen years the Laurier Government was in power. The work that is now in progress on the Canal, is done by means of the appropriation made by the late Government, and there seems to be no provision made by the present Government for prosecution of work on additional sections. This is not surprising; there is not in the supplementary estimates even a cent placed for the completion of the splendid new wharf at Spaulding's Bay, inaugurated and provided for, as to finances, by the late Dominion Government.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Toronto boasts of being in the metropolitan class; but it's not "out of the woods" yet. Its waterworks intake pope has been bumped by a submerged tree.

Thirty executioners at fifteen dollars a day each are, says the Ottawa Free Press, looking for the scalps of Liberal office holders, though it might be more profitable for the Tory party to hire one good man and let him get after the Senate.

There is much alleging of the uselessness of the Senate, but the moment it shows its usefulness by revising hasty Commons's legislation in the interests of the public, it is denounced as being too useful. The senate amendment to the Highways Aid bill simply puts into statutory form the expressed intention of the government, which it had not the fairness or courage to put into its bill.

Sir James Whitney has abandoned the idea of exposing the Hydro-Electric scheme to the dangers of association with other government departments. He declined to Make Hon. Mr. Beck Minister of Power, but he does not forget the substantial solatium, a salary of $6,000 a year, which, if results justiy a salary, is earned by Mr. Beck far better than the salaries some of the Ministers in Sir James Whitney's Cabinet.

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, who was elected premier on the lofty and patriotic principle of "no truck or trade with the Yankees," is going to the United States for a rest after the labours of the session. There seems to be a few easily accessible places with genial climates, and favourable conditions for rest, under the British flag, West Indies way; but Mr. Borden seems to prefer alien skies, and he has a perfect right to chose his health-hunting habitat. Anyway, we hope he returns to Canada, in sound and robust health and with his loyalty less frayed than it has been by his rubbing shoulders the last four months with his Nationalist cabinet colleagues.

SETTLED WITH A CLUB.

(Toronto Star)

A few days ago the News argued that England's labour troubles could be solved by protection. Yesterday it published a harrowing picture of a child slavery workshop in an anthracite mine in Pennsylvania, U. S. A.

"This is a photograph of a child slavery 'workshop' in a Pennsylvania anthracite coal mine. The ages of these boys range from 10 to 14. For nine hours a day they sit bent over flowing streams of hard coal, breaking large lumps and picking out the pieces of slate and other foreign material. While this photograph was being made none of the lads turned his head to watch the camera-man, but then you notice the boss and the boss' club, held in a manner which permits a free and liberal use. These boys do not like to work in the mines; few have ever been to school; probably not two of the many in this breaker room can read or write. The miners' union demands shorter hours for these little workers."

Is this the way high protection settles labour troubles in the United States—with a club?

TAR TREATMENT OF MACADAM OR OTHER HIGHWAYS IN CITIES

There has bee a good deal of discussion among engineers, and some discussion by the city authorities of Peterborough, concerning the advantages to be gained by the use of tar as a coating for macadam road surfaces. The consensus of opinion is that tar treatment is justified, although there has been very little evidence from engineers showing the efficiency of the method as to cost.

The City Engineer of Bristol, acting under instructions from the Council, has made an investigation to determine the results of the tar treatment on macadam road surfaces, and has prepared a statement showing the cost of road maintenance each year since the tar spraying was adopted. The report appears below, and shews conclusively that tar treatment under certain conditions is amply justified. On well-laid macadam with light traffic and medium grades excellent results were secured. While little actual saving in cost was shown as a result of the treatment, still the dust nuisance practically disappeared, and the streets and roads generally are cleaner than ever before.

In accordance with the instructions of your committee your engineer has carefully studied the results so far of the tar treatment of macadam road surfaces, and he has prepared a statement showing the cost of road maintenance each year since the tar spraying was adopted in 1906, and for the sake of comparison has also shown on the statement the average cost of maintenance during the three years prior to the system being adopted. The expenditure during the current year up till the 11th January is also included, and on the basis of this expenditure he has estimated the total for the year; but, although this shows some very satisfactory results, he does not propose to draw any comparisons from these estimated figures, but to limit his remarks to the period terminating on 25th March, 1911.

The average cost of cleansing the whole of the streets in the three years prior to the adoption of tar treatment was $145,360; for the year ending March, 1911, the cost was $140,875, showing a saving of $4,485; but a more striking and satisfactory result is that no fewer than 15,698 fewer loads of slop and sweepings had to be carted to dump; this is very important, as a large proportion of this slop is pulverised road stone. The average cost of street watering in the three years above referred to was $21,255, while in the year ending March, 1911, it was only $14,035, a saving of $7,220. The cost of macadamming, however, shows an increase of $6,075, but, whereas the total quantity of hard stone is practically the same, the weight of limestone used was 5,699 tons less. However, included in the amount is the cost of converting nearly three miles of old pitching to tar macadam, costing $6,089, also the laying down of an experimental length of "pitchmac," costing approximately $3,000, so that in reality the cost of macadam maintenance for the year is $5,060 less than the average for the three years prior to treatment. Then again, the cost of using tarred material for binding purposes has increased the cost of macadamming. The cost of the tar treatment for the year under consideration was $37,880 and the total cost of the work on the road was $326,985, against $303,715, the cost prior to the use of tar showing an increased cost of $23,250, or, deducting the cost of special works, $21,250. During the period under revision 19 miles of private streets have been added to the highways.

1. The dust nuisance has practically disappeared.
2. The surface of secondary roads has been enormously improved.
3. The streets generally are cleaner than ever they were before.
4. Watering and cleansing have been extended into out-lying districts where hitherto the water-cart had never been seen.
5. Dumps are becoming fewer and farther away, tending to increase the cost to haulage.
6. Cost of material has increased.
7. Conditions of traffic have entirely changed, and it is impossible to say what extra cost the city might have been put to if the tar-spraying had not been introduced.

It was remarked that on a well-made road accommodating light traffic only, tar was an excellent coating; on a badly constructed surface a coating of tar made the road worse than ever.—Canadian Engineer.

DICKENSIAN CONSUMPTION

The Protection of the Child is the Most Valuable and Most Efficient Means of Fighting Tuberculosis, Therefore Watch the Milk Supply.

(Written for The Examiner by Roy Gilray)

About sixty years ago the immortal Charles Dickens, a lover of his fellow men, especially of those who from poverty or other untoward circumstances were handicapped in the race of life, thus graphically describes in the story of Nicholas Nickleby the disease Consumption:

"There is a dread disease which so prepares its victims as it were for death; which so refines it of its grosser aspect and throws around familiar looks unearthly indications of the coming change; a dread disease, in which the struggle between body and soul is so gradual, quiet and solemn and the result so sure, that day by day, and grain by grain, the mortal part wastes away so that the spirit grows light and sanguine with its lightening load and feeling of immortality at hand, deems it but a new term of mortal life; a disease in which death takes the glow and hue of life and the gaunt and grisly form of death; a disease which medicine never cured, wealth never warded off or poverty could boast exemption from, which sometimes moves in giant strides and sometimes at a tardy, sluggish pace but, slow or quick, is ever sure and certain."

This description in its essential features will be readily recognized by almost anyone. In the classical picture of an advanced case of consumption, while no less true of such cases in the present day, some consolation at least may be had from the fact that the number of such cases is not so great as formerly and that increased knowledge in respect to this disease—as to its cause, the methods of prevention and the care of advanced cases—has in the last three generations lessened its ravages.

In the Province of Ontario there died of tuberculosis in the year 1900, 2,511 persons. The average age at which death occurred was 30 years. According to the period of expectancy of life worked out by insurance companies, there was in each instance a loss of life period about 33 years. The Labour Bureau of the Province estimate that the sum of $400 per annum is a low average earning power of adult individuals. At this low estimate, we are losing in earning power each year the sum of $100,000. Multiply this by 33 and we have the total of earning power of one year's deaths from this disease—the sum of $3,300,000. This surely is bad enough but we must consider in addition the extra expense of, in many instances, years of incapacity, of medical care, of nursing, all or nearly all of which may by proper care and treatment of such cases be prevented.

If the "Made-in-Peterborough" Exhibition is a success, the local Health Association, in a few months, will be engaged in a battle against the spread of tuberculosis that should have the hearty endorsation and sympathy of every citizen with the interests of humanity at heart. It will endeavour to stop the useless waste of life by this terrible disease, and if system, energy and enthusiasm count for much, then the citizens should see splendid results within two or three years.

One feature of the warfare, indeed the most important feature of the whole campaign, will be the special efforts put forth to save the children. This will be accomplished by the district nurse visiting homes where children may be exposed to tubercular infection, and she will see that the conditions are such as to insure the children against contracting the disease.

To those who love children and believe that the highest duty of responsible adults is to make them happy and to guard them against preventable suffering, it is hardly necessary to say, if there should be an inclination to undervalue the amount of suffering one-quarter of all tuberculosis among children means, that the majority of cases of meningitis are really tuberculous in character.

As we have pointed out in previous articles, one great source of the tubercular germ is from the expectoration or sputum of those who are already afflicted with the disease, but the most common, and at the same time the least suspected, agent guilty of spreading the vile plague, is the milch cow. There is no animal that so caters to the wants of man, particularly children, furnishing various products, such as milk, cream, butter, cheese, and meat.

However, meat and meat products do not require special consideration, as they are usually cooked and so sterilized before they are eaten; but the other products are used in their fresh, raw state, and unfortunately we have no system of testing them as to their purity.

We do not make any mistake, therefore, when we charge the tuberculous cow, under existing conditions, with practically all the human tuberculosis that is not caused by tubercle bacilli expelled from the bodies of human tuberculous individuals in the form of sputum.

An animal killed for meat has the interior of its body exposed so that an inspector can readily determine whether it is or is not dangerously tuberculous.

The dairy cow, on the other hand, is a daily repeated source of danger through the human food (milk) that is twice daily, sometimes for years, drained from her body.

The material from which the milk of a cow is derived is the food she eats and the water she drinks.

After the material is swallowed it passes into the stomach and intestines, then, after having undergone various changes, it enters minute blood and lymph vessels and in these is carried onward into larger vessels and through the latter reaches the heart; from the heart it is pumped with the blood into and spread throughout the lungs, from the minute blood capillaries in the lungs it is again collected in the larger blood vessels and returned to the heart, and from there it is pumped out into the body generally. That is to say, the raw material which goes into a cow's mouth and which is returned in the form of milk may have been, and most of it probably has been, in contact with every portion of the interior of her body. Now think of this body containing cheesy, broken-down and degenerated masses of tuberculous matter, and remember that the ease with which we can detect the taste and odour of fresh grass, turnips and wild onions in milk does not tend to suppress the disgust engendered at the thought of using milk extracted from a more or less diseased cow as food.

Fortunately there are two ways in which public health can be protected against the bovine source of tuberculosis. One is through the pasteurization or sterilization of all milk before it is used; and the other is the application of the tuberculin test to eliminate all cows affected with tuberculosis from use for dairy purposes.

We know that good food and plenty of it is necessary to give our bodies the power to resist the development of tuberculosis, and anything that tends to reduce the human food supply must be regarded as a menace to public health. Indeed, I do not think it an exaggeration to say that the conservation of the human food supply is the most important public health work any municipality can undertake.

Therefore, tuberculosis among cattle, is a condition we must fight early and late until it has been fought to an end, otherwise we will neglect what the proper conservation of the human food supply urgently demands.

All honour to the members of the City Council, who are giving this most important matter their attention, and if they accomplish nothing more during their tenure of office they will be remembered by generations to come as benefactors of the human race.

The cow is the foster-mother of far too many of our children.

Educate the mother and save the child.

In saving the child you are saving the state.

NO DYSPEPSIA OR STOMACH DISTRESS

Heartburn, Gas, Sourness and Stomach Misery Vanishes

There would not be a case of indigestion here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming nauseous odours from the breath.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on each 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily understand why this promptly cures Indigestion and removes such symptoms as Heartburn, a feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, Belching of Gas and Eructations of undigested food, water brash, Nausea, Headache, Biliousness and many other bad symptoms; and, besides, you will not need laxatives to keep your stomach, liver and intestines clean and fresh.

If your Stomach is sour and full of gas, or your food doesn't digest and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolue relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and, besides, one 50-cent case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Pape's Diapepsin which will always, either at daytime, or during night, relieve your stomach misery and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

HOW INSPECTOR WAS APPOINTED

Selection Lay Between Mr. J. Meharry and Mr. C. Spence

There was a little touch of unusual interest in the Property committee's voting to recommend to the Council a Sanitary Inspector.

The applicants considered had dwindled down to Mr. John Meharry and Mr. Claude A. Spence.

"I move that Mr. Meharry be appointed," Ald. Morgan said.

Ald Graham—"I second that."

Mayor Bradburn—"I move that Mr. Spence get it."

Ald. Brown said he did not know Mr. Spence and therefore did not second this amendment.

Finally Ald. Duncan, chairman, seconded it.

Ald. Brown the only other member of the committee, moved that Mr. A. Hope be appointed, but there was no one to second his amendment to the amendment.

Ald. Duncan called a vote on the amendment and it was a tie with the Mayor and the chairman for Mr. Spence and Ald. Morgan and Ald. Graham opposed.

The vote on the motion was likewise a tie with the vote reversed.

Ald. Brown did not vote.

Mayor Bradburn to Ald. Brown—"Are you not going to vote on this. You had no seconder to your motion."

Ald. Brown replied that he did not know Mr. Spence and would not vote for him on that account. "I know Mr. Meharry and I will vote for him." That practically ended the matter.

On the motion being presented again, Ald. Brown voted with Ald. Morgan and Graham for Mr. Meharry, giving a majority of one. Thus closed an interesting little incident and a temporary deadlock.

A PLEASANT EVENING

The annual congregational gathering of Charlotte street Methodist church, took place last evening in the school hall.

At 6.30 the members, numbering about four hundred, sat down to a sumptuous supper, after which a social evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner. In the course of the conversazione the following musical items were rendered:

Solo—Mr. R. F. Downey.
Reading—Miss L. Thomas.
Solo—Miss Edna Pringle.
Reading—Mr. R. J. Soden.
Solo—Miss Pearl Brock.
Reading—Mrs. R. F. Downey.
Vocal duet—Messrs. Fleming and Downey.

How Dayton Ladies Cure Their Corn-Pinched Toes

Miss M. Lukey, of Zena Ave., Dayton Ohio, writes: "Before using 'Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor' I was quite laid up with corns, and could not even stand the pressure of a loosely buttoned shoe. I aplied Putnam's 'Extractor,' and in a miraculously short time I was completely cured. I take great pleasure in recommending your valuable remedy to my friends." Putnam's Corn Extractor in 25c. bottles, sold by druggists.

HAD A CONFERENCE

Mr. J. D. McArthur of Winnipeg, the contractor for the Hudson Bay Railway, had a conference at Ottawa recently with the Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, relative to the construction of that branch of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Mr. McArthur states that every effort is now being made to get in plant and supplies and that, as soon as the frost is out of the ground 1,000 men will be put at work. He expects to finish the section for which he has contracted within a year.

THE GOLD FIELDS

As a demonstration of the excellent facilities afforded the great investing public, as well as their clientele in Canada and the United States, Chas. A. Stoneham & Company, the well known Toronto brokers, have their representative at the present time in Porcupine making close examination of the underground development work at the various mines in Porcupine. This expert mining man will return to Toronto on Tuesday next, on and after which date this brokerage house will gladly supply such information as is requested pertaining to the actual conditions as they exist at the mines visited. Such information as this should be in the hands of every man, who has any interest whatever in the results and future possibilities of Northern Ontario or in fact every man, who is in the least speculatively inclined.

With the official opening up of the Porcupine gold fields, brokerage circles in Toronto are optimistic that the staple stocks will afford excellent opportunities for investment and Chas. A. Stoneham & Co. are among those who believe special attention should be given to this market, especially by those who are anxious to make their finances earn its full share of the profits, which are practically assured. This firm has made an enviable name for itself in giving their clients unbiased and authentic information concerning the various mining propositions. They do not hesitate at any time to call a spade by its proper name, and the fact that they are not engaged in the promotion of any mining company, but confining themselves simply to commission brokers, places them in this independent position. To our readers we would strongly advise that such excellent facilities as provided by this firm should be put to the test and no transactions should be made in mining stocks without the fullest information being obtained.

Dr. Bruce Howson, L.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., Edinburgh, has opened an office at the corner of Charlotte & Stewart Sts., for the general practice of Medicine. Special attention given to diseases of Eye, Ear, Nose & Throat. Phone 230. Hours, 9 to 10 a. m., 2 to 4 p.m. & 7 to 8 p.m. 6d-73

Decorate Your Home

In preparation for your

EASTER GUESTS

THERE is scarcely a house but requires something new in the decorative line—possibly the rug on the parlour floor shows the wear of the long winter season ; or, perhaps the curtains on the dining-room or the bedroom windows need replacing. And what a good thought to add the necessary furnishings to make the home look bright, clean and inviting when your guests arrive for Easter.

Our Third Floor Departments offer a wonderful choice in the matter of attractive decorations for the home. Here we have the Wall Paper and Housefurnishing Departments away from the busy Main Floors, where one can leisurely select just what is wanted to add the desired artistic touch to the home.

Of special "importance" is our showing of celebrated Scotch and English Rugs in Axminsters and Wiltons, suitable for dining rooms and parlours. Worthy of your particular attention is a beautiful Axminster Rug in a handsome Persian panel effect procurable in ten (10) different sizes.

Our showing of beautiful Wall Papers is the most ambitious we have yet attempted. Whether you require a silk paper of exquisite design and colouring for the Parlour, leathers for the Dining-room, panels for the Halls, dainty stripes or floral designs with cutout border or new crown treatment for the Bedrooms, sanitas for the Kitchen or Bathroom—room mouldings, plate rails, etc., you will find us splendidly prepared to supply your every want to your complete and lasting satisfaction.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE WADED INTO THE GARBAGE SCHEME

cided not to have it collected in advance.

It has already been published that the City pays the garbage collector a salary and the money from the residents goes into the city's coffers.

The By-law Passed.

The Garbage By-law was read and passed on to Monday night's council meeting. It includes that collections shall be made from hotels, fruit and fish stores, three times a week; from stores and shops twice a week; from residences, rooms, offices, etc., twice a week during June, July, August, and September, during other months once a week. The owner shall provide boxes and barrels of convenient dimensions, in which the garbage is to be kept. Ashes and general refuse must not be thrown together.

Stores and shops not within the district outlined and boarding houses having more than five boarders other than members of the family shall pay 25c a month.

Moved by Ald. Brown, seconded by Ald. Morgan, that the Chairman be instructed to secure such books, etc. as the sanitary inspector shall require.—Carried.

Appointment of Inspector.

The appointment of a Sanitary Inspector was the next business considered. Some applications had been received as reported in a previous issue. The selection was carried on in a general way. The names were read over and in many cases the applicants were unknown to some if not all the members of the committee. Quite a number were quickly passed over until there remained but Messrs. John Meharry, A. Hope and Claude A. Spence.

Mr. Spence's recommendations were read. They showed that he had studied for the Certificate of the Sanitary Institute of Great Britain, and the course had embraced all the branches of the work and had had practical experience of the work in a town of 80,000 in England. It was likewise stated that Mr. Meharry had had considerable experience in connection with the annual Spring sanitary work in the city.

Mayor Bradburn—"I think this man, Spence, will fill the bill better than any one on the list."

Moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham, that Mr. Meharry receive the appointment.

Moved in amendment by Mayor Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that Mr. Sponse be appointed.

Ald. Brown moved that it go to Mr. A. Hope, but there was no one to second him.

Votes were taken and the Aldermen and the Mayor voted as they had moved. Ald. Brown did not vote and there was a deadlock. Finally, Ald. Brown, upon whose vote the appointment now rested, stated that as he did not know anything about Mr. Spence and he did know Mr. Meharry, he would vote in favour of the latter. Thus the motion passed with Aldermen Morgan, Graham and Brown voting for Mr. Meharry.

Duties of Inspector.

A by-law defining the duties of the Sanitary Inspector was read and passed to the Council. It includes the following:

To examine the banks of the Otonabee River, above the water works dam and the tributaries of it in order to ascertain the source of the water consumed in the city in regard to pollution, and if any pollution be found to take action to prevent it.

To report on the sanitary condition of the river and its tributaries, and any action taken to the Health Committee of the Council, and to the Water Commissioners.

To Enforce Milk By-law.

To enforce the provisions of by-law to license and regulate milk vendors in the city; to make periodical inspection of all dairies occupied and owned by vendors and to report on the same to the Health Committee of the Council, and the local Board of Health.

To take samples of milk being sold in the city and to have them tested by the Medical Health Officer.

To inspect bakeries, slaughter houses, yards, lanes, wells, etc., to see that they are kept clean and free from anything that may endanger the public heith. If any are not found so to notify owners to cleanse and remove objectionable matters, and if this is not done to prosecute the parties.

To Inspect Food.

To inspect meat, poultry, fish, fruit, vegetables and other produce, and articles offered for sale in the streets, public places and shops, and to prosecute all who offer for sale, or who sell articles unfit for use.

To enforce provisions of the by-law to license and regulate owners of vehicles for the collection of garbage and to superintend matters pertaining to scavenging and those engaged in the work.

To report to the Committee all cases in which sewer connections to dwellings, and stables should be put in.

To assist the M. H. O. in his duties.

And not the least onerous to collect the money to be paid by citizens for the collection of garbage.

Y.W.C.A. EXHIBITION WAS A SUCCESS

Large Crowd Attend the Closing Gym. Exercises at the Collegiate Institute

An appreciative audience filled the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute last evening, when the Y. W. C. A. presented their closing exhibition. The event proved to be a distinct triumph, and the frequent applause that reverberated throughout the hall indicated to a degree, the extent to which the gathering appreciated their performance. Dumbbell exercises, drills and many other athletic items combined to make up a programme that was pleasing and instructive.

The opening number consisted of dumb bell exercises and was presented by the intermediate class composed of seventeen girls, and a song and drobe by the Teddy Bears, put on by ten little tots made a hit with the audience, as also did the club movements, as presented by the Seniors.

A pleasing variation to the programme was a vocal solo by Miss Jean Fletcher Ratcliffe, possessing a pure, rich voice, with a well-developed intonation; Miss Ratcliffe's rendition of "Chamena" distinguishes her as an artist of merit. Miss Ratcliffe also delighted the audience by her clever interpretation of "Daffodils."

A wand exercise, by the Intermediates, and a sailor drill, and song, by the Junior class, concluded the first half of a programme which was replete with many pleasing surprises.

The second half in part was as follows:

Swedish Folk Dances—Seniors.
Violin solo, selected—Miss Margarite Burnett.
Japanese Parasol Drill—Intermediates.
Aesthetic Movements—Seniors.
Vocal— "Daffodils" —Miss J. F. Ratcliffe. (by Rose Eversole).
Dutch Folk Dance—Seniors.
Fancy March—Intermediates.
Wooden Doll drill—Seniors.

A strong feature of the bill was the violin solo by Miss Margarite Burnett, who displayed marked ability in the manner in which she mastered the delicate tones of the instrument. Mis Janet Quinn acted as accompanist, and her work left nothing to be desired. The entire performance was under the direction of Miss Ivy Coventry, Physical Instructress, and to her alone, much of the success that attended the event, was due.

Special Services At St. James'

Third Anniversary of the Dedication of the Church Will Take Place To-morrow

Rev. P. P. Bryce, the energetic pastor of the Earlscourt Methodist Church, Toronto, will preach in St. James' church, to-morrow, the occasion being the third anniversary of the dedication of the church. Rev. Mr. Bryce has gained prominence in Toronto through the great work which he has been doing for the British suburb in which his church is located.

He is not only looking after the spiritual need of his people, but their social wants as well. He does not scold them when they come to church on Sunday, but seeks to lift them to higher things and in this he is succeeding remarkably well. In the short space of four years he has been instrumental in the building of a strong church.

Special thank offering services will mark the occasion of the anniversary in St. James' church to-morrow. The congregational rally and social meeting will take place on Monday evening.

W. O. W. Hold Social Evening

Progressive Euchre and Dancing Were Indulged in—A Good Attendance

The new home of the Woodmen of the World, which is situated over the Nugent Drug Company, was the scene of a pleasing even last evening. About two hundred people, consisting of members of the Order, their wives and lady friends, gathered together and celebrated the inaugural opening of the new hall in right royal style. The event took the form of a progressive euchre party, which later in the evening, was superseded by dancing. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion and music supplied by Tuckett's orchestra, enlivened the proceedings.

Mr. James Vallory occupied the chair, and, needless to say, his duties were performed in a manner satisfactory to all. During the evening refreshments were served, after which the gathering directed their attention to the deposition of a very excellent programme.

To Make Good Bread

requires good yeast, and to have good yeast you should insist upon your grocer giving you White Swan Yeast Cakes. A 5c. package contains 6 cakes. Free sample sent on request. White Swan Spices & Cereals, Limited. Toronto, Ont.

A Public Sale of Household Furniture including exceptionally fine Ball Piano will be held at Mrs. John Coulter's 506 Smith St., near Jackson Park, on Thursday, April 4th, 1912, at 1 o'clock p.m. ad should call and inspect the famous Sanitary Patent Toupees, as shown by Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, at the Oriental Hotel on Wednesday, April 3rd.

REV. P. P. BRYCE, Pastor of Earlscourt Methodist Church, Toronto, who will preach at the Anniversary services of St. James' Church tomorrow.

BALD MEN

These Toupees are not only perfect in construction, but are the only Sanitary and Patented substitutes of one's own hair.

Rev. W. N. Chandler Is Returning

The Christian and Missionary Alliance Convention in Ottawa, closes Sunday evening, March 30th, and Mr. Chandler will be in Peterborough for a week on his way back to Chicago. Mr. Chandler's Bible teachings were a great blessing to many during the convention, last week. He will continue his addresses on Monday evening, at 7.45, and on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, at 3 and 7.45 p.m. On Easter Sunday, Mr. Chandler will preach both morning and evening.

To the Men of Peterborough

It is only comparatively a short time since we became the Sole Agents of the BERGER TAILORING CO., Ltd., of Toronto, who are well known as being high class Tailors, and considering the amount of business we do in this city by means of recommendation it is simply marvelous. And no wonder for we are giving Suits and Overcoats which for quality, workmanship and price cannot be excelled anywhere in this Province and particularly in this City. All we ask you is to come and see our samples and prices—they will talk the rest for themselves.

We stand behind our orders with a guarantee, if your clothes are not entirely satisfactory your deposit will be cheerfully refunded.

Advantages Of A Member Of Horticultural Society A List Of The Options

Have you sent in your application for a Membership Ticket in The Peterborough Horticultural Society? If not do so at once before it is too late and participate in the good things this Society is distributing to its members this season.

Option 1.

1. One Peony, Festiva Maxima, a grand White.
2. One Ampelopsis Veitchii, or Boston Ivy.
3. One Rosa Rugosa, Rubra, deep Rose.

Option 2.

1. Three Begonias, assorted.
2. Three Fuchsias, assorted.
3. Three Geraniums, assorted.

Option 3.

1. One Bush or Tree Honeysuckle Pink.
2. One Hydrangea Aborescens, a grand new Variety.
3. One Crimson Rambler, Climbing Rose.

Option 4.

1. One Dorothy Perkins, Pink Climbing Rose.
2. One Wigelia Rosea, Pink Flowering Shrub.
3. One Auratum, the King Lily of Japan.

In addition to your choice of one of the above options, members receive The Canadian Horticulturist, a bright monthly magazine, devoted to everything pertaining to flowers and gardening, etc.; also a distribution of flowering bulbs in the Fall, all for the annual membership fee of $1.

Greater interest than ever is being exhibited by the members in enlisting the sympathy of the public in general with the Society, and the membership is steadily increasing, but owing to the nature of most of the plants in the option requiring to be planted as soon as possible, those desiring to join should communicate with the Secretary, Mr. C. H. Williamson, 208 King street, at once, and thus avoid possible disappointment, as these plants must be ordered soon. Application blanks may also be had at the following places: Mr. Frank Wise, Little Lake Cemetery; Jordan Bros., P. Connal & Son and Porter S. White.

THE MISSION BAND HOLD A SUCCESSFUL GATHERING

A GOOD PROGRAMME

A most successful gathering took place last night at the Park Street Baptist Church, under the auspices of the Mission Band. It was their annual meeting and the Pastor occupied the chair. The members of the Band sat down to tea at 6 o'clock, and partook of the good things provided by the congregation, after which the programme was rendered in fine form by the children. The chief event of the evening was the killing of the missionary pigs. Some were fat, some lean, but all missionary pigs, and not a squeal did they give, when Donald Smith, who, in white coat, and apron, performed the bloodless operation of death, by hammering out their insides, which, by the way, enriched the coffers of the Mission Band to the extent of about $18.00.

The red pigs beat the blues, the prize-winners, who owned the wittiest pigs, were for the Reds, Willie Biddiford, and for the Blues, Bertie Browett.

The following is the programme as it was rendered:

Hymn—"When He Cometh'."
Scripture reading.
Prayer.
Chairman's address.
Motion song—4 little girls.
Recitation—Max Sloan.
Song—Gertie Batley.
Secretary's report.
Killing Blue Pigs.
Instrumental—Tom Taylor.
Recitation—Winnie Cooper.
Solo—George Traster.
Killing Red Pigs.
Dialogue—"How Some Little Dollies came to go as Missionaries".
Recitation—Max Sloan.

The officers for the coming year are:

Hon.-Pres.—Miss Maggie Mann.
President—Maud Smith.
Vice-Pres.—Mary Robinson.
Organist—Flora Nicholls.
Secretary—Percy Hill.
Treasurer—Ethel Eagleston.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE SPRING

Do Not Use Harsh Purgatives—A Tonic is All You Need

Not exactly sick — but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches, and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as so many people do, in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you this is true. What you need is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine that can do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine makes new blood which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired, depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mrs. Maude Bagg, Bank., says: "I can unhesitatingly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood builder and tonic. I was very much run down when I began using the pills, and a few boxes fully restored my health."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WITH EDGED TOOLS

Chicago Newspaper Opinion

"Not half a dozen examples of finer acting have been seen in Chicago in recent years than that submitted by the company of English players. By the sheer force of their artistry the artists wove their own spell, drove home situation after situation, and flung a big scene in the faces of their audience like a red scar across the fabric of the appealing love story. They give a performance that is refreshing and worth while."—Shepherd Butler, Chicago Record-Herald.

"If you enjoy a perfect ensemble and are not particular about watching the twinklings of a single star in the constellation of mediocrities, see the remarkable work of the Company of English players in With Edged Tools. It is easy to fall into the vice of superlatives, and easier than usual in this case, but it is a solemn fact that for team work, for dignified, expressive, intensely alive, and yet duly proportioned playing, this unheralded group takes the season's honours. There is ever the blessing of exquisite playing. For tremendous effects in small space, the fourth act is stunning. The voices of these players are beautiful without exception, and the enunciation would be an object lesson to most of us..... it is a striking justification of ensemble as against the featured matinee idol in a bevy of incompetents." —Eric Delemarter, Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"There are five players in this English company who can give any actor or actress now appearing in Chicago lessons in diction."—James O'Donnell Bennett, Sunday Record Herald, Chicago.

"The individual work is of high order. Clarity of diction, good character touches and easy carriage are features of the playing."—Chicago Evening News.

"With Edged Tools," comes to The Grand, next Thursday, April 4th, with the same all-star caste which appeared here last October.

RAILWAY NOTES

Mr. Arthur St. John of the G.T.R. operating staff, who has acted as relief agent at Keene for the past month, passed through the city this morning en route to Lindsay to report for subsequent duty.

Mr. West Edwards of the Canadian Express staff, severed his connection with the company to-day to accept a position with Mr. R. J. Munro.

The gates at the G.T.R. crossing underwent the process of thawing out this morning for the second time this season.

Magistrate's Suit Against The City

Mayor Bradburn, representing the city, has received a summons to appear in Division court as defendant in a suit brought by Magistrate Dumble to secure $70 for his services in connection with manhood suffrage registration for the last election. The facts of the case have been published already and it remains a question of law. The city is willing to have a test case made, and the City Fathers are interested in the outcome

COURT PETERBOROUGH ELECTS REPRESENTATIVES.

Last night Court Peterborough, No. 29, Canadian Order of Foresters held a meeting in their hall on Simcoe street, which was largely attended. Mr. Hugh Robertson, High Chief Ranger, occupied the chair. After routine business was over, the election of six representatives to be sent to the High Court, held in Hamilton, in the second week in June was proceeded with. Arrangements are being made to have a thorough booming of the Canadian Forestry in this city. The meeting then adjourned until the 19th of April.

FELL IN A FAINT

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

PALM SUNDAY.

To-morrow is Palm Sunday and commemorates the entry of Christ into Jerusalem. It is the last Sunday before Easter and begins what is known as Holy Week.

EFFECTS OF THE THAW

A Bridgenorth gentleman gave the reporter an important bit of information this morning. He said to the expectant news collector—"You may tell your readers that the recent thaw has taken all the ice out of Mud Lake—except about two feet of thickness."

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so I shall be happy as you will be cured for the cost of postage stamps. Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. Mrs. F. E CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

MADAM, ARE YOU LIKELY TO BECOME A MOTHER SOON? If

I have glad tidings for you—childbirth need be dreaded no more. Follow my advice—be happy now, and all will be well with the child and yourself. My remedy builds up the reproductive organs and nerve centres—makes confinement easy, safe and quick, and rapidly recalls the glow and cheering health of vigorous womanhood.

Mother's Cordial is also a rebuilder of run-down girls—girls strained or overtaxed with too much work. It purifies the blood—makes menstruation prompt and easy, and is accountable for many of the clear, beautiful complexions you admire so much.

This valuable remedy contains no stimulants or hurtful drugs. It is simply a scientific blend of Indian herbs, whose virtues are well known to medical men. Write for free circular. At your druggist's, or by mail, $1.00 per package, or 6 packages $5.00. Dr. Cocnier Medical Co., Windsor, Ont.

You need this coat hearty every day in the year

Whether you golf or motor or drive, skate or snowshoe or walk the most useful item of your wardrobe will be one of the

Pen-Angle Sweater Coats

EXAMINE one at your local merchant's and you will agree that nothing you wear is more beautifully made nor more exquisitely finished. Try one on, and you see that it has the snug, stylish fit your taste craves. Subject it to hard wear and learn that it retains its new, smart appearance. It must do that, for our Pen-Angle knitting process shapes these improved sweater coats into permanent fit. Thus they cannot become saggy or ill-fitting, as many garments do that resemble them in appearance only when brand-new. You will be lastingly satisfied with the sweater coat that bears this trademark. 78

ALL KINDS OF ROOFING

Felt, Gravel, Iron, Slate, etc.

The above cut illustrates the Barrett 5-ply Felt and Gravel Roofing, which has proved so successful as a durable Weather Protector and stood the test of years.

A Little Talk on Slate Roofs

1. A slate roof adds greatly to the appearance and thereby to the value of the house.
2. The first cost is the only cost.
3. A slate roof lessens rate of insurance.
4. Wood attracts lightning, slate does not.
5. Slate roof will not collect ice and snow as does a shingle roof.
6. Rafters do not require to be any heavier for a slate roof than for a shingle roof.
7. Slate roof cannot rot or corrode and therefore it is positively the only roof which will last for ever.
8. Slate roof may be deluged with water, but is dry in a few minutes, while a wooden roof gets waterlogged, grows worse and drives the dampness into your house.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific Slate Roofs have been used and found satisfactory in every locality.

I am prepared to put on any kind of Roofing required and guarantee good work, estimates given if desired.

Try the Want Advt. Columns of The Examiner—Small Price, Big Return.

One of the most interesting and picturesque regiments of soldiers in any part of the world is the Camel Corps maintained by the British Government in Egypt, and in India, and which formed a picturesque feature of the magnificent Durbar Coronation ceremonials which were enacted on the plain outside of the City of Delhi, India, last December, when King George and Queen Mary of England were proclaimed Emperor and Empress of India and rulers of more than four hundred millions of people.

The history of the Camel Corps of the British Army is an interesting one. They are not recognized as Cavalry, but are really mounted infantry. Each man of the Regiment being selected for his ability as a sharp shooter.

In 1883, when El Mahdi, "the False Prophet," preached The Holy War, and raised the flag of revolt in Central Africa, General Lord Kitchener was placed, by England, in command of the troops that were quickly despatched to that country from England to quell the rebellion.

The pick of the British Army, the "Household Cavalry," the "Life Guards," and the "Horse Guards Blue" arrived in Egypt with their magnificent chargers. It took a very little time for General Kitchener to realize that these regiments were useless upon the sands of the Sahara Desert. The horses not only fell victims to the climate but they were useless as every time they attempted to move they sank knee deep in the shifting sands.

Quick in action, General Kitchener impressed into service, from every point, thousands of camels and the novel sight was then presented of "Tommy Atkins" riding a camel in full regalia of war. The Camel Corps really saved the situation and led to the defeat of the hosts of fanatics, who followed the green banner of the "False Prophet." From that day the Camel Corps has been an important branch of the British Army of occupation in Egypt, and the Soudan, and in India.

BARTLETT HAS SIGNED A PETERBORO' CONTRACT

This morning's mail brought Secretary Davidson the signed contract of Pitcher Ned Bartlett of the Kodak Park Club, Rochester. This is the youngster with whom Manager Templin announced a week ago that he had accepted terms. A contract was sent to Bartlett but he was slow in signing and Templin was getting anxious. However, the contract has been returned signed and the Peterborough manager is delighted. He regards Bartlett, who is only twenty years of age as a coming star and expects him to be a tower of strength to the club this season. He was practically unbeatable in the Rochester semi-pro. League, last year, and has a phenomenal list of strikeouts to his credit. Templin's pitching staff consists so far of Harry Scull, of Reading, Pa., Elmer D. Baver of Schuylkill, Haven, Pa., Percy Davis of Philadelphia, Pa., and Ned Bartlett, of Rochester. He has strings on several more box artists and will probably bring at least half a dozen to Peterborough with him for training.

"PETES" SUGGESTED AS NAME FOR CLUB

Every day brings additions to the list of suggested nick-names for the Peterborough Canadian League Club. Here are a few more to-day:

Nickname Editor—
I would suggest "Bobs" or "Robins" for our baseball team, as Peterborough was named after Peter Robinson, the man who brought out the first lot of immigrants to Peterborough county. "Robins" would make a good emblem. G. N.

Nickname Editor—
As you are looking for a name for the ball team, why not call them "Magnets?" For a magnet will draw and if our ball team is any good they ought to draw a crowd. It will be all right for an emblem. "Old Sport."

Nickname Editor—
As the Peterborough ball team play at Riverside Park, "Riversides" might be a suitable name. F. D.

Nickname Editor—
In regard to your search for a name for the ball club, I would suggest the name "Petes." It has been good enough in days gone by. Why not now? A Fan.

Nickname Editor—
Here is a name for the ball club that is worth while—"Templinites." W. A. B.

Nickname Editor—
I suggest for a name for the ball club "Yankees" because the players all come from the States. V. S.

Nickname Editor—
I suggest "Giants" because the men are all big. I understand there are very small sized players on the line-up. B.

Nickname Editor—
In reading your paper this evening I noticed that you are asking the fans to select a name for the ball team. I would suggest the "Petes" as it is popular. A. L.

The competition will be closed on April 15th.

BASEBALL

MOBILE, MARCH 30.—Joe Jackson hopes to take down an honour this year that has gone but once to a big league player playig one hundred games or more a season. He wants to be the second man who, playing that number of games, has batted .400 in two consecutive seasons.

Jesse Burkett of the Cleveland National League Club, back in 1896 and 1896, batted .423 and .410. Since that time no big leaguer has batted over .400 in two consecutive campaigns. Inasmuch as Jackson and Cobb were the only two to beat the .400 mark last year, they are the only ones who have a chance to tie Burkett's record this season.

That Cobb has not reached his limit is believed from the manner in which the Georgian has increased his batting record each year. Batting .384 in 1908, he boosted it to .377 in 1909, .385 in 1910, and .420 in 1911. With Joe Jackson to again set him a pace, there is no telling just where Cobb will land this year.

Don't fail to see "The Durbar" in all its dazzling splendor given by the Kinemacolor Co. at The Grand. Opening performance Monday evening Seats now on sale.

The trouble with mutual admiration society is that it is never mute.

FOOTBALL

NASHVILLE, MARCH 30—Colonel Daniel McGugin, the well-known Portuguese, who will pit his Vanderbilt football line up against Harvard next fall, has the inside dope on Ty Cobb's wonderful ability. "It's the combination of knack and wonderful spirit," says McGugi, "of which I have the proof direct.

Last fall came through Nashville, and while here came out one afternoon to take a fall out of the gridiron game. He had never worn a moleskin before nor attempted the game in any way. His first attempts at punting were a joke. He was like any other raw recruit breaking in. Then I gave him a few inside pointers and he began practising.

"A hour later he was kicking thirty-five and forty yards almost as well as any member of the squad and kicking in good form. He had picked up as much in an hour as the average footballist would have gathered in weeks. It would have been unbelieveable if the evidence had not rested so close at hand."

BASKETBALL

The game between the Ekos and the Hustlers last night at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium drew a large crowd, who were certainly rewarded for being present by witnessing one of the best games played on the local floor. Both teams were fast. The Hustlers, true to their name, hustled the ball into the basket three times in rapid succession and from then to the end of the first half, every point that either team secured was by hard work, the half time score being 9 to 8 in favour of hte Hustlers. The second half saw some very fast ball with the Ekos slowly but surely creeping up the score column, until with but one minute to play and one point behind Fleming of the Ekos' defence, stole up the floor away from his check, and dorpped in the basket that won the game for the Ekos by a score of 18 to 17.

Teams—Ekos—Canniff and Hall; centre, Walker, defence, Fleming and Turner.

Hustlers—Forwards—Flowers and Ellis, centre Fallis, defence, S. Hall and D. Loomis. Referee, J. J. Thompson, umpire, C. E. Sisson.

There is considerable interest centred in the Brownie and Nemo game which is billed for to-night at nine; both teams handle the ball very fast, and are noted for their spectacular shooting, and one of the best games of the season should result.

To-morrow night the Hustlers meet the eNmos in a city league fixture at 8.30. The first game will be called at 7 p.m., when the Juvenile League will be opened, the Midgets clashing with the Electrics, and the Hustlers-Nemo game will be called at 8.40 p.m.

BENEFACTORS REMEMBERED

As a fitting remembrance of the munificence of Charlotte Jane Nicholls and Andrew Carnegie two handsome brass tablets have been placed in the lobby of the Public Library. They are situated one on each side of the inner entrance and stand out conspicuously as a permanent memorial to the liberality of the benefactors to whom they are dedicated.

The tablet which graces the right side of the entrance bears the following inscription:

A TRIBUTE
To the benevolence of
ANDREW CARNEGIE
to whose liberality the citizens of PETERBORO
are indebted for this library

The tablet on the left, which is identically the same in size and appearance, both being made by the same firm, is inscribed as follows:

IN RECOGNITION OF the generous bequest of the late
CHARLOTTE JANE NICHOLLS towards the erection
AND maintenance of this library

The tablets were secured at the instance of the Library Board and were placed in position yesterday.

ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT

The annual Sunday school entertainment of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church took place last evening, when a very creditable programme was rendered. There was a large attendance and each number was received with loud applause. Among the items were the following:

Two choruses by the Beginners' Department.

Two choruses by the Junior Department.

Recitation—Mr. H. Treneer.

A Doll and a Ring Drill—The Intermediate Department, under the direction of Miss King, and a rag-time chorus by the boys of the Intermediate Department.

A number of the Y.M.C.A. boys under the direction of Mr. Thompson, gave an exhibition of elementary tumbling and pyramid work, and in addition several instrumental duets were rendered.

ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk-Crust, Weeping Skin, etc.

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Remember I make this broad statement after putting ten years of my time on this one disease and handling in the meantime a quarter of a million cases of this dreadful disease. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TO-DAY, I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild, soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me to-day you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see I am telling you the truth.

SOME GOOD PRINTING

There has come to the attention of the Examiner an announcement of a New York Fireworks Display Company, that is of double interest. It is a fine specimen of the art of artistic printing and has a local interest, as one of the members of the executing firm is an old Peterborough boy. The work consists of a thirty-six page quarto brochure. It is artistically composed, as to typography, and the brilliant illuminations and illustrations, as becomes the subject of the matter, printed on double-brush coated paper, are disposed with effective skill, and taste. Make-up and press manipulation of the highest order complete the main features of as fine a piece of craftsmanship as has come to the notice of the Examiner in many a day. The work is done by "The Simmons Press," 130 William street, New York. Mr. J. H. Simmons is President of the Company, and Mr. John C. Douglas, formerly of Peterborough, his brother-in-law, is Vice President, as well as editor-in-chief of "The Simmons Magazine," published by the same Company. This magazine is an exceptionally good one in typography illustration, and especially in tone. In its solid character, it is a good example of the evolution of the sane magazine from the more or less degenerate form of inflated and shallow magazine literture, that is inviting and deserving no little criticism.

No "Pot-luck" Construction

Russell

YOU BUY an ordinary automobile—and it is merely one of many where the fetich worshipped is "output" and close inspection of each car is almost impossible.

True the maker of every car desires you to be pleased, but in what a general, impersonal sense!

From the day a Russell starts through its process of building it is not merely a job number, but a machine which must maintain the Russell reputation.

All the attention that is inevitable where the builders of a car have a high standard is given to each car.

In so large a thing as the making of your motor car will you be pleased with "pot-luck" construction?

When you buy a Russell you buy a car made in Canada in what is acknowledged to be one of the best equipped plants in America.

MODELS from $2,350 to $5,000 equipped. Models with the valve motor. Models with the world-famous Knight Motor. But every model no matter what its price, watched at every step of its making.

KIDNEY-CUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common Food I was in a terrible condition. more because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by chipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

J. R. COLLINS TO LECTURE

Well Known Toronto Astronomer to Address Peterboro' Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society

MEET MONDAY NIGHT

The Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society will hold its regular meeting on Monday night, April 1st in the chemical laboratory of the Collegiate Institute, when a lecture will be given by Mr. J. R. Collins of Toronto, on "Our Earth, a Planet." The lecture will be free to the general public and the citizens are cordially invited to be present. Mr. Collins is a well known astronomer. He was a member of the Government eclipse expedition to Labrador in 1905 and is the inventor of a new kind of telescope, giving the advantages of a large telescope in miniature size.

W. C. T. U. DISCUSS VOTES FOR WOMEN

The Peterborough Union held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Knapman, George street, Friday afternoon, with a good attendance, Mrs. Ellis, the president, in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Goodfellow. At the conclusion of the business session, the Union discussed the topic of the day, "Votes For Women." It has always been a plank in the platform of the W.C.T.U., though it has not been pushed to the front by any unseemly methods. The White Ribbon women expect the ballot at no great distant time, notwithstanding the fact that the local government have given the bill the six months' hoist and the British parliament have voted out the Conciliation bill on the second reading.

"If a lassie wants the ballot,
Wants to run the town,
If a lassie gets the ballot
Need a laddie frown.
Many a laddie has the ballot,
Not so bright as I;
Many a laddie votes his ballot
Overcome with rye."

At the close of the meeting dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

"CHILDREN'S ANNUAL"

The services in the S. A. Temple, on Sunday, will be in connection with the "Children's Annual," and of a very interesting nature. In the afternoon, the children, with their teachers, will occupy the platform, and J. S. S M Braund will pilot them through a very thorough catechising of their Bible studies, as well as singing and other features of the Sunday School work.

On Monday evening the annual concert and distribution of prizes will be held. A splendid programme has been prepared, comprising recitations dialogues, drills, singing, etc., as well as several selections by the "Boys' Band." A large number of prizes will be presented to the deserving scholars at the close of the programme. All are invited to these meetings.

WEDDING BELLS

LUNDY—HALL

At three o'clock this afternoon, a quiet wedding was celebrated at "Riverview," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hall, when their daughter, Miss Marlie Thompson Hall, was united in marriage to Mr. George William Lundy, second son of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Lundy. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robert Pogue ,pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church. The bride was given away by her father, and as the bridal party entered the drawing room, Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Mr. John Crane.

The bride was very lovely and graceful, gowned in softest ivory satin, with square train and exquisite Duchess lace on the bodice and skirt. Her veil was of tulle, prettily fastened with a garland of orange blossoms and the bridal bouquet was of white roses. Miss Ellie Munro acted as bridesmaid, wearing a pretty frock of pale pink ninon over satin of the same shade, large hat with pink roses and carried a sheaf of Killarney roses. Mr. Gerald K. Rackham was best man. After the ceremony the "dejeuner" was served, followed by the usual toasts and speeches. The bride travelled in a smart navy blue suit, navy blue hat to match and handsome mink furs.

Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present, those from out of town being Dr. and Mrs. Speer, Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Hall, Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Clarkson, Toronto.

APROVAL OF CHURCH UNION

Quarterly Board of St. James Church Vote Strongly in Favour of the Measure.

By a vote of 20 to 2, the Quarterly Board of St. James' Methodist church showed their approval of the church union measure. The Congregationalist vote, is yet to be recorded. Full returns of the total vote of the city insofar as the Methodist church is concerned, will be available in the course of the next two weeks.

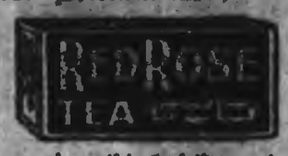
A Sign of the Times

PEOPLE are becoming very careful about what they eat and drink—

The preference for goods in sealed packages—especially in food stuffs—is now quite definite and becoming more so every day.

We must frankly admit that there are sound reasons for this preference. Food stuffs cannot be exposed to varying atmospheric conditions without losing both strength and flavor.

Tea—of all articles of everyday diet (excepting coffee, perhaps) needs protection most, and best merchants have been quick to appreciate the fact. So much is this the case that the selling of loose Tea in bulk will soon be a thing of the past.



RED ROSE TEA reaches you with all its virginal flavor, strength and purity—

—It is sealed in air-tight packages—dust and damp-proof—

—The former assures generous strength and richness—the latter that coaxing, delicate flavor, Qualities for which Red Rose Tea is famed.

Ask your Grocer for the 40c. package of Red Rose and you'll get better Tea—Tea that spends farther—for the same money.

You want "Good" Tea—well,

SCOTT WAS 150 MILES FROM SOUTH POLE ON JANUARY 3

His Ship the Terra Nova Has Come Out to New Zealand to Avoid the Ice and Reports That He Will Spend the Winter on His Quest---Is Trying to Reach Pole.

London, April 1.—The long and impatiently awaited news of Captain Scott's Antarctic expedition has at last arrived, but will bring the keenest disappointment to the cherished hopes of all Englishmen that the British expedition might after all prove to be the first in the race for the South Pole.

On January 3, nearly three weeks after Amundsen hoisted the Norwegian flag at the pole, Scott still had 150 miles to cover before attaining the object of his desire. The Terra Nova has returned to New Zealand and reports that Scott is still pressing forward and will spend the winter in the search.

Since the news of Amundsen's successful attempt, Englishman have built great hopes on Capt. Scott emulating [illegible] Norwegian's achievement. It was known that Scott had chosen the longer route, and as Amundsen's experience proved the more difficult route, but, presuming that he was favored by the same exceptional weather conditions as Amundsen, few doubted his success.

Now comes the disappointing news that Scott is spending another winter in the Antarctic, and there will be further weary waiting before it can be known whether he even succeeded in reaching the Pole. According to some of Captain Scott's intimate friends here, however, no surprise need be felt at his decision to spend another winter in the south, this having been within the original scope of his intentions. They suggest that he may have learned of Amundsen's exploit and thereupon determined to attempt a great journey across the ice barrier, returning from the side almost opposite to that from which he started his journey.

If this is so, the Terra Nova probably received instructions to meet Scott at some inland dump at a point on the barrier opposite Graham Land not far to the south of Cape Horn. It will be remembered that the German expedition is working from that side and it is possible that the two parties may meet.

G.T.R. IS ROASTED

Members of the House, Particularly Hon. Geo. P. Graham Are Resentful Because Men Have Not Been Taken Back

BILL IS PASSED

Ottawa, April 1.—The Grand Trunk financial bills passed the House in the dying hours of the twelfth Parliament on Saturday night, but not before a dozen members had expressed in strong language their feelings over the way the Grand Trunk was alleged to have violated its agreement with the men. They made it very clear that they were only allowing the present bills to pass the House on account of the financial considerations involved and because necessary improvements and betterments to the road would be held up, and expressed themselves in vigorous terms in favor of passing legislation to compel not only the Grand Trunk but all railways to keep their agreements with the men, and it was intimated that, although the legislation was permitted to pass, the Grand Trunk would be dealt with with a stern hand.

A special enactment will probably be introduced in the fall to meet the case.

Mr. Borden moved that the rule be suspended and that the Grand Trunk bills be taken up. When the chairman read the first clause of the bill, Mr. Lancaster (Lincoln) rose and spoke in terms of condemnation of the Grand Trunk and of Mr Hays in particular in connection with the strike of 1910.

"It is very difficult to know," said Mr. Lancaster, "what ought to be done in the interests of the people. I have not a particle of respect for the promoters of this bill under the circumstances. It was amended in committee so that it is in less dangerous form than it was. Mr. Lancaster then offered an amendment to the bill, which was not seconded, by the terms of which the Grand Trunk would be included in any future legislature covering circumstances similar to those existing in the dispute between the road and its men. He said that if he could see his way, without injuring the transportation interests of the country, to hold up the bill he would willingly talk till midnight and all day Monday to kill the bill and added that he had nothing but contempt for the management of the Grand Trunk Railway.

Mr. Wilcox (N. Essex), in whose constituency some of the strikers live, spoke in a similar strain. He read an order made by the Department of Immigration in 1910 allowing railway workers to come into the country without the usual money requirements, whereupon Mr. Lancaster asked what would the honorable gentleman think of having Mr. Hays deported as an undesirable alien, to which Mr. Wilcox replied, "I should think it worthy of serious consideration."

W. A. Clarke (North Wellington) urged that something ought to be done to protect the Grand Trunk employes on the branch lines. Many of the old employes who had been taken back by the company, were employed on the branch lines and would therefore come under the act recently announced by the company. Mr. Clarke, at the same time, explained that he had no particular objection to the passage of the bill on its merits, and, as in the general public interest, the need of betterments on the lines of the Grand Trunk being unquestionable.

Mr. Morphy (North Perth) said that never again would a dollar be given to the Grand Trunk unless it treated its men fairly.

Hon. George P. Graham, ex-Minister of Railways, told of his troubles with the Grand Trunk, and condemned the management for its treatment of its men in the matter of the strike. He said that he had not hesitated to tell the Grand Trunk authorities when he was in conference with them that he did not respect men either in a high or low position who could not keep a promise.

Major Currie (North Simcoe) under whose charge the bill was introduced, pointed out very strongly that the bill did not deal with the labor question of the Grand Trunk Railway. It was a purely domestic bill and had nothing to do with the relation of the House of Commons to the public. As far as he could see, the bill was attacked by certain members of the House because they were afraid to attack the public bill some days ago which gave a grant of four millions to the Grand Trunk Railway. While supporting the bill, he could not justify the action of the Grand Trunk Railway in that they did not carry out their agreement, but that had nothing to do with this bill.

French Auto Bandit Caught.

Paris, April 1.—The Minister of Justice, M. Briand, announced last night that one of the auto bandits had been arrested at Berck-Sur-Mer.

The name of the bandit is Soudy, and he is alleged to be one of the robbers who killed a chauffeur at Villeneuve-St. Georges on March 25, held up a bank at Chantily and killed two of the employes and wounded another, escaping with $20,000.

CANADA MAY RESCIND THE TREATY

Fisheries Pact With the United States is Likely to Come to an End—Regulations Drawn Up

ULTIMATUM IN CONGRESS

Ottawa, April 1.—Unless the United States Congress at the present session approves of the regulations, which have been drafted by the commissioners appointed by the international fisheries treaty, signed between the republic and the Dominion on April 11, 1908, it is likely that the Canadian Government will withdraw from the treaty.

Although the treaty was signed four years ago and the commissioners, consisting of Prof. Prince, representing Canada, and Dr. David Starr Jordon, representing the United States, prepared a code of regulations which were agreed to on May 29, 1909, the American Congress have never ratified them.

The British Columbia members, who are particularly interested, have been strongly urging that Canada withdraw from the treaty, and officials of the Department who have made a report to Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, also recommend consideration of withdrawal unless the United States acts at once.

The treaty was originally entered into with a view of protecting the fisheries along the Great Lakes and international boundaries waters. Unless there is common action by the two countries and similar laws and regulations as to closed seasons, etc., it is almost impossible to protect fisheries in waters common to both nations.

The difficulty in the United States seems to be principally over a clash beween Federal and State authority in the republic, the different State Governments make and administer the fishery regulations, and while it is held by the United States Attorney-General that the treaty overrides state law and rights the Federal Government had no legislation either to enable the promulgation of the regulations or for the appointment of a staff of officers to enforce them.

On Feb. 12, 1910, the President submitted the regulations to Congress in order that due legislation action might be taken. However, they waited to pass Congress. In 1911 the regulations were submitted to the Senate and approved as far as the Atlantic coast was concerned, but rejected in regard to the most important part, the great lakes and Pacific coast. The House of Representatives took no action. So far nothing has been done this year by Congress.

In British Columbia the situation is particularly acute. The treaty was, by a special clause, included the Fraser River. The salmon have to run the gauntlet of the United States nets along the coast of Washington before reaching the Fraser.

W. A. Found of the Fisheries Department, who has been making an investigation for Mr. Hazen, reports to him that the United States fishermen have the first chance at them and they are making the best of it to such an extent that the future of the fishery in the Fraser seems doomed unless more restrictive regulations are enforced in Washington State.

Mr. Found adds that no attempt is made to enforce the Washington State regulations, nor do the fishermen think of abiding by them.

To Celebrate Cartier Centenary.

Winnipeg, April 1.—E. W. Villeneuve and John Boyd, delegates from the Cartier centenary committee of Montreal, who have been several days in Winnipeg with the object of securing the co-operation of the Manitoba Government and the City of Winnipeg in the great celebration which is to be held at Montreal in 1914, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of Sir George Etienne Cartier's birth, left for home Saturday. Their mission was crowned with complete success. Premier Roblin having promised a grant of $5,000 and the co-operation of his Government.

Spanish War Veteran a Suicide.

Holland Landing, April 1.—William Sloan, aged 48, committed suicide about ten o'clock Saturday night in the English Church Cemetery here, by taking prussic acid.

He was a pensioner, having served in the Spanish-American war, and was dispenser in the drug department of the Soldiers' Home at Washington, D.C., for the past ten years, and only left Washington on the 22nd inst. for a vacation. He was unmarried, was subject to melancholia, and has made unsuccessful attempts on his life before.

"MY STOMACH IS FINE

Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Middlehurst, Waterloo, Ont., an ardent testimonial recommends Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach", she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"There are adjustments to be made. A man of accuracy is necessary."

"I will remember."

"And he must be likable. I can do nothing with a man with whom I'm not perfectly in accord."

"I understand that."

"Good-night then." A moment of hesitancy, then, "I wish not only yourself but Miss Scott to be present at this test. Prepare her for the spectacle; but not yet, not till within an hour or two of the occasion."

And with a proud smile in which flashed a significance which startled Oswald, he gave a hurried nod and turned away.

When in an hour afterwards, Doris looked in through the open door, she found Oswald sitting with face buried in his hands, thinking so deeply that he did not hear her. He had sat like this, immovable and absorbed, ever since his brother had left him.

CHAPTER XXXV.

SILENCE — AND A KNOCK.

Oswald did not succeed in finding a man to please Orlando. He suggested one person after another to the exacting inventor, but none were satisfactory to him and each in turn was turned down. It is not every one we want to have share a world-wide triumph or an ignominious defeat. And the days were passing.

He had said in a moment of elation, "I will do it alone," but he knew even then that he could not. Two hands were necessary to start the car; afterwards, he might manage it alone. Descent was even possible, but to give the contrivance its first lift required a second mechanician. Where was he to find one to please him? And what was he to do if he did not? Conquer his prejudices against such men as he had seen, or delay the attempt, as Oswald had suggested, till he could get one of his old cronies on from New York. He could do neither. The obstinacy of his nature was such as to offer an invincible barrier against either suggestion. One alternative remained. He had heard of women aviators. If Doris could be induced to accompany him into the air, instead of clinging sodden-like to the weight of Oswald's woe, then would the world behold a triumph which would dwarf the ecstasy of the bird's flight and rob the eagle of his kingly pride. But Doris barely enduced him as yet, and the thought was not one to be considered for a moment. Yet what other course remained? He was brooding deeply on the subject, in his hangar one evening—(it was Thursday and Saturday was but two days off) when there came a light knock at the door.

This had never occurred before. He had given strict orders, backed by his brother's authority, that he was never to be intruded upon when in this place; and though he had sometimes encountered the prying eyes of the curious flashing from behind the trees encircling the hangar, his door had never been approached before, or his privacy encroached upon. He started then, when this low but penetrating sound struck across the turmoil of his thoughts, and cast one look in the direction from which it came; but he did not rise, or even change his position on his workman's stool.

Then it came again, still low but with an insistence which drew his brows together and made his hand fall from the wire he had been unconsciously holding through the mental debate which was absorbing him. Still he made no response, and the knocking continued. Should he ignore it entirely, start up his motor and render himself oblivious in all other sounds? At every other point in his career he would have done this, but an unknown, and as yet unnamed, something had entered his heart during this fatal month, which made old ways impossible and oblivion a thing he dared not court too recklessly. Should this be a summons from Doris! Should (inconceivable idea, yet it seised upon him relentlessly and would not yield for the asking), should it be Doris herself!

Taking advantage of a momentary cessation of the ceaseless tap, tap, he listened. Silence was never profounder than in this forest on that windless night. Earth and air seemed, to his strained ear, emptied of all sound. The clatter of his own steady, unhastened heart-beat was all that broke upon the stillness. He might be alone in the Universe for all token of life beyond these walls, or so he was saying to himself, when sharp, quick, sinister, the knocking recommenced, demanding admission, insisting upon attention, drawing him against his own will to his feet, and finally, though he made more than one stand against it, to the very door.

"Who's there?" he asked, imperiously and with some show of anger.

No answer, but another quiet knock.

"Speak! or go from my door. No one has the right to intrude here. What is your name and business?"

With an outburst of wrath, which made the hangar ring, Orlando lifted his fist to answer this appeal in his own fierce fashion from his own side of the door; but the impulse paused at fulfillment, and he let his arm fall again in a rush of self-hatred which it would have pained his worse enemy, even little Doris, to witness. As it reached his side, the knock came again.

It was too much. With an oath, Orlando reached for his key. But before fitting it into the lock, he cast a look behind him. The car was in plain sight, filling the central-space from floor to roof. A single glance from a stranger's eye, and its principal secret would be a secret no longer. He must not run a risk. Before he answered this call, he must drop the curtain he had rigged up against such emergencies as these. He had but to pull a cord and a veil would fall before his treasure, concealing it as effectually as an Eastern bride is concealed behind her yashmak.

Stepping to the wall, he drew that cord, then with an impatient sigh, returned to the door.

Another quiet but insistent knock greeted him.

In no fury now, but with a vague sense of portent which gave an aspect of farewell to the one quick glance he cast about the well-known spot, he fitted the key in the lock, and stood ready to turn it.

"I ask again your name and your business," he shouted out in loud command. "Tell them or—" He meant to say, "or I do not turn this key." But something withheld the threat. He knew that it would perish in the utterance; that he could not carry it out. He would have to open the door now, response or no response. "Speak!" was the word with which he finished his demand.

The door remained unopened.

Stepping slowly back, he stared at its unpainted boards for a moment, then he spoke up quietly, almost courteously:

"Enter."

But the command passed unheeded: the latch was not raised, and only the slightest tap was heard.

With a bound he reached forward and pulled the door open. Then a great silence fell upon him and a rigidity as of the grave seised and stiffened his powerful frame.

The man confronting him from the darkness was Sweetwater.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

THE MAN WITHIN AND THE MAN WITHOUT.

An instance of silence, during which the two men eyed each other; then, Sweetwater, with an ironical smile directed towards the pistol lightly remarked:

"Mr. Challoner and other men at the hotel are acquainted with my purpose and await my return. I have come—" here he cast a glowing look at the huge curtain cutting off the greater portion of the illy-lit interior— "to offer you my services, Mr. Brotherson. I have no other motive for this intrusion than to be of use. I am deeply interested in your invention, to the development of which I have already lent some aid, and can bring to the test you propose a sympathetic help which you could hardly find in any other person living."

The silence which settled down at the completion of these words had a weight which made that of the previous moment seem light and all athrob with sound. The man within had not yet caught his breath; the man without head his, in an anxiety which had little to do with the direction of the weapon, into which he looked. Then an owl hooted far away in the forest, and Orlando, slowly lowering his arm, asked in an oddly constrained tone:

"How long have you been in town?"

The answer cut clean through any lingering hope he may have had.

"Ever since the day your brother was told the story of his great misfortune."

"Ah! still at your old tricks! I thought you had quit that business as unprofitable."

"I don't know. I never expect quick returns. He who holds on for a rise sometimes reaps unlooked-for profits."

The arm and fist of Orlando Brotherson ached to hurl this fellow back into the heart of the midnight woods.

But they remained quiescent and he spoke instead:

"I have buried the business. You will never resuscitate it through me."

Sweetwater smiled. There was no mirth in his smile though there was lightness in his tone as he said:

"Then let us go back to the matter in hand. You need a helper; where are you going to find one if you don't take me?"

A growl from Brotherson's set lips. Never had he looked more dangerous than in the one burning instant following this daring repetition of the detective's outrageous request. But so he noted how slight was the figure opposing him from the other side of the threshold, he was swayed by his natural admiration of pluck in the physically weak, and lost his threatening attitude, only to assume one which Sweetwater secretly found it even harder to meet.

"You are a fool," was the stinging remark he heard flung at him. "Do you want to play the police-officer here and arrest me in mid air?"

"Mr. Brotherson, you understand me as little as I am supposed to understand you. Humble as my place is in society, and, I may add, in the department whose interests I serve, there are in me two men. One you know passably well—the detective whose methods, only indifferently clever show that he has very much to learn. Of the other—the workman acquainted with hammer and saw, but with some knowledge too of higher mathematics and the principles upon which great mechanical inventions depend, you know little, and must imagine much. I was playing the gawky when I helped you in the old house in Brooklyn. I was interested in your airship—Oh, I recognised it for what it was, notwithstanding its oddity and lack of ostensible means for flying—but I was not caught in the whirl of its idea; the idea by which you doubtless expect, and with very good reason too, to revolutionize the science of aviation. But since then I've been thinking it over, and am so filled with your own hopes that either I must have a hand in the finishing and sailing of the one you have yourself constructed, or go to work myself on the hints you have unconsciously given me, and make a car of my own."

Audacity often succeeds where subtlier means fail. Orlando, with a curious twist of his strong lip, took hold of the detective's arm and drew him in, shutting and locking the door carefully behind him.

"Now," said he, "you shall tell me what you have discovered, to make any ideas of your own available in the manufacture of a superior self-propelling air ship."

Sweetwater who had been so violently wheeled about in entering that he stood with his back to the curtain concealing the car, answered without hesitation:

"You have a device, entirely new so far as I can judge, by which this car can leap at once into space, hold its own in any direction, and alight again upon any given spot without shock to the machine or danger to the people controlling it."

"Explain the device."

"I will draw it."

"You can?"

"As I see it."

"As you see it?"

"Yes. It's a brilliant idea; I could never have conceived it."

"You believe—"

"I know."

"Sit here. Let's see what you know."

Sweetwater sat down at the table the other pointed out, and drawing forward a piece of paper, took up a pencil with an easy air. Brotherson approached and stood at his shoulder. He had taken up his pistol again, why he hardly knew, and as Sweetwater began his marks, his fingers tightened on its butt till they turned white in the murky lamplight.

"You see," came in easy tones from the stooping draughtsman, "I have an imagination which only needs a slight fillip from a mind like yours to send it in the desired direction. I shall not draw an exact reproduction of your idea, but I think you will see that I understand it very well. How's that for a start?"

Brotherson looked and hastily drew back. He did not want the other to note his surprise.

"But that is a portion you never saw," he loudly declared.

"No, but I saw this," returned Sweetwater, working easily in some curves; "and these gave me the fillip I mentioned. The rest came easily."

Brotherson, in dread of his own anger, threw his pistol to the other end of the shed:

"You knave! You thief!" he furiously cried.

"How so?" asked Sweetwater smilingly, rising and looking him calmly in the face. "A thief is one who appropriates another man's goods, or, let us say, another man's ideas. I have appropriated nothing—yet. I've only shown you how easily I could do so. Mr. Brotherson, take me in as your assistant. I will be faithful to you, I swear it. I want to see that machine go up."

Tomato Soup

Add one-half cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats to one pint can of tomatoes. Simmer 15 minutes through a sieve, add to one quart of stock, cook, season and serve with croutons.

Tillson's Oats

Your grocer will tell you that the selling of foods in packages is a vast improvement over the selling of foods in bulk.

And all authorities on health, hygiene and domestic science will tell you that your grocer is right.

Tillson's Rolled Oats are sold only in packages.

This insures your receiving Tillson's in the same condition in which they leave our model mills.

Another thing, the package protects the thin, delicate flakes of Tillson's so that they reach you unbroken.

And finally, the distinctive Tillson's package insures your getting the genuine Tillson's Oats.

Your grocer has Tillson's. Two sizes—10c and 25c. Each 25c package contains a handsome piece of English Porcelain Tableware.

You Are on the Bench

YOU—the Public—are the judge. On your good opinion and your good word depends the success of the advertised article. For no amount of advertising will induce you to buy a second time what you do not like. No advertising will offset the bad effect of a dissatisfied buyer.

That is why advertisers must and do maintain the quality of their goods.

Advertisers realize that to turn their outlay for advertising into profit they must give good value.

They are not looking for one-time sales. First sales, in most cases, would not pay for the advertising.

To be successful, they must make steady customers. So, quality is being put in to hold the trade that advertising produces.

Thus, to be sure of quality, one naturally turns to goods that are advertised. And isn't it only reasonable?

No manufacturer can afford to advertise for long an inferior article. From the moment the advertising begins, the quality must either be kept uniform or improved—to go back means ruin.

The day is passing when you ask for a pint of pickles. You name the brand.

You don't ask for Rolled Oats. You name the brand you prefer.

The unknown article may be good, but you are not so sure of it as you are of the advertised article, which bears the seal of quality, —a well known maker's trade name.

TO MANUFACTURERS

You who make good goods and do not advertise—show your confidence in your product.

Got A Pain In Your Back?

IF YOU HAVE HEED THE WARNING.

You get a pain in your back, and you wonder what is the matter. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Heed the warning; cure the weak, lame, aching back and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't do this, serious complications are very apt to arise, and the first thing you know you will be troubled with Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease; the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

On the first sign of a pain in the back, Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken

They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the backache and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. Stewart Johnston, Richardson Mines, N.S., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my back, and I had to give up work. I tried Dr. after Dr., and was getting no better. I had almost given up hope when I began to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I took three boxes of them, and found I was completely cured. I feel I owe my life to Doan's Kidney Pills."

RELIGION NOW AVOIDED

Summary of Report of I.B.S.A. Foreign Mission Investigation Committee.

New York, March 31.—The International Bible Students Association secured the Hippodrome in which to hear the report of its Committee on Foreign Missions Investigation. The spacious auditorium was crowded. Prof. F. H. Robison, as Secretary of the Committee, announced that the Report as a whole had been submitted to the Association and was in the printer's hands, to appear in pamphlet form illustrated. It will shortly be procurable at the small price of five cents per copy, postpaid to any address—free to the poor. The conclusion of the Report is in the nature of a Summary, which he read. We note some of its more salient points, as follows:

Oriental Christians are about as sincere, intelligent and earnest as the average of church attendents in Europe and America—few saintly.

Christianizing endeavors seem pretty generally to have ceased! Present missionary endeavors are almost exclusively along the line of secular education and medical aid.

There is less need of Academic and Collegiate education, such as the missionaries forward, than for Common Schooling. The general Common School education could best be furnished by the Government and along unsectarian lines, after the method followed under the United States' supervision in the Philippin Islands. The tendency of the times in the Orient, as in the Occident, is toward unbelief in any religion.

The Orientals are remarkably tolerant of all religions, and are often perplexed at the Missionary competition, and opposition between Christian denominations. They would accept Christianity if it could demonstrate its superiority.

Orientals are not heathen-savages, but their educated classes include splendid specimens of noble manhood, the moral and intellectural peers of Europeans and Americans. The masses of these people are less vicious, less rude, more kind and considerate than are the masses of Europe and America. Drunkenness and outward immodesty are almost unknown.

Many of the churches are self-sustaining and the Orientals prefer to have them so, as they desire native preachers, and to manage their own affairs.

The very suggestion of the world's conversion is ridiculous to the peoples of the East—including the Mission aries. * * * The interest on $30,000,000, or the principal multiplied a hundred times, would accomplish little except along the lines of secular education—nothing as respects the world's conversion. Nothing short of "the Kingdom of God's dear Son" can meet the issue.

Pastor Russell's discourse follows: "Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession."—Psalm ii. 8.

The prophetic words, addressed by Jehovah to his Son, the Messiah, continually recurred to my mind as I mingled with and observed the peoples of India, China, Japan and the Philippines during our recent World Tour. Then certain questions came before my mind, which with their answers I will place before you.

The first question was, Why do we call these people heathen? They are not barbarous, not savages, not lawless people. Indeed, long centuries ago, when our forefathers were barbarians, these had much of the civilization which they still retain. But I said, we call them heathen because the Bible so refers to them. Let us see how and why the Bible uses this term and what is its significance. In Bible usage the word rendered "heathen" is the same as is sometimes rendered nations and Gentiles. For centuries it applied to all peoples outside the little nation of Israel, because that one nation had entered into Covenant-relationship with God and had become His people, His dominion.

All the other nations, not thus related to God by Covenant, were styled heathen; all the outside nations were aliens, strangers and foreigners from the Covenants and promises made to them. It is the more a reason why we have brought the special rest to some hearts, and the special discontent to others—the masses.

This is the answer: The Bible alone, of all religious books, sets forth prominently the equality of all men before the Almighty God. This thought once grasped breaks all fetters of the mind. But all are not prepared for such liberty—some evidently would enjoy great peace and would be more quiet, more reverential and more submissive if they continued bound with a measure of superstition, than if the truth should make them free.

The only persons who can rightly appreciate and properly enjoy full liberty are those who have made a full consecration of themselves to the Lord—those who have given over all earthly ambitions and aims to the one great ambition of the Gospel of Christ—to become heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord. Those only can be fully entrusted with liberty who have realized the imperfection of all human judgment, and who have accepted instead of their own the Divine will. This is the class of whom St. Paul spoke, saying, "We have the mind of Christ" and this he declares to the only "spirit of a sound mind" in the world at the present time.

Nevertheless, some of the saintly people are disesteemed by many of the worldly-minded who are rising Heaven and earth at home and abroad to amass wealth, power and fame for themselves, their families, their friends, their names, none of whom are satisfied, none of whom is at peace, either with God or with themselves. Who can doubt that the carrying of our western civilization to the people of the east will carry to them similar discontent, unrest, unhappiness, anger, malice, envy, hatred and strife which is peculiar to the Occident? But most likely the effect of the Western civilization on the Chinese will be to wake up a hundreds of millions to discontent and strife, and possibly bring anarchy to her doors sooner than it will come to Europe and America.

But our text declares that Messiah will ask of the Father, He will be given the heathen for His inheritance, and the uttermost part of the earth for His possession. Will He ask for them? Why has He not already asked for them, and why would He do with them, and would not His dealing with them have with the same influence that the Gospel Message now produces—to make them dissatisfied?

Our Lord intimates most distinctly His reason for not asking for the heathen at the first advent. In His prayer the same night in which He was betrayed to death He said, "I pray not for the world (the heathen), but for those whom thou hast given Me"—the household of faith, His footstep followers, "the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven."

The Redeemer knew the Father's will and prayed only in harmony therewith. He knew that the first work of the Divine Plan was to be the calling and testing of an elect "little flock," to be His associates in the Kingdom, His Bride to share with Him His glory, honor and immortality. He asked not then for the world, knowing that the Father's time had not then come. Hence we read that He ascended up on high and sat down at the right hand of the Divine Majesty, henceforth waiting for the time when His enemies should be made His footstool, and the Gentiles be given to Him for an inheritance. He knew that this time would not come until first His Church had been developed.

At and shortly after Pentecost all the faithful of the nation of Israel (Israelites indeed, were given of the Holy Spirit that they might become members of spiritual Israel, the Bride class. As there is not a sufficiency of such Jewish Divine Plan, as previously stated, proceeded to call and teach of the heathen as were feeling after God and seeking after His righteousness. The entire work has required the intervening time, and now the close of the six great days of man's labor and sweat of face, sorrow and dying, the great seventh thousand year day is about to be ushered in. It is the period already appointed of the Father for Messiah's reign of righteousness, in which the Bride of Christ will reign with Him.

My next question was, What will be the end of this long night of ignorance, superstition, sin and death?

The Bible's answer quickly to my mind. The Divine promise is that Messiah's kingdom shall be successful, that it will bless an abundance of people, that the knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess." Moreover, we are assured that this will be a bowing of sincere loyalty and obedience, because the context says that it shall be to the glory of God, and no other kind of bowing and confessing would glorify God. Then came the further assurance of the Bible to my mind: St. Peter's declaration, that "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets."—Acts iii, 19-21.

I also remembered the promise that the Redeemer would yet see the fruition and be satisfied. I remembered that assurance which He also gave, saying, "Every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth heard I saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might to Him that sitteth on the Throne, and to the Lamb, forever." I remembered also His final testimony, that eventually, There shall be no more sighing, no more crying, no more dying, because all "the former things" of sin and death will have passed away.

To Revive Old Custom.

It is proposed to revive the ancient custom of awarding the Dunmow Flitch, and circulars have been sent to the villagers asking for support to the movement, which, it is intended, shall be of the nature of a carnival. The last celebration was six years ago, when two married couples stood trial for the prize. In previous years the bacon was imported for the occasion; this year the hogs are to be killed and the sides cured in the town, and the flitches handed to the winners marked with the old Dunmow Priory brand.

When Cats Were Scarce.

In a curious collection of ancient Welsh laws, dated 943 A. D., appears the following sentence from which it would appear that cats were rather scarce at that time: "The worth of a kitten until it shall open its eyes is one legal penny; from that time till it shall kill mice, two legal pennies; after it shall kill mice, four legal pence, and so it shall always remain."

A Labouchere Story.

Lord Taunton was Labouchere's uncle, and some one, wishing to be agreeable to Labouchere, said, "Oh, Mr. Labouchere, I have just heard your father make an admirable speech in the House of Lords."

"Really?" said Labouchere. "My father has been dead some years, and I always wondered where he had gone to."

If The Hair Root Is Not Dead, Do Not Despair

Falling hair means scanty hair, and scanty hair means baldness. The whole trouble is caused by dandruff germs that destroy the natural nourishment that is supplied to the hair root.

PARISIAN SAGE, the scientific hair nourisher, penetrates into the roots of hair and not only kills the germs but supplies the hair root with just the kind of nourishment it should have.

If you are getting bald; if your hair is falling, don't wait till too late, but get a bottle of PARISIAN SAGE to-day.

It is possible to save your hair and prevent baldness if the hair root is not dead.

PARISIAN SAGE is guaranteed to satisfy every user, or money back. It stops falling hair, scalp itch, and banishes dandruff in two weeks. It is a refined hair dressing that puts a radiant lustre into faded, dull hair. Fifty cents at Wm. Madill's and dealers everywhere.

THE DIAMOND WAY OF DEATH

PERIL and Privation Endured by an Expedition Where Gems Are Found in the Streets and Three Days' Toil Yields a Harvest Worth $2,000,000

BY EDWIN CLEARY.

It was after the lights were out in the public rooms of Kaiserhof, in Luderitzbucht, where I had been a guest for two days in the early part of September, that the porter knocked at my door to inform me that a stranger desired to see me on business of the utmost importance.

Luderitzbucht is the principal port of German Southwest Africa, as well as the door to the newly discovered diamond fields of Damaraland, lying among the great sand dunes hundreds of feet in height in continual motion across the granite plane that follows the line of the coast from the Orange River to Walfisch Bay; and, as the only business considered to be of any importance at all at present in that forlorn corner of the earth was in connection with diamonds, I was not surprised to learn that my visitor's object was to interest me in a project that concerned the precious stones. He proved to be a weazened little German, about forty years of age, who looked the personification of mystery.

After swearing me to eternal secrecy in the event of my not acceding to the proposition he had to make, and making me lock my door and pull down my window shades, he cautiously produced from recesses of his raiment a three-quarter carat diamond. This stone he told me he had found in a part of Damaraland where no diamond claims had previously been located, but in a section of country exactly resembling the district of Pomona, with which he was familiar, where the most valuable discoveries in the new fields had been made.

My self-imposed acquaintance informed me that his name was Messer and that he had come to Damaraland as a baker with the German army that had just put down the Herero uprising. Being of an enterprising and adventurous nature he had renounced baking during the excitement attendant upon the diamond discoveries and set out to find a fortune in gems for himself. Deciding to prospect to the northward, he had boarded an old trader at Luderitzburg and been wrecked on the coast just opposite Hollam's Bird Island, about 250 miles away. With some others he had been saved from the wreck and, venturing a short distance into the interior, had come upon a vast tract of diamondiferous sand—the counterpart, he declared, of Pomona—where, he told me, he had found the diamond in his possession.

After many vicissitudes, according to his story, he and his companions of the wreck had found their way back along the coast to Luderitzbucht. Messer had made a rough map of the location of his eldorado, on the strength of which he had effected registry of fifty-one claims by the Diamant Gesellschaft that controls the entire output of Damaraland, and he now desired to finance an expedition to go back and work them. Me, as a railroad contractor in Africa, assumed by him to be of boundless wealth, he had elected as his "angel."

During the two days that I had been in German Southwest Africa, having come thither on railroad business that did not materialize, I had been subjected to infection from diamond fever. Visiting Pomona and some of the great diamond claims in the vicinity of Luderitzbucht, such as the Weiss-De Million, the Kolman's Koop and the Phoenix properties, I had heard wonderful stories of the sudden acquisition of vast wealth. I was shown one spot in the Pomona district where twenty negro laborers, working under two white overseers, had picked up 60,000 carats of diamonds, valued at more than $2,000,000, in three days, and at a point about ten miles from Luderitzbucht I was assured that two white men had gathered 8,000 carats, worth over $300,000, in a single afternoon.

Other as wonderful tales had been related and I had ceased to wonder that in Damaraland men on horseback as well as on foot kept their eyes on the ground, since anywhere precious stones might lie under one's feet. Diamonds have frequently been found in the streets of Luderitzbucht, and more than once I had myself experienced a thrill on catching a gleam from the dirt of the pavement, which, on investigation, would prove to be from the fragment of a broken bottle or other negligible glassware.

The great mass of the diamonds of Damaraland are found in the narrow valleys between the moving sand dunes, on a granite surface, with its carpet of three to four inches of sand, always with a tuft caused by the blowing particles. In these flat places negro laborers, in bands of from ten to fifty, with an overseer to every ten or twelve men, crawl slowly on their knees over the sand in search of the gems, each one carrying a bottle in which he drops them as they are found.

Fifty laborers will thus scan about an acre a day. They are entirely naked except for a breechcloth and pads for hands and knees, which, with the persons of their wearers, are thoroughly searched whenever they leave work. One feature of diamond hunting in Damaraland that seems almost uncanny lies in the circumstance that the same thoroughly searched area may be gone over again a few months afterward with an almost equally successful result as on the first inspection, proving that these gems are continually on the march.

Messer came at the right moment to precipitate diamond fever in my case. He had already been able to raise enough on the potentiality of wealth resulting from his discovery among the bakers of Luderitzburg to pay the fees for the registration of his claims, and I believed that opportunity had knocked at my door with him. Before making terms with Messer, however, I discussed the matter with Otto H. Schuller, a geologist I had known at the Kimberley diamond mines. He was a man of thirty-five or thereabouts who had been expert engineer in the Schuller Brothers' mines near Pretoria, of which he was part owner, and who then represented one of the biggest diamond firms in the world, Ulrich's, at Kimberley.

Schuller had come to Damaraland to study conditions in the new diamond fields, but when I told him what Messer had told me and offered to put up the money for a prospecting expedition and share profits with him, if there were any, provided he would accompany me in his capacity as diamond expert, he accepted the proposition with alacrity. This meant something, for Schuller was paid big fees and his services were in constant demand, so that he did not ordinarily take chances.

It was no holiday trip to Messer's claim but one fraught with actual peril. To go by water was out of the question, unless we wished to land in the manner the adventurous baker had done, for there was no harbor between Luderitzburg and Swakopmund, the northern port of German Southwest Africa. Our only land route lay along the coast, and that meant carrying provisions and water for man and beast to last at least a month, travelling along the beach when the tide was out and taking refuge among the sand dunes when the water came back. We were told that only two men had ever been known to get as far north from Luderitzburg by land as Swakopmund; that not more than two or three expeditions had ever succeeded in getting as far as the point opposite Holland's Bird Island, and that at least a score of expeditions that had gone in that direction to locate claims had not since been heard of.

"He barely got past the furthermost ledges before the ocean was roaring over them."

However, Schuller, Messer and I firmly believed that another Pomona was awaiting us to the north, and nothing could dampen our enthusiasm, although during the three days we were getting the expedition ready the entire white community did its best to discourage us. There were plenty of pack animals to be had in Luderitzbucht, by reason of the fact that the Germans had imported camels and donkeys from Egypt for the use of the army in the war with the Hereros, and these animals were brought from the grazing lands further north by sea at small expense.

I purchased for our journey nine camels, three donkeys, a horse and a mule. The mule was a "find." He was a particularly big and powerful brute, and had been ridden by a German officer during the Herero campaign, but had become so vicious that he was expelled from the army and sent to Luderitzburg to be sold. It occurred to me that a few days' travel carrying weight in the sand would change that mule's point of view, when his great strength would be valuable—and I was not mistaken. The mule was the only one of the dumb animals to survive the journey. I had had experience all over Africa in organizing railway survey expeditions, and knew to an ounce what food supplies ought to be taken and how much a pack animal was capable of carrying under ordinary conditions. I had never had experience, however, in travelling through a country without a blade of grass or a drop of fresh water, though, as it turned out, the estimate I made was close enough.

Aside from Schuller and myself the personnel of the expedition consisted of Messer and two of his compatriots, who like himself were bakers by trade, and were to act as hostlers and drivers, with two "bushboys," as the natives were called, to assist them. We carried biltong (dried beef), bacon, flour, lard, coffee, tea, sugar, Liebig compressed soups, and plug tobacco, to last the humans from thirty to forty days, and oats and meal for our beasts of burden for the same period.

Seven of the nine camels were laden with water, and, as these animals, by reason of internal construction, are able to go eight days without drinking, we intended to water them at Anikhab, two days' journey along the coast, where, by digging to the depth of ten feet where the mouth of a river had been filled in with sand, we might obtain a brackish fluid that would enable them to go for eight days more, when we would be able to get additional brackish water near Walfisch Bay, two hundred and eighty miles further, provided that they were able to reach that point within the time specified.

We carried no water for washing purposes and were compelled to face the necessity of deferring ablution until our return to Luderitzbucht. Besides food and water, we carried aluminum cooking utensils and a sleeping sack, a rubber sheet and two blankets for each man, as well as a tent large enough to cover us all, to be used when the wind blew the sand with unusual violence. Each man wore an apparatus over his head resembling a diver's helmet, fitted with glass goggles and a respirator, to keep the sand out of hair, eyes and nose, and a small, but well equipped medicine chest was a part of the outfit. Schuller, Messer and I carried each an aluminum flask of brandy, but it was a point of honor with us that no one should take a drink himself or give one to anybody else without the consent of the others.

Our expedition left Luderitzbucht in the darkness just before dawn on the morning of Wednesday, September 14, and when the sun rose we were among the great sand mountains north of the town, with a zigzag journey before us, out to the beach and back to the hills, and on and back again and again, alternately with the ebbing and incoming of the tide, covering more than five hundred miles to negotiate the 250 miles as the crow flies between ourselves and Messer's claim—not to mention the return journey.

Our animals were in good condition, for they had had all they could eat and drink for three days' previous, as preparations for weeks of hardship. The mule particularly was in such fine spirits that we were delayed an hour in getting his load secured to his back—for I had decided to ride a camel until the enthusiasm of the hybrid might be reduced. Schuller rode the horse; Messer's mount was a camel, and the other two bakers and bushboys came on foot driving the pack animals.

The coast of Damaraland is like no other part of the world. For five hundred miles the giant sand dunes, pushed unceasingly by the winds from the southwest, are piling up at the water's edge to the height of hundreds of feet, during the periods that the tide is out, to be undermined and overthrown when the sea returns. Some of the largest of these dunes have been known to move as much as nine feet in twenty-four hours. The effect when the incoming tide cuts them down for as many miles in either direction as the eye can reach and the ever oncoming sand behind pours over the edge is like a limitless brown Niagara. To venture far among the sand dunes without a compass is to court almost certain death. We were able to guide our course by the sea for the better part of the journey, however, as we seldom went further from the water's edge than was necessary to escape the tide, except on such occasions as when we might see an opportunity to make a short cut across the base of a sand hill.

We realized as soon as we had started that we were entered upon a race with tragic consequences should we fail to win. It was a race against water, a race against the strength of our animals, a race against a dwindling food supply, a daily race with the tide. We were buoyed however, by the thought of the myriad diamonds scattered over the sand at the point that was our destination, and neither Schuller nor I once mentioned our forebodings of disaster to the other during the long and tedious journey.

We reached Anikhab without misadventure, and here Schuller and I left Messer and the others with the pack animals to give them their fill of water, as the camels would be compelled to go on afterward for the entire eight days that was the limit of their power of abstention. Anikhab is African for "sweet water," and although the stuff we got there was so brackish that we could scarcely swallow it, we found it sweet enough on the return journey. With Schuller I went on another day's journey to Spencer's Bay, where we were to wait for the caravan, I riding the mule, which was always the most tractable of beasts. Spencer's Bay is a deep choked harbor, where were half a dozen old hulks, structures made of canvas, old boxes and wreckage, occupied by ten or twelve men. They were German adventurers and Kimberley riffraff who had come to Damaraland in search of diamonds and were now reduced to guarding stores for and selling water to other prospectors. They brought the water from Anikhab on donkeys and sold it for anything they could make the purchaser pay.

Death Wail of the Camel.

We rested two days at Spencer's Bay, when the rest of the expedition came up. Then, burying everything in the line of supplies we could dispense with until our return, we started on before daylight Sunday morning, our fifth day from Luderitzburg, determined to make Cape Cliff, thirty miles further on, before nightfall. We were compelled to camp on the hither side of the cape, which is really a mountain, however, and the next morning our first accident occurred. As Schuller and I, leading the caravan, were going down the other side of the cliff an unearthly wail rose behind us that seemed to fill the air with anguish. Turning back, we found that one of the best of our camels had stepped into a crevice in the rocks and broken one of its forelegs. Its sufferings did not last long, for I reduced the weight we were carrying by one leaden cartridge, and we were then forced to divide the dead camel's burden of some three hundred and fifty pounds weight among the other pack animals.

Twenty-five miles beyond Cape Cliff, at a point where an English freighter bound from Southampton to Capetown with a cargo of wooden railroad ties and tallow candles had gone on the rocks, the shore was strewn with her wreckage. Candles and ties were scattered along the sand for miles, and here Schuller and I had our first hearty laugh since leaving Luderitzburg. Some one had built three or four huts with the wooden sleepers, and on the front of one of these rude structures an English or American humorist (English, probably, for I think that I was the first American to visit that part of the Damaraland coast) had been at the pains to burn into the wood with some of the superabundance of candles the words "Carlton Hotel," with the street signs "Pall Mall" on one corner and "Haymarket" on the other.

Our usual method of spending the night was for each man to scoop out the sand into a sort of shallow grave, in which half of his rubber sheet was laid. Then the camper put on his sleeping sack, got into his trench and tucked his blankets around him, and composed himself to pleasant dreams. The waterproofing was necessary because of the heavy dews, which further made it essential to bury all our supplies in the sand over night. On this particular evening, however, the hospitality of the "Carlton" was so reminiscently inviting that we decided to put up there; and, being impelled to further luxury, in accord with the reputation of the parent hostelry—and having three bakers in our entourage—we added fresh doughnuts to our customary bill of fare of soup, coffee and bacon.

The following day was one of disaster, and had it not been for the diamond in Messer's pocket and what it signified to us we might have turned back. During our first two or three days of travel we had met several expeditions returning to Luderitzbucht—none of which had ventured further north than Spencer's Bay, however. On this morning we encountered the remnant, consisting of three Germans, one Cape Boer, two bushboys, and three camels, of a caravan that had been as far as Sylvia Hills, a day's journey this side of our destination. Five other camels, carrying most of the provender and water of the expedition, had been caught by the tide the day before on the twenty mile stretch of ragged coast—the most dangerous between Luderitzbucht and Swakopmund—that we would be compelled to cross that afternoon. The three remaining camels had had no water for seven days, and could live only one more day without, while Spencer's Bay, the nearest point where the precious fluid might be obtained, was a two days' journey.

The men, ragged, dilapidated and almost broken down, had scarcely food and water for themselves to last until they might reach that first forlorn outpost of civilization, but they had plenty of money, and they urged us to sell our stores to them at any price and turn back. We gave them a very little food and a very little water, for they were going toward supplies and we away from them, and we could not afford to be generous.

It was about noon that we reached the seventy foot cliff that was the gate to the pass where our friends of the morning had lost the camels carrying their food and water, and then it was that Messer's diamond was needed to exercise all its powers. Although our pack animals were almost tired out there was no time for a moment's rest, for the tide was full and on the turn, and by the time we could reach the beach would have ebbed sufficiently for us to begin the dreaded march. We would then have six hours in which to cover the twenty miles, and it meant certain death did we fail to reach the other side before the tide came in again. On our left as we came out on the strand was the boisterous surf of the western ocean, and leading into it were long tongues of ragged granite, from six to thirty and forty feet high, and from one hundred yards to a mile apart. The thrust end of these tongues beat themselves under mountains of sand, the dunes piling up one above another to the height of a thousand feet, and we were all cognizant of the fact that the terrible incoming tide, with the full force of the southwestern Atlantic in all its accumulated strength, would soon come rushing back to tear away the foundations of those towering sand mountains and melt them by millions of tons into the sea, and that any one of us caught between the two would be able to offer as effective resistance as a single grain of the sand.

The caravan would have been in much better condition to cover the twenty miles of sand and crag if our animals had been fresh, but had we allowed them to rest over the next tide we should have lost nearly a day, and the camels had already been three of their possible eight days without water, while the nearest supply was a day's journey beyond the Messer claim.

After the first mile along the beach the strength of the three donkeys, which had begun to lag further and further behind, gave out entirely, and there was nothing for us to do but waste precious moments unloading their packs and dividing the weight as equally as possible among the eight overloaded camels. Relieved of their burdens, the donkeys turned back to the south, but whether they ever got as far as Spencer's Bay, where they might have worked for their board, I do not know. Soon after the donkeys left us we came across what the jackals had left of the camels that had been lost the day before. There was no path over the sharp ledges and jutting crags, and, in continual fear of the return of the tide, we kept on and on, over obstacle after obstacle, coaxing, pushing, prodding, damning the camels for mile upon mile. It was not until the last mile, when the tide had already turned and was advancing upon us, that two of the poor beasts gave out and lay down. There was no time to transfer their loads, even if the other camels had been able to carry any additional weight, and the rest of us kept on, leaving Messer to unload the victims to see if they might travel unencumbered. The result was that he almost lost his own life, for the camels refused to move and he barely got past the furthermost ledges before the ocean was roaring over them.

Pleading of Thirsty Beasts.

The remainder of the journey to Messer's claim remains in my memory very much as a nightmare. Giving as little attention as possible to the thought that obtruded itself the more persistently as we advanced, that the discomforts of the trip would be redoubled on our return, because the sand would blow in our faces instead of at our backs, and we and our beasts of burden would all be weaker for lack of sufficient nourishment, we fixed our minds upon the diamond bedecked carpet that stretched itself before the imagination, now fewer and fewer miles away. Often when we came to the place where we were to make camp at the end of the day's march I would fall asleep from utter exhaustion did I sit down for a moment's rest, only to be shaken into consciousness by the others, for it was necessary now for each member of the expedition to do his share of the work of "outspanning" the animals and preparing for the night.

After five or six days without water the camels began to suffer, and the wistfulness in the patient creatures' eyes as they dumbly pleaded for relief was something never to be forgotten. Concentrate everything that is pathetic, and you have the expression of a thirsty camel. I was ashamed to take my daily water ration—and mine was five ounces, where a camel's would have been five gallons—in the presence of the tortured animals and often hid from them to do so, but the reproachful looks of the camels when I confronted them afterward showed that they knew what I had been doing and comprehended just how unutterably mean and selfish I was. Toward the end of the first half of our journey the cold at night would penetrate our waterproof sheets, our double thickness of blankets, our sleeping bags and even our dreams. So cheerless, indeed, were the nights that it was a pleasure to get up in the morning, although our animals were the more reluctant to move at the beginning of each day and it required greater effort to get them loaded and started.

An occurrence at about this time that impressed itself was that while I was riding my big mule—now the most sedate of steeds—in a particularly heavy sandstorm one afternoon he suddenly started; and, rising on his hind legs, let me slide from his back. The same moment three jackals appeared from under his feet and scattered, turning to snarl as they disappeared. The mule had inadvertently walked upon the carcase of a camel, over which the sand had drifted, and the jackals, which the animal had been feeding, and his hoofs breaking through had driven them out.

There are thousands of these animals all along the coast of Damaraland. They subsist on the coarse, tasteless fish that are killed by the swift tide that hurls them against the rocks or that are left in pools and crevices when the water recedes. The jackals also prey upon the short legged penguins that are left inshore at every tide and are unable to waddle out to the surf rapidly enough to escape. Since the discovery of precious stones in Damaraland these scavengers have found an additional food supply in the flesh of scores of donkeys and camels that have dropped in the sand, as well as that of many an unfortunate diamond hunter who died of exhaustion among the dunes.

The jackal and the dwarf bushman, the lowest human type, are the only living creatures to be found along this part of the coast of German Southwest Africa. The bushmen live on fish and the flesh of the penguin, as do the jackals, but they improve the methods of their brute brethren in the particular that they gather dried seaweed and wreckage to cook their food at least partially. We more than once passed their primitive shelters, located in those infrequent places among the rocks that remain uncovered by sea or sand.

The rest of my story is anti-climax, so far as the discovery of diamonds is concerned, although the climax of our discomfort had not yet been reached. Messer's claims proved absolutely valueless. We did not find a diamond in the entire fifty-one of them. Although thoroughly convinced at the end of three days that the search would be fruitless, Schuller, who had qualified as a government expert and had to hand in an exhaustive report to the Diamant Gesellschaft, insisted on going over the entire forty acres of sand, which he did with maddening and conscientious thoroughness. We had parted with Messer on the coast and he and the bushboys went on to a "water hole" in the vicinity of Walfisch Bay, more than a day's journey further north, with our remaining six camels, which were then going on seven days without water. He got back to us four days later with four camels, two having died before water was reached. Fortunately Schuller was obliged, under his oath to the German government, to make his report to the Gesellschaft before divulging its findings to any one else, which relieved him of the necessity of explaining to Messer and the others that the great discovery was valueless.

We had arrived at Messer's claim on September 23 and did not leave until October 5. When we reached Spencer's Bay eight days later the mule alone of our live stock survived, the remaining four camels and the horse having perished on the way. Again and again during the return journey, when the wind was highest, the sand would be blown in our faces with so much force that we were unable to make way against it, and so to stand still meant to be covered up, we were forced to turn about and move in the opposite direction, sometimes for hours at a time until the violence of Boreas abated. For the twelve hours before arriving at Spencer's Bay we had been without water and on half rations of food, and I have never tasted anything half so delicious as the warm, brackish fluid we got there that had been brought from Anikhab. I gave an English sovereign here for half a dozen penguin eggs, three of which proved to be bad.

We rested two days at Spencer's Bay, and then pushed on to Luderitzburg, reaching there October 23, thirty-three days from the time our expedition started. From fourteen miles above Luderitzbucht that morning I had seen a steamer lying at the pier, and when she departed late in the afternoon, I was in her smoking room, with a glass of spatenbrau before me, having bid adieu to German Southwest Africa and the potentiality of a fortune in Damaraland diamonds.

There still remains to be solved the mystery of Messer's diamond. Schuller and I are both firmly convinced of his good faith, and yet it is absolutely impossible that the stone came originally from the place where he professed to have found it. The only possible solution of the mystery that we could arrive at is that some one among his fellow survivors of the wreck that had left him on that part of the coast, with whom he had wandered inland, had brought a stone from the diamond fields further south and had dropped it where Messer was unfortunate enough to find it. It is incredible that the German baker, after having once made the trip through the sand mountains from the place where his claims were located, should have hazarded the certain discomforts and uncertain perils of a second journey unless he believed that a fortune was at stake.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

No matter how your mothers may speak, their hearts are in the right place; if their attire is old-fashioned and their manners not up to the frills of the twentieth century standard, they have had experience of more value than all the schooling and extra accomplishments that you may think of shining excellence. Heed your mother—you will never regret it.

It is the mother of a household whose life is chiefly threatened by monotony. She stays at home. She is always in the house seeing the same things, hearing the same voices doing the same work day after day, with endless regularity. The demands upon her time and strength and love and patience are increasing and the wonder is that she does not break down more frequently than is actually the case.

Girls, listen to your mothers; they are your wisest teachers, your best counsellors. E'en though you have received a college education, and the dear one who in all probability has denied herself to give it to you has never gone beyond the third reader, you can rest assured that it is not book learning that will keep your feet away from many pitfalls that she can warn you from in tender, loving fashion that you will do well to heed.

One reason why some men do not get along better in this world is because they have not the proper stimulant in their homes. Their homes lack those little touches of refinement which bring the best out of them. Neatness and taste are possible in the poorest homes. Let a woman make the atmosphere as dainty as her means allow, and she will raise her husband to the same standard.

When you want to get your grandest idea of a queen, you do not think of Catherine of Russia, or of Annie of England, or Marie Theresa of Germany, but when you want to get your grandest idea of a queen you think of the plain woman who sat opposite your father at the table or walked with him arm in arm down life's pathway; sometimes to the grave but always together—soothing your petty griefs, correcting your childish waywardness, joining in your infantile sports, listening to your evening prayers, toiling for you with needle or at the spinning wheel and on cold nights wrapping you up snug and warm. "Mother! Mother!" Ah, she was a queen!

Many women are martys, and yet they do not know it. They shut the sunshine out of their houses and their hearts, they wear veils, they carry parasols, they do all possible to keep off the subtlest and yet most potent influence which is intended to give them strength, beauty and cheer fulness.

"Do not distrust your friend. You may not always understand his actions and consequently you may not interpret them aright. If he is impulsive he may not always act in accordance with your ideas, he will make mistakes and perhaps stumble by the wayside. But if he is your friend stand up for him and believe in his goodness and virtue and his desire for your welfare. Remember that you cannot see his heart, and there is more of nobility and goodness than appears on the surface. You cannot afford to distrust him, for real friendship is rare. Do not hold yourself aloof from him but encourage him by counsel, precept and example. Help him if he is weak and encourage him if he falters. His heart will go out in gratitude, and you both will have made the world better.

Would it not be a good plan for the girls in country neighbourhoods to form classes and get a competent, experienced dressmaker to teach them the principles of dress-making. It is a satisfaction to wear well fitting, stylish dresses, though they need not be, and if home-made, would not be, expensive ones. A perfect-fitting waist pattern once secured—and this the teacher should be able to give them, —endless variety may be made by diverent materials and modes of trimming. When their course of instruction was finished, the class might subscribe for two or three of the best fashion monthlies and then keep up with the best new modes. They could and should be able to hel one another in the parts of fitting that one canot well do for herself, and be gaining at the same time an art useful to them all their lives.

If all the members of a family were as courteous and kind to each other as they are to strangers, what a difference it would make in the home atmosphere.

We never knew a man who was faithful to his early and adopted home who was given over at the same time to any gross form of wickedness. If you find more enjoyment in the club-room, in the literary society, in the art saloon, than you do in these unpretending home pleasures, you are on the road to ruin.

All the elegance in the world will not make a home, and a spoonful of love exceeds whole ship loads of furniture and all the gorgeousness the world can gather.

ARE YOU AILING
WEAK AND NERVOUS

To-day the common complaint with weak men and women is lack of kidney vitality. Here you have the cause of your ill-health.

Wouldn't it be wise to use a time tested remedy like Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they cure that "ailing" feeling in one night. Next morning you feel like new—bright, fresh, and happy. Appetite improves, dull, sallow color grows ruddy and clear, proving that great good is being done by this scientific medicine.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills A Sure Cure

No Appetite—Bad Color—General Debility.

"I was run down," writes Mr. Albert E. Dixon, of Fairhaven P. O. "My color was dull, and appetite was poor, and I constantly suffered from rheumatism.

"I found it hard to sleep and felt worn out and tired all the time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills made an instant change. I grew strong, my blood was restored, rheumatism vanished. To-day I am vigorous, cheery, and healthy in every respect."

Take Dr. Hamilton's Pills when you're well, when you're sick, whenever you think a purifying tonic will do you good. Sold everywhere in yellow boxes, 25c each, or five for $1.00. Insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

SALLOW SKIN
Liver Spots, Pimples, Dark Circles under the Eyes

are all signs of the system being clogged. The Liver and Bowels are inactive and the Stomach is weak from undigested foods and foul gases.

FIG PILLS

the great fruit remedy, will make you feel like a new person.

MR. WALTER SQUIRES, JR. HOME FROM EUROPE

Mr. Walter Squires, Jr., of Toronto, accompanied by his wife, is visiting his parents, Albert street. Mr. Squires has just returned from an extensive purchasing trip in England, and on the continent, having been absent several months. Mr. Squires is connected with Prime and Rankin, Lt., of Toronto, wholesale dry goods dealers. His return ocean voyage was rough, but Mr. Squires appears to be enjoying the best of health.

A Blow At The White Plague

Just think what it would mean if even half the deaths from consumption could be avoided. It is surely not too much to claim that at least this many cases are directly due to neglect to cure colds.

It is a simple matter to control a cold when you have Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house for prompt use when the first symptoms appear. Many thousands have found this out by experience, and this is why no treatment for coughs and colds has anything like the sale in this country that this well-known medicine has.

Croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, sore throat and chest colds soon yield to the healing, soothing influence of this great medicine. You can readily prove this and will then understand why this treatment is so popular.

Johnnie Canuck On Current Events

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In existence to-day there are a number of organisations trying to secure a controlling influence over what is known as "the common people" and amongst this number are the Manufacturers and Labour Unions, on one hand, and the Church and the bar on the other. Are the means adopted and the methods advocated bringing about a desired state of affairs? The bar, at all times, has been very advantageous in enabling the unscrupulous manufacturer to keep the upper hand of his employees, but it is only of late years that he has been able to use the Church, through politics, to any great extent, which is principally caused by men following their wrong vocation.

I think I can hear the Hewbrews that are amongst us exclaim when they see how some of our churches are going to start the Holy Week; "Oh how those Christians love one another," and the same Hebrews may say that if our Saviour postponed His resurrection until the coming Easter Sunday morning, when He saw the brotherly love displayed by those He shed His blood for, he might be tempted to tell the guard to roll back the stone. Churches should pry and kill the impression that is so common amongst the 'common people' that the Bunty that pulls the string is partyism and money.

Let them show next week, when they sing "Glory to God in the Highest, and peace on earth to men of good will" that they are sincere, for their actions look otherwise.

If a man was at the outs with his mother-in-law and her pople, would he try and bring about a reconciliation and convert them to his way of thinking by bringing up old sores. If the Church would insist on all its members, as far as in its power, to live up to the Golden Rule, then the high cost of living and the unequal share of the profits would not as often drive the "common people" to the bar-room in desperation.

Would one be justified in claiming that there would be more enthusiasm displayed by certain church workers for party reasons in regard to a bill abolishing the bar if it were introduced by Whitney, instead of Borden? If more consistency was shown by temperance workers in this regard they would have a more desirable effect upon a large number of the "common people," that I am familiar with. Appeals to the mob with muck-rake methods have in the past prevented Christians of all denominations from becoming more united in working for the moral reform of the people. It may be good for Business and politics, but is certainly not good for Christianity, and the sobriety that Christianity calls for.

In the home, where there is not harmony and concord it cannot be expected that the members of that family will amount to much. They certainly do not enjoy life. In my opinion the same conditions existing in a community such as go to make up the population of a city such as our own will bring about the same results. Have we got to acknowledge that, owing to the ignorance of many of our people we know of no way by which this evil can be checkmated?

Any one who would undertake to rectify this state of affairs would find that he had a most difficult task as his opposition could, owing to politics and bigotry, gather a hand-picked audience which would be prepared to believe anything they heard and therefore his opponents would not be called upon to appeal to reason.

Johnnie Canuck.

HANDEL'S MANUSCRIPTS

His Majesty's Splendid Gift to the British Museum

The priceless manuscripts of some of Handel's best-known compositions just presented by King George to the British Museum are on exhibition in a glass case in the Long Room. They fill six volumes. The rough nature of the autograph manuscripts, with frequent interlinear corrections and blots, indicate the rapidity with which Handel pursued his composition. Pages of "The Messiah," containing some of the best-known passages, and the Dead March in "Saul," are among the other valuable books in the collection in the King's Library at the Museum. Thousands of visitors have seen the royal gift, which formerly was kept in the library at Buckingham Palace.

EUROPE'S ARMED CAMPS

German newspapers published a long appeal from the recently created German Military League, with the object of "fortifying the national sentiment and ensuring that the German army shall be strong enough to protect the German Empire and guarantee its position in the universe." The appeal sets forth that at the present moment France has more soldiers than Germany, though her population is twenty millions less. The strength of the armies of France and Russia exceeds in times of peace that of the armies of Germany and Austria by 70,000 men, while in war time the excess would be two million soldiers. "We are no longer an armed people," says the appeal; "France is in that position."

WAS TROUBLED WITH
Headache AND Constipation.

After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

"After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

TAFT GOES SLOWLY.

He Is Ready For Progress on a Conservative Basis.

Philadelphia, April 1.—At the Ohio Society dinner, President Taft spoke of the recall of judges, defended the constitution, said his administration had been progressive, and pointed out some of the reasons why he thought it was progressive. In speaking of the recall of judges, the president said:

"I am here to express my gratitude for the demonstration given by this country that all the surface talking and lecturing does not represent the opinion of the people. We are conservative people, ready for progress on a conservative basis."

The president spoke of "noisy reformers" who make plans for reform without having worked out a scheme that had any basis.

The president replied indirectly to the question raised by some of his political opponents, "Shall the people rule?" He said that he himself had been elected president by only eight per cent. of the total population of the United States. Unless adult women and children and others who did not now possess suffrage were given the right to vote, he said this is about as near as we can ever come to popular government.

In a brief speech before the American Academy of Political and Social Science, Mr. Taft touched on the anti-trust law and spoke of the plan for placing corporations under national supervision. He said he was in favor of enforcing the Sherman law just like any other law.

Ohio Central Committee Endorses Taft

Columbus, O., April 1.—The Taft administration was endorsed and President Taft was endorsed as a candidate by the Republican State Central committee here yesterday. The committee also decided that the six delegates at large to the national convention at Chicago will be selected at the state convention, to be held here June 25 and 26.

600,000 Men Are Out.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 1.—No anthracite or bituminous coal will be taken from the mines of the country to-day by union miners as a result of the suspension which went into effect at midnight last night, due to wage troubles. More than 400,000 miners, about 150,000 in the anthracite field, and 250,000 in the bituminous, will take a vacation, which probably will last only a few weeks. Unlike strike conditions, the miners will leave pumpmen and others at work to protect the mines from flooding or other trouble due to a shutdown of the plants.

The bituminous miners will be out only long enough for the wage agreement, reached in Cleveland, to be ratified by the miners by a referendum vote, as it is believed the agreement will be sanctioned by a large majority of the men. The suspension in the anthracite mines will be of longer duration, as no agreement has yet been reached between the miners and operators. After negotiations were broken off in New York on March 1, between the anthracite miners and operators, nothing was done toward getting together again until Saturday, when both sides agreed to meet in Philadelphia on April 10, and reopen negotiations.

Leaders Voted Down.

Ottawa, April 1.—The Senate on Saturday showed what it can do when it takes a notion, for it voted down both its leaders.

Hon. Mr. Lougheed, who represents the Government, was the first to meet disfavor. He appealed from the statement of reasons why the Senate should insist upon its amendments to the Government highways bill. The Senators went against him 29 to 9.

Then Sir Richard Cartwright gave his support to a motion by Senator Dandurand, which would have killed the bill by granting Prince Edward Island an increased allowance.

The Senate turned this down by 16 to 13.

The Senate adjourned until Monday morning, at which sitting it is expected that the business of the session will be completed.

Disagree on Sugar Case.

New York, April 1.—The jury in the case of John E. Parsons, Washington B. Thomas, George H. Frazier and Arthur Donner, charged with violating the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust law while directors of the American Sugar Refining Co., reported a disagreement yesterday morning. The defendants were charged with conspiracy in restraint of trade in closing the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Co. plant.

The jurors were out from noon Saturday. It was reported that they stood eight to four for acquittal, but one juror, who said he favored acquittal, stated that he was in the minority.

Five Hundred More For Alberta.

Edmonton, Alta., April 1.—Special trains, run by the Immigration Department of the Province of Alberta next week, will bring five hundred homeseekers, some from eastern Canada and the United States. They will leave Montreal April 2, via Toronto, Chicago and St. Paul to Edmonton and Calgary.

BROTHERS ARE SHOT.

Two Men Dying While Assisting at Shooting Musician.

Montreal, April 1.—Attempting to avenge a fancied insult to a lady acquaintance of their brother, Edgar and Herbert Chapman were shot, probably fatally, in a room in the Savoy Hotel at four o'clock yesterday morning, while Harold Chapman, the brother, lies in the hospital with a bullet in his knee.

Carl Hemmans, a player in the orchestra of the Enchantress Co., with Kitty Gordon, which finished its engagement in Montreal Saturday night, is held, charged with the shooting, and pleading self-defence.

Harold Chapman had a room in the Savoy Hotel and early yesterday morning a woman came to the him, saying she heard he was sick. He was in his room asleep. The woman found the lock broken and started to mend it. The noise of her hammering awoke Harry Stanford, a player in the same company as Hemmans, who came out and asked the woman not to make so much noise. She desisted and went into Chapman's room and told him of her conversation with Stanford.

Chapman came to the door and saw Stanford entering Hemmans's room. He got up and dressed and then sent a message to his brothers, who lived nearby, saying that he was in trouble. The messenger came back with some money, his brothers believing he meant financial difficulty.

Harold Chapman then got a hack, drove up to his brothers' residence where they lived with their mother, and got them out of bed and had them dress, and brought them down to the Savoy Hotel. The three went to Chapman's room and removed their coats. Then they went to Hemman's room, where Stanford had been seen to enter by Harold Chapman. They broke down the door. Stanford had left the room for his own while Harold Chapman had gone out, and consequently was not in Hemman's room. Hemmans was seen sitting on the side of the bed, awake.

As they entered some object broke the electric light, plunging the room into utter darkness, and they could not see a thing. Shouting out threats, the three brothers rushed at Hemmans, whom Harold Chapman took to be the man who had had the conversation with the woman who was mending his door, and, throwing him to the floor, started immediately to beat him up. Hemmans finally managed to struggle to his dress suit case on the top of which he had left a revolver, fully loaded, and open fire in the darkness. All three brothers were hit by the flying bullets.

When the hotel employes arrived on the scene they found the Chapman brothers helpless and Hemmans badly beaten.

The shooting was done with a 32-calibre revolver, with sole-nosed bullets. Edgar Chapman has a bullet in his lungs, while Herbert is wounded in the liver and chest, also by bullets. Neither are expected to recover.

Yesterday the ante-mortem statements of the wounded men were taken.

Edgar Chapman identified Hemmans, who is held by the police in jail, and offered to shake hands with him, saying: "You're not to blame at all, old man."

The woman in the case declares that she did not tell Chapman that Stanford's words were discourteous, merely saying that he had asked her to cut out the noise.

Home Rule Meeting.

Dublin, April 1.—Many thousands of residents and others who arrived on special trains, attended a great home rule demonstration here yesterday. Four big platforms had been erected on O'Connell street, from which the speakers addressed the crowds. All the buildings in the vicinity were decorated. A hundred bands participated and the principal corporations, except that of Belfast, attended in state.

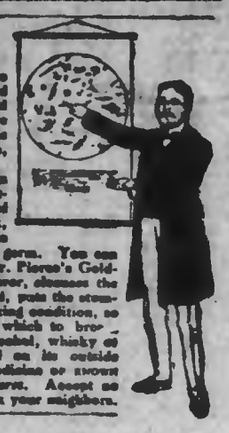
Green flags with the words "We Want Home Rule," were displayed everywhere. John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Parliamentary party, William Redmond, M.P. for East Clare; John Dillon, M.P. for East Mayo; Joseph Devlin, M.P. for Belfast, and John J. Clancy, M.P. for the North Division of Dublin, were among the speakers. John Redmond predicted that a home rule Parliament would be established on College Green sooner than the most sanguine there expected.

More Car Riots In Jamaica.

Kingston, Jamaica, April 1.—A renewal of the trouble between the general public and the tramway company has occurred. A crowd on Saturday took possession of the cars, rendering the collection of fares impossible. A large force of police were sent out to maintain order, but the demonstrations were so serious that the entire tramway service had to be suspended.

The original trouble arose through the company, which is a Canadian concern, attempting to impose increased fares. Serious disorders occurred a month ago, but the authorities finally succeeded in restoring a semblance of order, and the situation has been quiet for the past week.

Afraid of Ghosts



Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitutes—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

Despondent because of unemployment, James Watson, aged 35 years, of 76 Brock avenue, Toronto, committed suicide on Saturday. He lifted a cap from a blind gas tube and allowed the gas to escape.

Corging is Suicide

In these words a prominent graduate of Harvard Medical School, E. R. Moras, M.D., calls attention to the habit of "overeating," which is resulting in the shortening of so many useful lives.

Every day you read of deaths of persons in middle life caused by acute indigestion, peritonitis, appendicitis or Bright's disease. All of which result from overcrowding the digestive organs.

The liver gets sluggish, the bowels become constipated, and the whole system is poisoned by the fermenting waste matter.

You can overcome this poisoned condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Then turn over a new leaf and eat less, particularly of meats, pastry and highly-seasoned foods. One kidney-liver pill occasionally at bedtime will keep the liver and bowels active and insure the healthful working of the organs of digestion.

Had Silver on Him.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 1.—A novel attempt at smuggling was detected by American immigration officials Saturday when Kalla Mittila, a Finlander, was taken from the Grand Trunk train at the north end station. In a belt about his waist he had twenty pounds of almost pure silver.

The discovery was made during an investigation to learn if the foreigner had any concealed weapons about him. The American officials will not prosecute him for smuggling, as silver bullion is not dutiable when entered through the written consent of the owner of the mine from which it is obtained, but the fact that he did not make the entry of silver allows for its seizure.

He was deported in care of the provincial police, the silver being confiscated, and will be sold at the next public auction of the customs department.

Mittila declared he bought the ore in Toronto for $50. He had been employed in the Nipissing Mines. He was bound for New York when apprehended.

Hindu Accused of Perjury.

Vancouver, April 1.—Hussain Rahim, the Hindu real estate agent of Vancouver, charged with perjury in getting his name on the provincial voters' list, was up in the police court Saturday. The court fixed bail at $10,000 and adjourned the case until Monday. Detectives who made the arrest, also executed a warrant to search the effects of Rahim. Detective Thompson said he found among Rahim's effect a quantity of Industrial Workers of the World literature, and a petition signed by a number of Hindus for the removal of Mayor Findlay from office.

The maximum penalty for conviction on a charge such as that preferred against Rahim, is fourteen years' imprisonment.

Dune Will Appeal.

Kingston, April 1.—An appeal will be entered by R. G. Dun & Co., publishers of Dun's bulletin, Toronto, in the case in which they were sued for $50,000 by Walter Teller, proprietor of the British American Hotel. The amount the jury found against the company, $1,000, has been sent to the plaintiff's lawyers.

Collapsed In Hospital.

Toronto, April 1.—After an illness of several weeks Mrs. Johanna Murphy, aged 70 years, of 87 Wright avenue, left her cot in St. Michael's Hospital with the intention of attending early morning mass yesterday, but she had only walked a few steps along the hospital corridor when she collapsed to the floor. She died within a few moments. The body was removed to her home.

Father Would Upset Marriage.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 1.—Contractor E. Burger, Fort Erie, was here yesterday investigating the marriage of his 17-year-old daughter, Bessie, of the same village, to Frank Van Duzen. The couple were married Thursday by Rev. Mr. Vasser. To the issuer of the license the bride said she was 19 years old, but the girl's father says she is two years younger. He threatens an abduction charge.

Engineer Threatened to Quit.

Vienna, April 1.—The crisis in the Hungarian Cabinet, which ended on Saturday by the Emperor Francis Joseph expressing confidence in the Cabinet under the Premiership of Count Khuen von Hedervary, had a sensational development in a threat of the Emperor to abdicate. It is stated that at a recent audience with the Premier, the Emperor openly threatened to abdicate unless certain proposals in connection with the controversy over the army were immediately abandoned.

Putting It Up to Him.

Don't your remember last summer, Mac Bain,
Last summer, up hot and dry,
When not a month went round the job
And not a cloud dotted the sky?
Oh, think of those days in Mid-August, Mac Bain,
As the dust slips your hands and your feet—
Those days when you sat on the porch at the club,
Auditored by the blistering heat!

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

SUFFERERS CURED BY TAKING "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

WILLIAMSBURG, Ont., July 29th, 1911.

"Last spring, I had a severe attack of Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and "Fruit-a-tives" cured them completely when the physician attending me had given me up."—JAMES DINGWALL.

The cause of Kidney Congestion and Pain in the Back, is that the bowels are inefficient—constipated and the skin inactive. Then, the kidneys are forced to do double work in ridding the system of impurities,—and become strained.

"Fruit-a-tives"—the great fruit medicine—acts on bowels, liver and skin, as well as on the kidneys,—ridding the system of all impurities, and completely cures all kidney congestion and pain in the back.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HOUSE IS PROROGUED

His Royal Highness Formally Dismisses Legislature

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

Ottawa, April 2.—To the accompaniment of the booming of cannon, the blare of martial music and with all the gorgeous trappings of stately ceremonial, the first session of the first Parliament of Right Hon. Robert Laird Borden, P.C., yesterday passed into history.

Four o'clock had been the hour set and long before that time crowds of interested spectators began to gather along the terrace, braving the chilly wind, which, under lowering skies, swept over Parliament Hill. A few awaited the arrival of Their Royal Highnesses on the lofty vantage ground of the roof of the new wing on the Commons' side, getting a bird's eye view which well repaid the climb.

It was just 4.30 p.m. when the guard furnished by the Governor-General's Foot Guards sprang to attention and presented arms. The royal standard was run up and the band played the National Anthem as the royal carriages, attended by a mounted escort from the Princess Louise Dragoons Guards, drew up under the arches of the great tower.

His Royal Highness was accompanied by the Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia and attended by Col. Lowther.

The House of Commons had met at three o'clock and, passed the interval after their business was concluded singing songs and generally enjoying themselves.

Then came a surprise. Three taps were heard on the door, and the sergeant-at-arms—Col. Smith is always inquisitive about these little things—discovered the gentleman usher of the Black Rod lurking in the lobby, awaiting a chance to butt in with a summons from the Governor-General that the Commons attend him immediately in the chamber of the honorable the Senate.

But this was not the surprise. The House of Commons has seen "Ernie" Chambers before. But "Ernie" Chambers' clothes!

Never before had mortal eye of Commoner beheld the pristine glory of those knee-length velvet inexpressibles, the sheen of those silken hose or the glint of those silver shoe buckles.

"Ernie" Chambers' shirt was lace-bedizened, but his outward bearing was as calm and collected as ever. Like the Pied Piper of Hamelin, he drew the Commoners in a long trailing line after him to the Senate.

The scene in the Red Chamber was gorgeous, though lacking in the display of feminine finery which marked the opening of Parliament. For the first time Premier Borden wore his gold-laced Privy Councillor's uniform and occupied a position of honor to the right of the throne. The diplomatic corps were given seats on the floor of the House.

After the royal assent had been given to the legislation of the session, not forgetting the supply bill, His Royal Highness read in a clear voice, first in English and then in French, the speech from the throne, as follows:

"Honorable gentlemen of the Senate:
"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"I am glad, at this comparatively early period of the season, to be able to relieve you from further attendance in Parliament. The diligence with which you have applied yourselves to your public duties calls for my warm acknowledgements.

"The act to extend the boundaries of Manitoba and to make financial provision commensurate with the requirements of its enlarged area, will, I am sure, be welcomed, alike by the present inhabitants of that province and by those who dwell in the added territory now admitted to the advantages of the provincial status.

"The enlargement of the limits of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec will undoubtedly contribute to the progress and development of those northern territories which hitherto have been little known and which will henceforth form part of those great provinces.

"Highly important and far-reaching advantages should result from the measure to aid and encourage agriculture in concert with the several provincial Governments, which I doubt not will materially contribute to the development and progress of that great basic industry.

"The act respecting grain—a most comprehensive measure—will, it is hoped, assist the farmer in the marketing of his produce, as well as in obtaining better prices, thus relieving him of disadvantages under which he has hitherto labored.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons: I thank you in His Majesty's name for the liberal provision you have made for the requirements of the public service.

"Honorable gentlemen of the Senate: "I am happy to congratulate you on the many indications of the abounding prosperity of this country and I earnestly pray that the blessings of Providence may always attend this favored land."

The Parliament was declared prorogued till May 9 next, a formal date which does not signify anything as to when the next session will begin.

Then Their Royal Highnesses passed to their carriages again, again the band played, the guard saluted, and, as the pennons on the lances of the Dragoons gayly fluttered down the hill, the royal standard fell from the flagstaff, and all was over.

Prince Reaches Paris.

Paris, April 2.—The Prince of Wales arrived at Gare du Nord last night and was received by the prefect of Paris, M. Lepine, the Marquis and Marchioness de Breteuil and several members of the English colony. The prince was greatly startled by the volley of flashlights with which the newspaper photographers greeted him. M. Lepine reassured the prince, saying that this was the first mark of esteem of the Parisian public. A large crowd outside the station cheered him as he entered the automobile and drove off to the Breteuil home.

The Prince of Wales is here incognito, under the name of the Earl of Chester. He will be received by President Fallieres to-day.

Wool Bill Passes.

Washington, April 2.—The Democratic wool bill, reducing duties, yesterday passed the House, 189 to 98, with 29 Progressive Republicans voting for it. Representative Murray of Colorado, who opposed it in debate and answered "present" on the roll-call, and Representative Francis of Ohio, who voted against it, were the only Democrats who did not line up with the majority.

Representative Payne moved to recommit the bill, with instructions to the committee to report the Republican substitute, but that was lost, 189 to 108.

Judgeship For Sam Sharpe?

Ottawa, April 2—Major Sam Sharpe, K.P., has the refusal of the vacancy in the senior county judgeship of Ontario County.

While he has not yet decided, it is rather expected that he will accept.

TALK NO. 5

Astigmatism of The Eye.

When the eye is said to be astigmatic, the meaning is that the eye has a double focus. This annoys the brain and the eye will strain unconsciously to bring about a clear focus; this strain usually causes headaches. Astigmatism is usually congenital or so at birth—it is remedied by wearing glasses ground from the segment of a cylinder. These glasses, if rightly made, bring images to a focus on the retina and thus relieve all strain. Children as well as adults suffer from astigmatism. We correct all common or complicated errors of sight by suitable lenses.

BILLS WERE TURNED DOWN

Senate Overwhelms Four of Government's Measures

DEBATE IN THE COMMONS

Ottawa, April 2.—The Senate celebrated the last hour of the session by again turning down the Government.

The bill to give two millions to the Ontario Government railway was thrown out.

The bill for aiding construction of bridges on the St. John Valley Railway was read the third time.

Sir Richard Cartwright expressed the opinion that the bill increasing the subsidy of Prince Edward Island would be found ultra vires if taken before the Privy Council, and asked the Government if it proposed to have Imperial legislation regulate this.

Usually the last day of the session is devoted to the merest formalities, winding up with prorogation by the Governor-General. Yesterday, however, the deadlock between the two chambers and the interchange of messages kept the Commons and the Senate in a state of excitement up to four o'clock, the hour set for the arrival of the Governor-General.

It was three o'clock when the Speaker of the House read the message from the Senate, insisting on its amendment to the tariff bill. Hon. Mr. White expressed surprise at the unusual stand of the Senate. The Government had accepted three of the four amendments submitted and had tried to meet the Upper Chamber half way. This amendment, Mr. White described as irrelevant, senseless and so carelessly drawn it would prove a blemish to the bill.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster accused Sir Wilfrid Laurier of being responsible for the defeat of the three measures. He had directed the action of the Senate, whom he described as "men who were fed by his patronage and have earned their reward."

Mr. Borden, said Mr. Foster, in bringing in both the tariff commission bill and the highways bill, was simply carrying out his pre-election promises and now the Senate had thwarted the will of the people, as expressed by the newly-elected Commons.

Mr. White said it was a very important matter that the Senate of Canada should reflect the opinion of the House. "We accepted," said Mr. White, "three amendments, although they were irrelevant because they did not disturb the scope of the commission. We tried to meet the Senate. I cannot see that the Senate is justified in deliberately rejecting the opinion of this House.

"The Senate," continued Mr. White, "must take full responsibility before the country for rejecting the bill. The tariff was a pledge given by the Premier to the people of Canada. There was an expectation on the part of the people of Canada that the Government would redeem its pledge. This House is fresh from the people; it is not moribund House. I beg to move that a message be sent back to the Senate respecting the amendment.

"There is none so blind as he who will not see," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier in reply to Mr. White, "and my honorable friend, the Minister of Finance shows by the speech that he has just delivered that he is afflicted with such blindness. Mr. White's entire speech has been devoted to a criticism of the wording of the amendment."

Continuing, Sir Wilfrid said that he feared that Mr. White's real reason for refusing or avoiding a conference was that he was opposed to giving the people the safeguard which the amendment provided for them.

"For my part," concluded Sir Wilfrid, amidst Liberal cheers, "I am glad to share the responsibility of killing this bill. It is not an unmixed misfortune, and it is an unmixed blessing."

WILL SPEND TWO MILLIONS ON EDUCATION

Ontario Will Expend That Sum During Coming Year

THE WORKMEN MUST WAIT

Toronto, April 2.—Expenditures for education during the coming year will exceed $2,000,000, as is shown by the main estimates for 1912-1913, which were submitted to the Legislature yesterday afternoon. This amount is the greatest in the history of the province.

The main estimates for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1913, amount to $8,844,496.66. Of this amount the current expenditure for 1912-13 is $7,993,496.66; on capital account, $721,000; other purposes, $130,000. The services for which this large sum of money is voted consists of: Civil government, $757,774; legislation, $288,600; administration of justice, $748,364.66; education, $2,963,670; public institutions maintenance, $1,366,407; agriculture, $719,636; colonization and immigration, $107,600; hospitals and charities, $369,776; maintenance and repairs of Government and Departmental buildings, $153,150; public buildings including (1) repairs, $77,700; (2) capital account, $647,000; public works, on capital account, $73,900; colonization and mining roads, $130,000; for other purposes: charges on crown lands, $263,650; refunds account, $82,500; miscellaneous expenditure, $562,070.

Except for the estimates there was little to arouse interest at yesterday's session. Sir James Whitney introduced for second reading his two bills—one respecting the appointment of a commissioner (R. R. Gamey) to report upon certain territory, and the other to amend the Power Commission Act to provide a remuneration of $6,000 per annum for Hon. Adam Beck.

With regard to the appointment of Mr. Gamey, N. W. Rowell said he would make any criticism he had to make when the bill came up in committee.

Mr. Rowell asked whether it was the intention of the Government to introduce any legislation this session regarding workmen's compensation. Sir James replied that it would hardly be possible or desirable to do so.

G. Evanturel, Prescott, will on Wednesday next enquire of the Ministry as to whether the Government will include $15,000 in this year's estimates towards the construction of the interprovincial bridge at Hawkesbury.

In explaining his bill to amend the Mining Act of Ontario, Hon. W. H. Hearst said the law would now make it an offence for any person under the influence of liquor to be anywhere near a mine.

Z. Maseau, Sturgeon Falls, will ask for a return of correspondence relating to the granting of a permit for a tug owned by the Dominion Fish Co. to fish on the Lizard Island preserve. Mr. Mageau will also enquire whether the Government intends to issue any fishing licenses affecting Lake Nipissing during 1912.

Dr. J. McQueen, North Wentworth, wants a return of correspondence regarding the conduct of J. S. Dempsey, police magistrate, and the part he took in the recent elections.

Hon. I. B. Lucas introduced an amendment to the bill respecting telephone systems, whereby an associated group of people running a telephone system can, if they wish to become incorporated, take over the shares of those who do not wish to come into the incorporated company. If a settlement as to the value of stock cannot be reached, it is to be left to arbitration by the Ontario Railway Board.

Part of the afternoon and the whole of the evening session were taken up with the consideration of the insurance bill, containing 249 clauses. With the exception of the legal members of the House, there was little interest taken in the proceedings, and most of the members spent the time reading the newspapers or with private conversations, some of the tete-a-tetes centering around the action of the Senate in throwing out the Federal Government's proposed subsidy for the T. & N. O. Railway. About 160 clauses of the insurance bill were passed when the House adjourned at 10.30 p.m.

Silver Smuggler Remanded.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 2.—Magistrate Fraser yesterday remanded Kalla Mittila, deported from the States while smuggling in twenty pounds of silver ore, for eight days on the technical charge of violating the Miners' Act. In the meantime the Attorney-General's Department will investigate the case.

K·RYPTOK
INVISIBLE BI-FOCAL
Why Look Older Than You Are?

Double vision glasses need not mar one's appearance. They need not make one look older, or cause embarrassment by being conspicuous.

KRYPTOK LENSES in your frame or Spectacles mount would be an aid to good appearance.

KRYPTOK LENSES—a recent achievement in optical science—complete near view and far view lenses in an integral piece of glass.

They have an absolutely smooth surface, and are entirely free from the seams, dirt-catching lines, cement and bifocy appearance characteristic of old-style pasted double vision lenses.

KRYPTOK LENSES are being eagerly adopted by all who require double-vision glasses or who have been using bifocals or glasses. They are good looking and in no way do they suggest advancing years.

HOW GIRLS MAY AVOID PERIODIC PAINS

The Experience of Two Girls Have Related For The Benefit of Others.

Rochester, N. Y.—"I have a daughter 13 years old who has always been very healthy until recently when she complained of dizziness and cramps every month, so bad that I would have to keep her home from school and put her to bed to get relief.

"After giving her only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound she is now enjoying the best of health. I cannot praise your Compound too highly. I want every good mother to read what your medicine has done for my child."—Mrs. RICHARD N. DUNHAM, 241 Exchange St., Rochester, N.Y.

Stoutsville, Ohio.—"I suffered from headaches, backache and was very irregular. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of two bottles I found relief. I am only sixteen years old, but I have better health than for two or three years. I cannot express my thanks for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had taken other medicines but did not find relief."—Miss CORA B. FOSNAUGH, Stoutsville, Ohio, R.F.D., No. 1.

Hundreds of such letters from mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for their daughters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

"INITIALS ONLY"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"For how many people have you drawn those lines?" thundered the inexorable voice.

"For nobody; not for myself even. This is the first time they have left their hiding-place in my brain."

"Can you swear to that?"

"I can and will, if you desire it. But you ought to believe my word, sir. I am square as a die in all matters not connected—well, not connected with my profession," he smiled in a burst of that whimsical humor, which not even the seriousness of the moment could quite suppress.

"And what surety have I that you do not consider this very matter of mine as coming within the bounds you speak of?"

"None. But you must trust me that far."

Brotherson surveyed him with an irony which conveyed a very different message to the detective than any he had intended. Then quickly:

"To how many have you spoken, dilating upon this device, and publishing abroad my secret?"

"I have spoken to no one, not even to Mr. Gryce. That shows my honesty as nothing else can."

"You have kept my secret intact?"

"Entirely so, sir."

"So that no one, here or elsewhere, shares our knowledge of the new points in this mechanism?"

"I say so, sir."

"Then if I should kill you," came in ferocious accents, "now—here—"

"You would be the only one to own that knowledge. But you won't kill me."

"Why?"

"Need I go into reasons?"

"Why? I say."

"Because your conscience is already too heavily laden to bear the burden of another unprovoked crime."

Brotherson, starting back, glared with open ferocity upon the man who dared to face him with such an accusation.

"God! why didn't I shoot you on entrance!" he cried. "Your courage is certainly colossal."

A fine smile, without even the hint of humor now, touched the daring detective's lip. Brotherson's anger seemed to grow under it, and he loudly repeated:

"It's more than colossal; it's abnormal and—" A moment's pause, then with ironic pauses— "and quite unnecessary save as a matter of display, unless you think you need it to sustain you through the ordeal you are courting. You wish to help me finish and prepare for flight?"

"I sincerely do."

"You consider yourself competent."

"I do."

Brotherson's eyes fell and he walked once to the extremity of the oval flooring and back.

"Well, we will grant that. But that's not all that is necessary. My requirements demand a companion in my first flight. Will you go up in the car with me on Saturday night?"

A quick affirmative was on Sweetwater's lips but the glimpse which he got of the speaker's face glowering upon him from the shadows into which Brotherson had withdrawn, stopped its utterance, and the silence grew heavy. Though it may not have lasted long by the clock, the instant of breathless contemplation of each other's features across the intervening space was of incalculable moment to Sweetwater, and, possibly, to Brotherson. As drowning men are said to live over their whole history between their first plunge and their final rise to light and air, so through the memories of his past and the fast fading glories of the future; and rebelling at the subtle peril he saw in the sardonic eye, he vociferated an impulsive:

"No! I'll not—" and paused, caught by a new and irresistible sensation.

A breath of wind—the first he had felt that night—had swept in through some crevice in the curving wall, flapping the great car. It acted like a peal to battle. After all, a man must take some risks in his life, and his heart was in this trial of a redoubtable mechanism in which he had full faith. He could not say no to the prospect of being the first to share a triumph which would send his name to the ends of the earth; and, changing the trend of his sentence, he repeated with a calmness which had the force of a great decision:

"I will not fail you in anything. If she rises—" here his trembling hand fell on the curtain shutting off his view of the ship, "she shall take me with her, so that when she descends I may be the first to congratulate the proud inventor of such a marvel."

"So be it!" shot from the other's lips, his eyes losing their threatening look, and his whole countenance suddenly aglow with the enthusiasm of awakened genius.

Coming from the shadows, he laid his hand on the cord regulating the rise and fall of the concealing curtain.

"Here she is!" he cried and drew the cord.

The canvas shook, gathered itself into great folds and disappeared in the shadows from which he had just stepped.

The air-car stood revealed—a startling ,because wholly unique, vision.

Long did Sweetwater survey it, then turning with beaming face upon the watchful inventor, he uttered a loud Hurrah.

Next moment with everything forgotten between them save the glories of this invention, both dropped simultaneously to the floor and began that minute examination of the mechanism necessary to their mutual work.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Saturday night at eight o'clock.

So the fiat had gone forth, with no concession to be made on account of weather.

As Oswald came from his supper and took a look at the heavens from the small front porch, he was deeply troubled that Orlando had remained so obstinate on this point. For there were ominious clouds rolling up from the east, and the storms in this region of high mountains and abrupt valleys were not light, nor without danger even to those with feet well planted upon mother earth.

If the tempest should come up before eight!

Mr. Challoner, who, from some mysterious bravado on the part of Brotherson, was to be allowed to make the third in this small band of spectators, was equally concerned at this sight, but not for Brotherson. His fears were for Oswald, whose slowly gathering strength could illy bear the strain which this additional anxiety for his brother's life must impose upon him. As for Doris, she was in a state of excitement more connected with the past than with the future. That afternoon she had laid her hand in that of Orlando Brotherson, and wished him well. She! in whose breast still lingered reminiscences of those old doubts which had beclouded his image for her at their first meeting. She had not been able to avoid it. His look was a compelling one, and it had demanded thus much from her; and — a terrible thought to her gentle spirit — he might be going to his death!

It had been settled by the prospective aviator that they were to watch for the ascent from the mouth of the grassy road leading in to the hangar. The three were to meet there at a quarter to eight and await the stroke and the air-car's rise. That time was near, and Mr. Challoner, catching a glimpse of Oswald's pallid and unnaturally drawn features, as he set down the lantern he carried, shuddered with foreboding and wished the hour passed.

Doris' watchful glance never left the face whose lightest change was more to her than all Orlando's hopes. But the result upon her was not to weaken her resolution, but to strengthen it. Whatever the outcome of the next few minutes, she must stand ready to sustain her invalid through it. That the darkness of early evening had deepened to oppression, was unnoticed for the moment. The fears of an hour past had been forgotten. Their attention was too absorbed in what was going on before them, for even a glance overhead.

Suddenly Mr. Challoner spoke.

"Who is the man whom Mr. Brotherson has asked to go up with him?"

It was Oswald who answered.

"He has never told me. He has kept his own counsel about that as about everything else connected with this matter. He simply advised me that I was not to bother about him any more; that he had found the assistant he wanted."

"Such reticence seems unpardonable. You have displayed great patience, Oswald."

"Because I understand Orlando. He reads men's natures like a book. The man he trusts, we may trust. To-morrow, he will speak openly enough. All cause for reticence will be gone."

"You have confidence then in the success of this undertaking?"

"If I hadn't, I should not be here. I could hardly bear to witness his failure, even in a secret test like this. I should find it too hard to face him afterwards."

"I don't understand."

"Orlando has great pride. If this enterprise fails I cannot answer for him. He would be capable of anything. Why, Doris! what is the matter, child? I never saw you look like that before."

She had been down on her knees regulating the lantern, and the sudden flame, shooting up, had shown him her face turned up towards his in an apprehension which verged on horror.

"Do I look frightened?" she asked, remembering herself and lightly rising. "I believe that I am a little frightened. If—if anything should go wrong! If an accident—" But here she remembered herself again and quickly changed her tone. "But your confidence shall be mine. I will believe in his good angel or—or in his self-command and great resolution. I'll not be frightened any more."

He hardly knew what to make of the intense feeling she had manifested. Had Orlando touched her girlish heart? Had this cold-blooded nature, with its steel-like brilliancy and honorable but stern views of life, moved this warm and sympathetic soul to more than admiration? The thought disturbed him so he forgot the nearness of the moment they were all awaiting till a quick rasping sound from the hangar, followed by the sudden appearance of an ever-widening band of light about its upper rim, drew his attention and awakened them all to a breathless expectation.

The lid was rising. Now it was half-way up, and now, for the first time, it was lifted to its full height and stood a broad oval disc against the background of the forest. The effect was strange. The hangar had been made brilliant by many lamps, and their united glare pouring from its top and illuminating not only the surrounding treetops but the broad face of this uplifted disc, roused in the awed spectator a thrill such as in mythological times might have greeted the sudden sight of Vulcan's smithy blazing on Olympian hills. But the clang of iron on iron would have attended the flash and gleam of those unexpected fires, and here all was still save for that steady throb never heard in Olympus or the halls of Valhalla, the pant of the motor eager for flight in the upper air.

As they listened in a trance of burning hope which obliterated all else, this noise and all others near and distant, was suddenly lost in a loud clatter of writhing and twisting boughs which set the forest in a roar and seemed to heave the air about them.

A wind had swooped down from the east, bending everything before it and rattling the huge oval on which their eyes were fixed as though it would tear it from its hinges.

The three caught at each other's hands in dismay. The storm had come just on the verge of the enterprise, and no one might guess the result.

"Will he dare? Will he dare?" whispered Doris, and Oswald answered, though it seemed next to impossible that he could have heard her:

"He will dare. But will he survive it? Mr. Challoner," he suddenly shouted in that gentleman's ear, "what time is it now?"

Mr. Challoner, disengaging himself from their mutual grasp, knelt down by the lantern to consult his watch.

"One minute to eight."

The forest was now a pandemonium. Great boughs, split from their parent trunks, fell crashing to the ground in all directions. The scream of the wind roused echoes which repeated themselves, here, there and everywhere. No rain had fallen yet, but the sight of the clouds skurrying pell-mell through the glare thrown up from the shed, created such havoc in the already overstrained minds of the three onlookers, that they hardly heeded, when with a clatter and crash which at another time would have startled them into flight, the swaying oval before them was whirled from its hinges and thrown back against the trees already bending under the onslaught of the tempest. Destruction seemed the natural accompaniment of the moment; and the only prayer which sprang to Oswald's lips was that the motor whose throb yet lingered in their blood though no longer taken in by the ear, would either refuse to work or prove insufficient to lift the heavy car into this seething tumult of warring forces. His brother's life hung in the balance against his fame, and he could not but choose life for him. Yet, as the multitudinous sounds about him yielded for a moment to that brother's shout, and he knew that the moment had come, which would soon settle all, he found himself staring at the elliptical edge of the hangar, with an anticipation which held in it as much terror as joy for the end of a great hope or the beginning of a great triumph was compressed into this trembling instant and if—

Great God! he sees it! They all see it! Plainly against that portion of the disc which still lifted itself above the further wall, a curious moving mass appears, lengthens, takes on shape, then shoots suddenly aloft, clearing the encircling tops of the bending, twisting and tormented trees, straight into the heart of the gale, where for one breathless moment of whirlshrdlu taaup tahmbta ment it whirls madly about like a thing distraught, then in slow but triumphant obedience to the master hand that guides it, steadies and mounts majestically upward till it is lost to their view in the depths of impenetrable darkness.

Orlando Brotherson has accomplished his task. He has invented a mechanism which can send an air-car straight up from its mooring place. As the three watchers realise this, Oswald utters a cry of triumph, and Doris throws herself into Mr. Challoner's arms. Then they all stand transfixed again, waiting for a descent which may never come.

But hark! a new sound, mingling its clatter with all the others. It is the rain. Quick, maddening, drenching, it comes; enveloping them in wet in a moment. Can they hold their faces up against it?

And the wind! Surely it must toss that aerial messenger before it and fling it back to earth, a broken and despised toy.

"Orlando?" went up in a shriek. "Orlando?"

Oh, for a ray of light in those far-off heavens! For a lull in the tremendous sounds shivering the heavens and shaking the earth! But the tempest rages on, and they can only wait, five minutes, ten minutes, looking, hoping, fearing, without thought of self and almost without thought of each other, till suddenly as it had come, the rain ceases and the wind, with one final wail of rage and defeat, rushes away into the west, leaving behind it a sudden silence which, to their terrified hearts, seems almost more dreadful to bear than the accumulated noises of the moment just gone.

WAS SO RUN DOWN

COULD NOT DO ANY WORK.

Thought She Was So Far Gone Nothing Could Cure Her.

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS Made Her Strong and Healthy.

Many women get run down, and are unable to look after their household duties, owing to their nervous system becoming unstrung, and when this happens, the heart starts to work in sympathy with the nerves. In Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is combined a treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as act on the heart itself. Mrs. F. McFadyen, Brookside, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received from using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. This spring I was so run down I could not do any work, and one day a neighbor advised me to try your Pills. I told her that I thought nothing could cure me, as I was too far gone. But she told me to get a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which I did, and before I had finished them, I began to improve, and when I had finished the one box I was as strong and healthy as any person. Anyone who is suffering from heart or nerve troubles should take your Heart and Nerve Pills and they will soon discover their worth."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

La Diva
NON RUSTABLE
CORSET

For Short or Medium Figures

La Diva Corset No. 718 shown herewith, is a Paris design, brought over by our designer on his last trip, the only change being to adapt it to the slightly fuller and stronger forms of Canadian women. (This is why so many imported corsets pinch and hurt).

It is ideal for the short and medium figure. This model, when combined with the straight loose fit of the tailored garment, gives the wearer the fashionable effect which is so much sought after by stylishly-dressed women.

This corset is made of French coutil, daintily trimmed with lace, ribbon and bow, and has six suspenders, hook and draw string. It is boned entirely with duplex steel and stopped with silk.

La Diva No. 718 is sold by the best retailers at $3.00 and it will be found fully equal to any imported corset at $4.00. Like every other La Diva, this model is fully guaranteed. Other models are sold at from $3.00 to $7.00.

"My Business is Scientifically Managed"

WHEN you say that you mean, of course, that it is thoroughly systematized, brought abreast of modern business conditions, by the adoption of tried and proven time-and-labor-saving office methods. But can you truthfully say the same of your shipping department? Has it kept pace with the advancement of your other departments? Or, is the work still carried on in accordance with bewhiskered, traditional custom, without regard for the greater facilities which Otis-Fensom Elevators place at your disposal?

THE waste that is caused, first, by the lack of mechanical equipment; and, second, by the unnecessary and duplicated effort on the part of the worker himself; the thousands of steps, the "false" motion, the constant and useless expenditure of energy necessitated day after day when goods have to be laboriously transferred from floor to floor by the stairway — all these wasteful labor leaks can be eliminated by the use of an Otis-Fensom Elevator. Goods can be properly stored and classified to be reached and removed at a moment's notice. Floor space is increased, the habit of order and neatness induced, and every flat and department made as readily accessible as the ground floor. Errors and delays in shipments are minimized. Incoming goods are promptly, systematically and advantageously distributed, and overhead expenses are kept down to the lowest notch. Your shipping department and an Otis-Fensom Elevator can do the work in one half the time and with one third the labor now required. Your regular line shafting can be used if an Otis-Fensom is put in. *For those who do not require a Power Elevator we offer our Hand Power Elevator. PILES CURED

Writing from Parlee, B.C., Mrs. O. Simpson, proprietress of the Commercial Hotel, says: "I suffered for years with bleeding piles. The pain was so bad at times that I could hardly walk, and doctors' medicines seemed entirely unable to give me any ease. Finally I decided to undergo an operation, and went to the Sacred Heart Hospital in Spokane. There they performed an operation, but for a time I was certainly worse, but within twelve months the pain became as painful as ever. I tried liniments, hot poultices, various 'pile cures,' and indeed everything I could think would be likely to do any good, but still I continued to suffer, and the shooting, burning, stinging pains, the dull, aching, 'worn-out' feeling that the disease causes continued as bad as ever.

"One day I read about Zam-Buk and thought I would try it. The first one or two boxes gave me more ease than anything else I had tried, so I went on with the treatment. In a short time I began to feel altogether different and better. Well, I went on using Zam-Buk, and by the time I had used six boxes I was delighted to find myself entirely cured. That was three years ago, and there has been no return of the trouble."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for piles, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, chronic sores, burns, scalds, bruises, inflamed patches, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores everywhere, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Another Letter From "Sylvia"

If the magazine referred to in Miss Roberts' last article is the Ladies' Home Journal, the following statement, by the Editor of that Journal, shows her accusation to be false:

"You ask, a number of you, why it is that we seem to go out of our way to offend a great many estimable women by our anti-suffrage articles:

"We do not go out of our way to offend any class of women. Being a woman's magazine such a course would be suicidal. The question of woman suffrage is in the air—it is a discussed question. It is natural that this magazine should discuss it. Before we were ready to do so our silence was construed to mean that we were afraid because it would 'hurt our circulation,' we were told. Then we were asked to present 'both sides.' We did, in two articles. One by Lyman Abbot and one by Jane Addams. Then folks wrote in and said: "Yes, but what is your opinion?" We gave it. Then came a tocsin of abuse. If our convictions had been in favour of equal suffrage, and we had said that, we would have caught it from that side.

"Some readers away from the centres asked: 'Do women of prominence, whose lives and works are in points of vantage, disbelieve in woman suffrage?' We showed that fifty of the most prominent women of America, such as Mrs. Grover Cleveland, Margaret Deland, Kate Douglas Wiggan, ex-President Hayard of Wellesley College, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Elihu Root, Mabie Braadman, Mary E. Wilkins and some forty others, were on the anti-suffrage side.

"Then our readers requested: 'Send some one to the Suffrage States and find out what has actually been done.' We did. The article was published, and the Suffragists said: 'It is false. Why didn't Mr. Bok let a Colorado woman speak?' We asked Mrs. Francis Goddard, acknowledged as one of the most prominent women in Colorado, to speak. She did, and declared that woman suffrage in Colorado was a failure. Then said the woman suffragists: 'It isn't fair to take only one woman (after they had said 'let a Colorado woman speak!') Mrs. Goddard is absolutely alone in her position.' We had a canvass made of some prominent Colorado women, and we printed their opinions—eighteen of them—all declaring that woman suffrage in Colorado had not accomplished what it was hoped it would.

Now may I ask: Is all this going out of our way to 'offend' anybody? We did what our readers asked of us, and when we were challenged by the Suffragists we answered their challenge.

"When you say that we 'have never given the other side of the question'—the suffrage side—you forget Miss Jane Addam's article, which still stands to-day as the ablest presentation of that side of the question that there is in print.

"As to the oft-repeated story by the Suffragists that you mention: 'that the Editor of this magazine offered a Colorado woman $500 to say that woman suffrage in her state was a failure,' and that she refused, has not the first scintilla of truth to it. No such offer was ever made by the Editor of The Ladies' Home Journal to any one, and although I have personally written at least half a dozen times to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who made the statement, asking for the proof, she has never furnished it to me.

"A magazine taking a definite stand on any question about which persons feel deeply is bound to meet antagonism. But it does not follow that, because it expresses an opinion, it seeks to offend."

Legislation is not necessarily a cure for evil, and if it were men would be as willing to vote for it as women. If women are led to believe that no personal effort is required, but that every evil is to be counteracted and all good accomplished by legislation then they are sure to be disappointed.

A W. C. T. U. member wrote to the Examiner lamenting that a text book, teaching the injury of the use of tobacco and alcohol, is not in use in our schools.

Is there nothing that mothers can do but look forward to text books and legislation? The school curriculum is too full already and teachers are scarce and underpaid, now.

Mrs. Rorer writes: "Highly seasoned and highly spiced foods create a desire for alcohol. A mother will frequently, when fixing the dinner for a small child, dust the food thickly with salt and pepper. Within a few years even this stimulant seems mild and a stronger one is called for, and thus we go on from bad to worse. Then, too, the mucous lining of the mouth and throat are irritated to such a degree that the true or delicate flavours of foods are not appreciated. If stimulants are to be used at all let them be used in middle-life, and in very small quantities. Teach children to enjoy the simple natural taste of well-cooked foods, and when they grow to be adults the appetite will be as keen as in youth, and simple foods will be satisfying; it is the hankering of the ill-fed stomach that induces men to drink."

USUALLY ONE DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas and all Stomach Distress Vanishes

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas, which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.

PRESENTATION TO MR. R. MANN

Mr. Robt. Mann who left yesterday for the West, was presented on Friday, by the employees of the finishing room, at the Auburn Mills with a very handsome watch fob and locket, of gold. Mr. Mann has been overseer of the room for many years, and has always been very highly esteemed by those under his direction.

A brief address signed by these in the room, expressed regret at his leaving, and hopes for a happy and prosperous future. To the address, Mr. Mann made reply as follows:

"I really do not know how to thank you for this kind remembrance. I shall take this beautiful guard and locket with me and will never forget the givers. I know that I have been hard and exacting at times when pressed with work, but may say that you have never failed to answer the call and I know that the management appreciated our combined efforts. You all deserve a very happy future, which all of you ladies. I am sure, are in a fair way of doing, and the men and boys will be sure to prosper.

"With all best wishes I will bid you good-bye."

What's the Difference?

"Of course," said the optimist, "if a man gets into the habit of hunting trouble he's sure to find it."

"Yes," replied the pessimist, "and if he's so lazy that he always tries to avoid it it will find him. So what's the difference?"

Will Repeat Their Programme

Y.W.C.A. Gym. Exhibition is Highly Entertaining and the Object is a Very Worthy One

To such an extent was the Y.W.C.A. exhibition on Friday night enjoyed that it has been decided to repeat the programme in the Collegiate Institue Assembly hall to-night. This step has been taken because of the numerous requests for a repetition, both from those who were unable to be present and from those who were there and who were highly pleased with the programme. It is not necessary to mention the details, as a comprehensive report was published in Saturday's issue. The city press referred in a complimentary and deserved manner, and the young ladies of the Y.W.C.A. intend to duplicate their recent success. Not only is the programme in itself well worth the admission price, but the object is most worthy and deserves the cordial support from all the citizens of Peterborough. Another capacity house is expected this evening, in spite of this short notice.

MAPLE SUGAR RECIPES.

Maple Sugar Biscuit—Make a biscuit dough with one quart of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one table spoonful of butter and enough milk or water to make a soft dough. When ready to roll out, stir in quickly one cupful of maple sugar, cut in pieces, the size of a pea. Roll out, cut with a biscuit-cutter and bake in a hot oven until a golden brown.

Old-Time Maple Cakes—Allow two cupfuls of maple sugar, melted and partly cooled before using, one cupful of honey, and one and one-half cupfuls of buttermilk, in which has been dissolved a level teaspoonful of soda. Add a pinch of salt, a scant cupful of butter, two well-beaten eggs, enough flour to make quite a stiff sponge, spices to taste, three cupfuls of currants, one cupful of citron, sliced, and one dozen plums, halved. Dredge the fruit well with flour, and add to the well-beaten batter. Then add a cupful of preserves (gooseberries used to be the favourite,) and bake in pans, two inches deep, which have been lined with greased paper, in a slow oven.

Maple Layer Cake.—Cream a cupful of butter and two cupfuls of sugar (granulated) and a cupful of milk, or water, three eggs (beaten separately), a pinch of salt and three cupfuls of flour in which have been sifted three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in layers. For the filling, boil one pound of maple sugar (broken in small bits) in just enough water to keep from burning. When it will spin a thread, remove from the fire and stir until it begins to cool; do not allow it to harden. Then add slowly the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs and three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Spread between the layers and sprinkle thickly with some finely chopped nut meats. Ice the top and sides with any good, plain white icing.

Maple Sugar Pie.—Turn one and one-half cupfuls of milk into a double boiler and add one cupful of maple sugar broken in small pieces. Let it boil until the sugar is dissolved, then pour some of the milk over one well-beaten egg; return to the boiler, and stir in a dessertspoonful of corn starch which has been dissolved in a little cold water. Stir and cook eight or ten minutes longer. Line a deep piepan with good puff paste, turn in the mixture and bake. The yolks of two eggs can be used instead of one whole egg, and a meringue can be made of the whites. Add two spoonsful of sugar to the stiffly beaten whites, spread on the pie after it is baked, then brown nicely in the oven.

OF INTEREST TO POULTRY FANCIERS.

Local Poultry Association Will Meet on Thursday Night.

The Peterborough Poultry Association will meet in the Old Labour Hall on Thursday evening, when questions of special interest to poultry fanciers will be discussed. Mr. J. H. Callender will give an address on "Producing Early Chicks." In addition to this, there will be an exhibit of Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes.

NO ADVANCE IN COAL PRICE

Work in Anthracite Mines Suspended But Only For a Few Days, It is Said

THE LOCAL SITUATION

The anthracite coal miners of the United States are practically on strike, but there is not much concern displayed to-day over the situation.

A coal dealer stated that he was in a position to say that while the strike was practically on, that is, work had been practically suspended, it would not be for long.

Agree to Advance.

The operators have agreed to give the men a slight increase in wages, and the men, it is said, have agreed to accept the advances made, but owing to the large number who have to be dealt with and notified, it will be a few days or a week until the men are back at work again. From the reports received there is no grounds for any alarm not only because the situation is not serious but because there is an extensive supply of coal in the city, enough it is said, to carry the damand through April if not longer.

Coal men interviewed by the Examiner were a unit on this point, stating that there was no cause for alarm, that the supply of coal was abundant and that there was no advance in prices.

Enough For Summer.

A report from Toronto says there is enough coal on the tracks to last all summer. Six hundred and fifty cars arrived in the city yesterday.

One dealer said the supply on hand is sufficient to last for an indefinite period and with the advent of mild weather the possibility of a coal shortage is remote. There is a falling off in the deliverances of soft coal, but this is mainly due to the fact that the majority of soft coal consumers are accustomed to ordering their supplies direct. Therefore, the local dealers are not concerned about keeping large supplies of soft coal on hand.

TORONTO, APRIL 1.—The United States coal strike is practically on; British coal strike practically off.

Putnam's Corn Extractor Cured Letter-carrier's Corns

Mr. J. McGuire, of the Kingston, Ont., Post Office, says: "I was almost crippled with corns. They made me so lame and sore I could scarcely walk. I used a number of remedies but got no relief. Fortunately I tried 'Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor.' A few applications perfectly cured my corns. I recommend 'Putnam's Corn Extractor.' Price 25c. at druggists.

BUTTER AT 40 CTS.

The price of butter in the stores to-day hovered around 40c, and was firm at that figure. There was very little brought in by the farmers on Saturday and other sources of supply have to be depended upon.

A man who appeared to be the possessor of means was heard to say on the market on Saturday that in his home a pound of butter was usually kept in case company came, but that the family, when alone, used corn syrup or some other substitute. This was an actual statement. And along that line is the story of an East City resident, who stated that he had not tasted butter in twenty years. Still another told the story of his wife, who, for a great number of years had not eaten butter until about two years ago, when she was taken to the hospital with an injury, and there it was insisted that she eat butter. Since that time she has been one of the consumers. In each of these cases it was not lack of means that prompted the abstinence from butter.

Foolish Question.

"How did you get the bruised face?"

"It was caused by the hatrack last night."

"Accidentally?"

"No; I think it attacked me purposely."

HAD VERY BAD COUGH.

Tickling Sensation In Throat.

Could Not Sleep At Night.

A bad cough, with that distressing, tickling sensation in the throat, is one of the most aggravating coughs a person can possibly have.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will quickly stop that tickling in the throat which causes the dry cough that keeps you awake at night, for the simple reason that it is so rich in the healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, it cannot help but do otherwise.

Miss C. Danielson, Bowsman River, Man., writes:—"Last fall I had a very bad cough and a tickling sensation in my throat. It was so bad I could not sleep at night, so I went to a druggist and told him I wanted something for my cold and he advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup which I did and after taking one bottle I was completely cured. Let me recommend Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to any one who suffers from a cough or throat irritation."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

BEFORE THEY FOUND GIN PILLS

GALIETA, ONT.

"My husband took Gin Pills for Backache and Kidney Disease. The pain in his back was dreadful and the kidneys failed to do their work properly. As he became worse, we found it necessary to begin treatment and unfortunately wasted time and money on remedies that were little or no good. After taking one dose of GIN PILLS, he found them to be exactly what he needed and after taking two boxes of GIN PILLS, was completely cured. We heartily recommend GIN PILLS, at every opportunity to our friends and relatives". MRS. JAMES R. RENFORD.

GARDEN TIME IS COMING.

Plans for the Summer Should be Laid Now.

Winter has not gone yet. In fact, the groundhog has just decreed six weeks more of gum-consuming weather, But Nature is working its mysterious way toward spring, and, within the next few weeks, seeds will begin to sprout, buds to appear on trees and the earth will break out in splotches of the green of summer.

Now is the time to plan your lawn and garden. Before planting time comes you should know where each shrub and plant and flower and vegetable will be placed. Even though you have only a 50-foot lot, or a 25, a little forethought will make your grounds twice as attractive and many times more useful.

Small places are more satisfactory if treated in an unpretentious, informal, natural way, says the Craftsman. Simplicity, privacy ,and restfulness should be the aim in small gardens.

Then one should do his landscaping with a regard to utility. The vegetable garden need not be shunted to the rear of the lot as if one were ashamed of it.

The vegetable and flower plots should blend together. One continuous sweep of ground seems larger than when broken into several small beds. Vegetables planted by the side of the kitchen doorway and against the base of the house would be fully as ornamental as flowers and the accessibility would be a source of joy. A grapevine over the kitchen doorway is just as ornamental as the wistaria or clematis that usually blossoms over a front door, and has the charm of utility.

Rows of carrots and purple-leaved beets are extremely decorative and green curly heads of lettuce make an admirable border plant. They need not be hidden from view, but allowed to lend their variety of texture and colour to the yard.

Shrubs should be in evidence in planting both large and small places. They are invaluable in breaking up monotony and adding variety. A few of the andromeda, azalea, sweet scented shrub, button bush, mountain laurel, weeping willow, chokeberry, or many others will hide the foundations of a house or form an excellent background for a well trimmed lawn. In making selections of shrubs it is well to intersperse diciduous shrubs and trees that have great beauty of bark colouring or grace of limbs.

Man Mastered By His Business

When a man cannot forget his business when he lays his head on the pillow at night, it is time to consider the condition of his nervous system. Otherwise his business will wreck his future by undermining his health.

For a time he may keep going on stimulants, but if health is to be restored and old-time vigour brought back the nerve cells must be revitalised by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

A few weeks' use of this great food cure will do wonders for any business man or woman whose nervous system has failed to stand the strain. Gradually and naturally the blood is enriched and vigour and energy are restored to mind and body. Appetite is sharpened, digestion improves, you sleep well and regain the strength which makes you master of yourself and of your business.

ONLY 14 MARRIAGES

The vital statistics for the month of March show a decline in the number of births, deaths and marriages. The smaller number of births is to a certain extent compensated for by the reduced number of deaths, but the young marriageable people have only themselves to blame for their poorer showing. It may be that there will be a "run" on June unions this year as is generally the case. The figures are as follows:

Births	40	51
Deaths	26	33
Marriages	14	18

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

French Rice Pudding.

A quarter of a pound of ground rice, one pint of milk, three eggs, two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, one lemon rind, one heaping tablespoonful of butter, brown breadcrumbs, and three ounces of Sultana raisins. Grind the rice in a coffee mill. Boil the milk slowly, sprinkle in ground rice; boil till thick, six minutes; remove and add sugar and butter. Mix well, cool a little, add eggs, well beaten; stir and flavour with grated rind of half a lemon. Butter a plain mould, dust with toasted crumbs, pour in the pudding. Bake one hour in a moderate oven. Serve with lemon sauce.

Lemon Sauce.

One small lemon, one teacupful of water, one teaspoonful of cornstarch, one tablespoonful of sugar, a few drops of carmine. Put the cornstarch into a pan, add other ingredients, and bring to the boil.

Poached Eggs in Bread Cases.

Instead of serving poached eggs on slices of toast serve them in bread cases, toasted or fried. For luncheon the dish may be made more elaborate by putting a thick layer of grated cheese or minced mushrooms over the top. Garnish with sprays of parsley and serve with fried tomatoes decorated with buttered asparagus tips or watercress.

Baked Macaroni and Oysters.

Break one-third of a package of macaroni in short pieces; drop into boiling salted water and keep at a galloping boil until tender. Drain and rinse well in cold water, then drain again. Pick over three dozen oysters of medium size; rinse and drain them. Scald the liquor, skim thoroughly and strain. Make a cupful and a half of cream sauce, using equal proportions of milk and the oyster liquor. Butter a deep dish and fill it with alternate layers of the macaroni, oysters, seasoning, a spoonful of chopped celery and sauce. Sprinkle the top with a third of a cupful of fine breadcrumbs mixed with one teaspoonful of melted butter and brown in a quick oven.

Stewed Beef Heart.

Soak the heart in cold water for several hours to draw out the blood. With a sharp knife cut out the muscles and tough top. Dry and fill with this stuffing: One cupful of fine stale breadcrumbs, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper, one teaspoonful of chopped onion, a half teaspoonful of dried sweet herbs, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Sew the top well together and wrap in a piece of cheese cloth. Fit it into a small saucepan, point downward, pour in enough boiling water to almost come to the top add a tablespoonful of tomato catsup and a half teaspoonful of salt, cover and simmer slowly for three hours. Remove the heart and keep it hot. Thicken the gravy with slightly browned flour, boil up, add seasoning, and two or three tablespoonfuls of sherry. Strain and serve, passing currant jelly with the meat.

Vermicelli with Anchovies.—Take one-half pound of vermicelli and cover it well with salted water. Cook for about ten minutes. While it is boiling put into a saucepan four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, three anchovies cut up fine with six olives, and one-half tablespoonful of capers. When these are fried add the vermicelli (well drained), mix well and put the saucepan at the back of the stove. Turn the vermicelli over with a fork every few minutes until it is thoroughly cooked.

Spraghetti with Tunny-fish.—While one half pound of tunny-fish is boiling in salted water prepare the following: Take two ounces of tunny-fish and cut them into small pieces. Put them into a saucepan and fry them in their own oil. This oil is generally sufficient, but should it not be, add another tablespoonful of olive oil. When the tunny have been fried, add a teaspoonful of chopped parsley and four tomatoes, peeled and the seeds removed, and a pinch of pepper. Let the tomatoes cook thoroughly. When they are cooked put the spraghetti into the saucepan and move them about with a fork and spoon until they are thoroughly mixed with the sauce and the tunny. Then serve.

Vermicelli with Tomatoes.—Sprinkle on salt and pepper. Break the raw vermicelli the length of the baking dish and put a rather thick layer of it on top of the tomatoes. Now add another layer of the tomatoes, salt and pepper, and another layer of the raw vermicelli, and so on, the top layer being of tomatoes. Heat two or three tablespoonfuls of butter, and when it boils pour over the tomatoes and vermicelli ;then put the dish into the oven and cook until the vermicelli is thoroughly done.

Rice and Tomato.—Take a small piece of onion, cut it into small pieces, and put into a saucepan with two tablespoonfuls of butter. Cook until the onion is browned. Wash one-half cup of rice, put it into the saucepan with the onion, add salt and pepper, and fry until the rice is dry. Then take one and one-half tablespoonfuls of tomato paste, thinned with hot water (or two tablespoonfuls of other tomato sauce); and add to the rice. Little by little add hot water until the rice is cooked through (about one cupful of hot water). Then add grated cheese, Parmesan of Gruyere, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter, and mix well over the fire; then serve.

Farina Nuts.—One pint of milk, one egg, one-half cupful of afrina, butter and cheese. Put the milk on, and when it boils add salt. Take a wooden spoon and, stirring constantly, add the farina little by little. Cook for ten minutes, stirring constantly. Take off the fire and break into the farina one egg; mix very quickly, so that the egg will not have time to set. Spread the farina on to the breadboard about the height of a finger. Allow it to cool, then cut it into squares or diamonds about two or three inches across. Butter well a baking dish, and put in the bottom a layer of the squares of farina; sprinkle over a little grated Parmesan cheese (or Gruyere), and put here and there a small dab of butter. Then put in another layer of the small squares of farina; add cheese and butter as before. Continue in this way until your baking dish is full, having on the top layer butter and cheese. Bake in a hot oven until a brown crust forms. Serve in the baking dish.

Chestnut Fritters.—Take twenty good chestnuts and roast them on a slow fire so that they won't colour. Remove the shells without breaking the nuts, and put them into a saucepan with one level teaspoonful of powdered sugar and one-half glassful of milk and a little vanilla. Cover the saucepan and let it cook slowly (simmer) for more than a half hour. Then drain the chestnuts and pass them through a sieve. Put them back in a bowl with one-half tablespoonful of butter, the yolks of three eggs, and mix well without cooking. Allow them to cool, and then take a small portion at a time, the size of a nut, roll them, dip hem in egg and in breadcrumbs, and fry in butter and lard, a few at a time. Serve hot with powdered sugar.

Rose Cake.—Take the recipe for MayDay cake, and when cold cover it with icing flavoured with rose water extract and scatter over the top candied pink rose leaves.

Breakfast Rolls.—Two quarts of sifted flour, one quart of milk, two tablespoonfuls butter or lard, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful salt, and a cake of compressed yeast. Scald the milk in a double boiler and cook it until it is lukewarm; add the butter, sugar, salt, and yeast, dissolved in a little lukewarm water, to the milk; then stir the mixture into the flour and make into a dough. Knead, and let rise one night in a cool place. Then cut off pieces and shape into rolls the desired size by rolling between the hands but do not knead them. Set in a warm place to raise quickly, then bake.

Corn Bread.—One pint of yellow Indian meal, one pint of flour, three ounces of sugar, two ounces of butter, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one of baking soda, one pint of fmilk, two eggs and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Sift the flour with the cream of tartar and salt into a bowl, dissolve the baking soda in a little boiling water, and stir it into the milk. Stir butter and sugar to a cream, add gradually the eggs, next alternately the flour and milk, with the dissolved soda. Pour the mixture into a square well-buttered tin pan, and bake in a hot oven. The batter should be one inch thick in the pan. When done cut the bread into squares. The preparation may be baked in gem pans; it will produce sixteen corn gems.

Stewed Chops.—Put two mutton chops in a shallow pan, having a tight cover, with two carrots, a turnip an dtwo onions. Pour on boiling water to the depth of one inch; cover and simmer one hour; and when the meat is nearly tender, add two commonsized potatoes, having first soaked and scalded them. Add one teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. Remove the vegetables without breaking; let the water boil nearly away, leaving enough for a gravy. Remove the fat, thicken the gravy with flour, and, if needed, add salt and tomato ketchup. Pour it over the meat.

THE MAN WITH A TOUPEE

Might Have Had a Good Head of Hair.

The man who wears a toupee does not like it, but has the courage of his convictions.

Nature never intended that the top of the head should be left entirely without protection. A bald head is very susceptible to contraction of colds and neuralgia. Wearing an artificial top piece counteracts this tendency, and, aside from the improvement in the personal appearance, is amply justified.

How much better it would have been had the man, now chronically bald and wearing a toupee, but realized earlier in life the approaching danger and devoted a little regular attention to his hair, which would have saved it.

There is a remedy which will absolutely prevent baldness. Loss of hair in nine cases out o ften is unnecessary, being due to dandruff and the germ that causes it. This germ must be destroyed and the ulations of dandruff checked. Then the hair will not fall out, but instead will grow naturally and luxuriantly.

Newbro's Herpicide is the remedy, regular applications of which will do this. It has long been known as the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ and is absolutely dependable.

So reliable is this preparation that all druggists now sell the one dollar size bottles of Herpicide with a binding guarantee to refund money if unsatisfactory.

Herpicide applications may always be obtained at the better barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

Anyone desiring to try Newbro's Herpicide before purchasing a large bottle will receive a nice sample and booklet by sending 10c. in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A Short Story

Since his arrival at the age of reasoning, Peterkins Ethelred Padlock had bitterly resented his name. Peterkins he had found impossible. Ethelred was worse, because his hair was more than auburn, and Padlock was almost as bad.

During his age of schooling he had felt its ignominious pressure and had answered principally to the name of Paddy. It was not, however, until he began his business career, with an opportunity to start on the bottom round of a mercantile ladder, that he realized the serious disadvantage his appellation might prove to him.

"Well, young man, what can I do for you?" curtly inquired the manager, leaping back for a moment in his swivel chair.

P. E. Padlock laid his card and letter of introduction before him, but the manager swept them aside impatiently.

"Those things are no use," he remarked dryly. "What can you do?"

"cWll, I should like to get a chance——"

"I didn't ask you what you wanted, I asked you what you could do," sarcastically interrupted the busy man.

"I don't know whether I know how to do anything in your line at the present time,, but I can learn anything there is to know," replied P. Padlock with spirit, heartily resenting what he considered the manager's impertinence.

"Your spirit's all right, anyhow. Want to go to work now? What's your name?"

"Mr. Padlock," glancing suggestively at his card, with which the manager was impatiently tapping the desk.

"Yes, yes; but we don't 'mister' folks here. What's the 'P.' for?"

"Peter—Peterkins."

The manager stared. "Humph!" he finally grunted. "Guess we'll fall back on the 'E.'"

"That's worse," stammered the applicant miserably. "It's Ethelred."

"Holy smoke, young man, this is no time for jokes. If you want a job with this house, you'll have to begin on a newer basis than at present. You——"

"I assure you, Mr. Barton, it's no joke. For 20 years I've been fighting that name. It's mine all right, Peterkins E. Pad—"

"Great Jehosophat! Go out that door, turn to your left, and ask for Mr. Raymond. Tell him to set you to work. John."

P. E. Padlock worked faithfully for three years, gaining more and more the confidence and trust of his employers. One occurred the incident for which was totally unprepared, and which plunged him into alternate periods of joy and despair. He fell in love!

Having asked the fatal questions, and being repulsed by the lady of his heart's choice that her affection was unalterable nothing could part them, he wended his way one night to the place of abodefi with the ring which was to seal the bargain.

"Do you like it, dear?" he asked, with loving eagerness.

"Oh, awful," she cried, and, drawing her head down, she whispered, "Thank you—John."

Poor P. awoke with a shock. He had not known that she did not know the name which would have to be written upon the marriage records.

"Louise dear," he began, his throat dry and his tongue reluctant, "would it make any difference to you if my name were not 'John'—if it were something else, not at all nice?"

"John—what do you mean?"

"Would you," he insisted, desperately.

"Of course not; but why?"

"Because it isn't. It's—it's—Peterkins."

For a moment Louise looked at him in blank amazement; then, as she view ed six feet of strong substantial manhood before her and contrasted it with the mental picture called "Peterkins," an uncontrollable desire to laugh possessed her, and despite her determined appearance and the fear of wounding him, she laughed until she could laugh no more.

"Please forgive me," she said, finally. I didn't mean to hurt you, but it's so funny. It doesn't matter, anyway; I'll love you by your middle name instead."

"But that's worse," rebelliously replied Peterkins, with a phraseology which had become mechanical. "It's Ethelred."

"Mr. Padlock, are you serious?"

Poor P. E. could only nod his head in dumb misery.

"Then you may most certainly consider the engagement broken. I could not tie myself to a name like that for the remainder of my life. Of course, I know it isn't your fault, but why—oh, why didn't you tell me—before I got to loving you so? Oh, please go away."

Blindly he staggered from he house. A numbness seemed to hold him in its grasp, and he had no goal or aim.

Suddenly to his dull senses came the swift thud of hoofs, a sound of people shouting, and then he became suddenly conscious of a horse, with nostrils distended and eyes madly aflame, bearing down upon him, while beyond the animal's head he caught one glimpse of a small white face, tense and drawn with fear.

"It doesn't matter, anyhow," flashed hrough his awakened brain, as he made a leap for the bridle. A pull as if his arm were being wrenched from its socket, a sickening thud of his head upon the paving, and then a blank unconsciousness fell upon him.

Upon awakening, he felt at first no surprise to find himself at home, but as memory returned, questions insistent and imperative demanded answer.

With clearer thoughts, too, came realization of his loss, and he turned his face to the wall, and groaned aloud. A cool hand smoothed the damp hair from his forehead.

"Are you in pain, dear?" questioned a familiar voice. He endeavoured to turn toward her, but a sharp pain and an arrangement of cords and bandages told him the truth.

"You here?" he cried in amazement.

"Yes, dear. Can you ever forgive me? But you mustn't talk and you mustn't move. I cannot stay here if you do. The doctor said so."

"But, Louise, I want to know all about it. What is the matter with me? Surely I haven't got to lie here, strapped up in this confounded thing—and pretty soon you'll be going and I'll be left alone. This is the time when a fellow needs his mother."

He was rapidly working himself into a fever. The girl laid her hand upon his head and whispered to him shyly. With a look of unbelief, followed by happy surprise, he nodded his head.

"Now you are to go to sleep," she told him with a kiss.

"Louise, you are not fooling me, are you, just to make me go to sleep? You wouldn't play a joke on a sick man, would you?

"No, dear, I'm not joking. I'm quite serious," answered the girl, and with a contented while he turned his face toward the and slept.

An hour later grave and reverend person stood beside the sickbed. "Dou you," he continued, after the preliminary of the ceremony and the sweet of the girl; "do you, Petered Padlock, take——"

Upon being elicted, the worthy man made humble apologies and again proceeded. "And do you Peterlock Ethelkind Padlock, take this——"

Mortified and ashamed, the poor man asked that his name be written down and the ceremony was completed without further accident.

Peterkins, the recent cause of so much humiliation, once cared nothing at all for his cognomen.

"I mind only for your sake," he murmured, as he bent her to him.

"And I mind not at all," she returned, her eyes shining, "so long as I have you."

After a few moments he asked: "Louise, what name did they put in the papers?"

"P. E. Padlock," answered his wife, smiling.

"Thank goodness Louise, I guess you better always call me John."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A YEAR

"For thirteen years I was so bad with chronic indigestion I could not go out of doors. Nervous headaches and pains in the heart had made my life a misery. I thought I was an old man, when a friend advised me to try a treatment called Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I began the use of these Pills, which I am glad to say restored my health. RAILWAY NOTES

On April 25th, the people of California will celebrate the fourth annual California Raisin Day when the slogan is "eat raisin bread, eat raisin pie, eat raisins cooked or raw, but eat them anyhow". The idea of the celebration is to assist one of the greatest industries of the State by bringing the native product before the public as prominently as possible and after four years the institution has become quite popular. It is not by any means confined however within the borders of California for many of the Easter railways feature the dusky fruit by placing special raisin dishes on the menu of their dining cars for that day.

The Grand Trunk has fallen into line on previous anniversaries and will again give prominence to raisin dishes throughout their system on April 30th, this year.

"The Seashore," a forty-eight page booklet with a striking cover and more than 100 illustrations has just appeared describing the New London District of Connecticut on the line of the Central Vermont Railway which promises to be an even more popular resort for Canadians in general and Montrealers in particular than was Old Orchard in its palmiest days. Anyone who is worried over the annual "summer vacation problem" will find interest if not inspiration in the contents.

Just how varied are the resources of this new territory can be realized from the statement that they include deep sea fishing and bathing at New London; river boating on the Thames salt water bathing and sand for the youngsters at Ocean Beach, Watch Hill, and Block Island; as well as golf and tennis at Fisher's Island. New London is the scene every year of the Harvard-Yale boat race which corresponds in America to the historic contests between Oxford and Cambridge Universities on the older Thames of the British Isles, and this sporting event attracts large crowds of college men and "summer girls" to the sturdy sea port town.

Copies of this publication may be obtained for the asking from any agent of the Grand Trunk Ry. System or Central Vermont Railway.

Chief Engineer Armstrong, of the Hudson Bay Railway, whose headquarters are at Winnipeg, has received instructions from the Minister of Railways, to send out two parties to the Bay immediately, one to go to Fort Churchill and the other to Port Nelson. They will remain at these places for a couple of months, taking observations and making surveys as to the suitability of the respective ports to be the terminals of the line. Upon the result of their reports and recommendations will depend the final choice.

A valuable addition to the railroad literature of this continent has just been made with the publication of a "Synoptical History of the Grand Trunk System of Railways," a neat brochure which gives in pithy and accessible form the most salient facts in connection with the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, as well as their various branches and subsidiary companies. The work has been compiled by a prominent official whose wide experience has amply qualified him for the task. Specially interesting to those who are concerned with transportation matters, the publication will afford interesting reading to the student of Canadian history which is so intimately associated with its railroad development.

As an instance of the suggestive information to be met with in its pages, a short quotation might be made from the report of Sir Henry Tyler, afterwards president of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, on the occasion of his first visit to Canada in 1867: "In addition to water routes (mentioned elsewhere) the chief competitor in Canada of the company at that time was the Great Western Railway Company extending from Niagara Falls to Sarnia, Ont., and to Detroit, Mich." As a result of this competition Sir Henry reported that the rates for freight service averaged 0.92 of a cent per ton miles—flour being carried between Montreal and Toronto as low as a cent per ton per mile. The average rate on the Grand Trunk System for the year 1910 was 0.69 of a cent per ton per mile.

The average number of freight cars to a train was then reported as 15.5; the average net load of each train as 150 tons. The records for 1910 show an average of 26.6 freight cars per train, and the average weight of revenue freight carried, per train, was 292 net tons.

The Federal government has surveyed and will throw open on April 1st an area in the Peace River Valley, 34 miles long by 24 wide, and as it is the real gateway to this rich agricultural country, the Grand Trunk Pacific authorities are prepared for the invasion of Edson, Alta., by thousands of eager homeseekers this coming spring and summer. Here are located extensive yards; the larger station on the line west of Winnipeg; coal bunkers where eight engines can load at once by a mechanical device; round house, machine shops, car shops and a complete water and sewerage system.

In spite of snow hindrances, the track of the Grand Trunk Pacific, which has been laid at the rate of well over 30 miles in 6 weeks, has now passed mile 140 east of Prince Rupert, according to the latest report received from general superintendant Mehan, and rail-head should be at the crossing of the Skeena River by March 16th, at the present rate of progress, as it is now only 36 miles away. The first divisional point out of Prince Rupert is to be at Mile 119, a station not yet named.

Since the commencement of the railroad work in British Columbia by the Grand Trunk Pacific, the "Henriette," a steamer belonging to that company, which recently left Vancouver for Tunstall Bay to take on a cargo of 150 tons of dynamite for use in tunnel work, has carried approximately 600 tons of giant powder and dynamite to the Skeena River, earning thereby the water-front nickname of "Old Floating Destruction."

At the request of the Canadian Department of the Naval Service, Capt. Barney Johnson of the G.T.P. Steamer "Prince Rupert" has written a paper on Seymour Narrows, B..C, relative to the very peculiar tidal conditions prevailing there. These remarkable tide rips and swirls have been responsible within Capt. Johnson's own experience, for at least a dozen strandings and wrecks. They alter every few minutes and depend on the variations of the tremendous rise and fall of tides all along the coast—variations of from plus 23 feet to as low as minus .6 of a foot below the normal taken.

An important era in the history of Prince Rupert as an ocean port is marked by the news that direct shipments of goods in bulk from Europe to that city is to commence this spring. Already the firm of Balfour, Guthrie & Co. are collecting business for direct shipment by two steamers which they have announced to sail from British and European ports in the present month and that of April. Steamships have already called at the Grand Trunk Pacific port, of course, but it has been transhipped freight or freight from Canadian ports, the biggest cargoes being rails.

The Grand Trunk Railway is planning to greatly extend its yards at Harriston, Ont., this spring. The company has long been considering this step which has now been facilitated by concessions from the town council.

Great interest is being taken by the town of Saskatoon in the possibility of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway effecting an entry here. The new line to run from Regina to North Battleford through Saskatoon, as shown on the map of the company presented to the private bills committee of the provincial legislature, does not pass by the town as does the main line, but runs right through it. While the line on the map, of course, merely indicates the general route to be taken this fact is regarded as an indication of the railway company's intentions in the matter.

Chief Engineer Van Arsdol has received instructions to move his headquarters from New Haselton, B.C., to a point further east where he can keep in closer touch with the construction work on the G.T.P. It is likely that the new camp will be beyond the Bulkley Summit, but some time will be required in which to put up the buildings.

WHY MISTAKES OCCUR.

Human brains are strange things. Sometimes they will work perfectly for the greater part of a lifetime. The tiny mistakes that they make are harmless. Then something happens. A brain cell wears out or collapses. The brain skips a cog.

Why should we ever make mistakes? They are sometimes costly and always annoying. A big railway company finds that the mistakes of its employees cost the corporation hundreds of thousands of dollars in the course of a year. A big percentage of the wrecks, mishaps, and general trouble of a railroad corporation is caused by the slipping of a cog in somebody's brain. If the human machine always acted perfectly, there would be but little trouble.

Every man who holds a position supposedly knows just how his work should be done. He has been taught every movement that is necessary. He works more or less by rule, and he has the experience and the methods of every man who has ever done such work to guide him. Yet mistakes will be made. The brain is 80 per cent. water, after all.

Why is it that our brains cannot keep us out of trouble? Why should we ever forget a thing that we have once seen, felt, touched or heard? The deeper the brain convolutions the more space there is in the brain for recording facts. The civilized man has deep convolutions ,and yet some men are making a fortune running a school for training the memory.

OLD-TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Colour, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair—Dandruff Quickly Removed

For generations Sage and Sulphur have been used for hair and scalp troubles. Almost everyone knows the value of such a combination for keeping the hair a good even colour, for curing dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, and for promoting the growth of the hair. Years ago the only way to get a Hair Tonic of this kind was to make it in the home, which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays, almost any up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully prepared in perfectly equipped laboratories.

An ideal preparation of this sort is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for scalp troubles and thin, weak hair that is losing its colour or coming out. After using this remedy for a few days, you will notice the colour gradually coming back, your scalp will feel better, the dandruff will soon be gone, and in less than a month's time there will be a wonderful difference in your hair.

Don't neglect your hair if it is full of dandruff, losing its colour or coming out. Get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

Many Want To Go Back.

London, April 2.—Up to midnight the votes counted in the ballot of the miners in connection with the coal strike numbered 135,636. Of these 69,141 were in favor of resumption of work and 66,828 were against resumption. These totals, however, do not include North Wales and other districts, where it is believed large majorities will be polled in favor of resumption.

The ballot affords surprises, as there is doubt in some quarters whether a majority will cast their ballot for a return to work, although all the responsible leaders continue to advise the men of the folly of continuing the strike. Strangely enough South Wales, which was supposed to be a hot-bed of resistance, polled nearly 2 to 1 in favor of resuming while the English northern counties ballotted in favor of continuing the strike.

One explanation of the somewhat unexpected ballot is that large numbers of willing workers are not taking the trouble to record their votes. In the meantime it is estimated that between 20,000 and 30,000 miners descended into the pits yesterday. Coal traffic is being resumed and many shipyards and industries have started up again. The price of coal declined 3s. 6d. on the London Coal Exchange.

Prominent Brockville Man Dead.

Brockville, April 2.—Word has reached here of the death of Chilion Jones at Bermuda, where he had been staying for some time in search of health. His daughter, Mrs. Alban Jones, was with him.

Chilion Jones was 75 years of age, and a prominent figure. In late years he was interested in manufacturing pursuits in Gananoque, but made his home in Brockville. He leaves three daughters and one son, Mrs. Alban Bedford Jones, Toronto; Mrs. R. E. Webster, Ottawa; Mrs. A. R. G. Heward, and F. P. Jones, Montreal.

WILL START LINES.

Hydro Commission Prepares For Service For Eastern Ontario.

Kingston, April 2.—The proposition from the Hydro Electric Commission for supplying power to Kingston has been received, and is regarded as a good one for the city. The contract was submitted by Hon. Adam Beck before the utilities committee of the City Council yesterday afternoon.

Following are the rates: For three thousand horsepower, $30.00; for four thousand horsepower, $28.00; for five thousand horsepower, $24.00.

Work will be commenced at once upon the transmission line if Kingston will sign a contract. The temporary supply of power will be secured for Kingston, Brockville and Prescott from the New York and Ontario Power Co. at Waddington, N.Y., until the commission can install a plant at Waddington.

Members of the committee also had for consideration an offer from the Seymour Power Co. The rate this company quoted was $36 per horsepower. Both the company and the commission state that, providing the contract is signed, power will be delivered by Nov. 1. After some discussion, it was decided not to give a final answer on the propositions today, and an adjournment was made until Thursday.

That the offer from the Hydro-Electric Commission is the best for the city, appears to be the general opinion. Engineers P. B. Yates and H. Y. Acre of the commission appeared before the committee in regard to the contract submitted for approval by the commission.

Report Is Ready.

Toronto, April 2.—Sir William Meredith yesterday sent in his report on workmen's compensation for injuries, but while admitting that the law in Ontario regarding workmen's compensation is entirely inadequate, he frankly states he is as yet unable to make any recommendations for enacting a satisfactory law, or to report a bill embodying changes in the law which, in his opinion, should be adopted.

Water Meters For Brantford.

Brantford, April 2.—Nineteen million gallons of water was the increase in March this year in the amount of water pumped over the amount in March last year, and all records were broken when a total of ninety-five millions was reached. Water commissioners declare that there is terrific waste on among the consumers generally, and the installation of meters is contemplated as the only remedy at hand.

Six Years With Broken Neck.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 2.—After living six years with a broken neck, George Steele died here yesterday. His neck was broken when he fell from the roof of the Toronto-Niagara power house when the building was being constructed in 1906. He has been confined to bed ever since the accident, practically his entire body being paralyzed.

Bad Freight Wreck Near Woodstock.

Woodstock, April 2.—About 1.45 p.m. yesterday a freight train of fourteen cars was wrecked in front of the G.T.R. station at Burgessville by the breaking or spreading of a rail. The cars are piled up and overturned, and five cars of wheat, two cars of coal and one of cement have their contents scattered around.

Buildings on the railway side, belonging to Messrs. A. R. Siple and A. Mollins were almost demolished by the cars, which dashed into them. No one was hurt.

Prometheus stole the fire from heaven.

"And ever since my wife has made me get up to build it in the morning," he complained.—New York Sun.

Jim—Have a cigar, George. They say there are more than a million and a half brands of cigars made. George (sampling the gift)—Funny it should be just your luck to pick this one.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

So you're seventeen, my lad—
Seventeen and well and strong!
Pride is yours; your look is glad;
Hope is in your song.

Seventeen, and in your skies
Flames a splendid, brilliant star.
Oh, that I might be as wise
As you think you are!

600,000 ARE OUT.

Suspension of Industry in America Will Prove Costly.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 2.—With only one or two exceptions the suspension in the coal mining industry of the country, which went into effect at midnight Sunday when the wage contracts between the members of the United Mine Workers of America and the bituminous and anthracite coal operators expired, was general yesterday, and approximately 600,000 miners are out of work. The country will miss more than a million tons of coal and the miners are out about $1,000,000 in wages.

President J. P. White of the miners, before starting for his home in Oskaloosa, Iowa, yesterday afternoon, said that he expected the bituminous men to ratify the Cleveland agreement and return to work probably by April 20. He also predicted a speedy adjustment of a wage contract in the anthracite field when the miners and operators meet in Philadelphia on April 16. The ballots for the referendum vote on the bituminous agreement are being prepared in the national headquarters here, and it is believed they will be returned here by April 15.

The only exception to the general suspension, which came to the notice of the miners' officials here yesterday, was in two railroad mines at Evansville, Ind., in which the men continued at work with the understanding that they are to receive the new scale of wages. No trouble has been reported from any district, and pumpmen and others required to keep the property in shape for a resumption remained at their posts yesterday the same as over a holiday.

In many places yesterday was celebrated as "eight hour day" among the miners, marking the anniversary of the installing of the eight-hour day in the mines.

Edwin Perry, national secretary-treasurer of the miners, says the Cleveland contract, when ratified, will provide the highest wages ever paid to coal miners of any country.

"The men of the picks needed the increase," he said, "and I do not think the public will feel that we are trying to hold them up. The increase should have little if any effect on the price of coal."

Blow to Berlin's Pride.

Berlin, April 2.—The possibility of a Highland regiment being formed in Galt to which will be attached the Galt Kiltie Band is arousing keen interest here, not that any deutcher is longing to be dressed in skirts, but the formation of such a regiment will put out of existence the 29th Waterloo Regiment of Infantry and the Berlin Band, which for the past 35 years, has been known as the 29th Military Band, will no longer be styled as such after winning many laurels.

Col. Oliver of Galt, who has had the command of the 29th Regiment for several years, has not been able to muster a full regiment, and there seems very little reason why he should be given the command of a new regiment to boost Galt at the expense of Berlin.

It will be next to an impossibility to get a single soldier boy to march out of Berlin, even to a comp instruction. If they are not led by the band with a record the old 29th holds.

Sugar Magnate Died Without Will.

New York, April 2.—Five days after the death of John Arbuckle, the sugar millionaire, who died here on Wednesday, his lawyers and relatives have about given up hope of finding a will, and it is now believed that he died intestate. His estate is estimated at more than $20,000,000. No children survive to inherit it, and Mrs. Arbuckle, his wife, died five years ago. Mrs. Robert Jamieson and Miss Christina Arbuckle, sisters, are the nearest relatives.

St. Kitt's Painters Strike.

St. Catharines, April 2.—Because of a hitch in negotiations with employers in their request for an increase from 30 to 35 cents an hour, all journeymen union painters of the city went on strike yesterday. Hopes are entertained that differences will be settled before the end of the week. Carpenters were given an increase of from 40 to 45 cents an hour as an inducement to remain at work.

MR. C. A. SPENCE APPOINTED TO THE SANITARY INSPECTORSHIP

Council Amends Several Clauses of Property Committee's Report—Charges to be Collected With the Taxes Instead of by the Inspector—Pens at Market Are to Go

Two clauses in the Property committee's report drew the attention of the Council toward them at last night's meeting with the result that they were overturned and the report was only passed after several amendments were tacked on.

Mr. C. A. Spence was appointed Sanitary Inspector at $700 a year, his name being submitted for that of Mr. John Meharry, who had been recommended by the committee. The other referred to the manner of collecting the money for garbage removal, which will be charged with the taxes and paid with them, instead of being collected by the Sanitary Inspector.

Ald. Brown Opened Fire.

When Alderman Duncan presented his report as chairman of the Property committee, Ald. Brown made the first attack on it in an endeavour to save a pen on the market for the convenience of the farmers. The committee recommended the removal of all the pens from the market, but Ald. Brown thought this step was going a little too far.

"I am not speaking in behalf of the Market Clerk, but for the many farmers who bring cattle into the city and whom the city wants to have come here. The pens are being removed not for their use, but for their abuse, and I think that could be easily remedied."

Ald. Johnston considered it an eyesore and thought it should go.

Ald. Brown—If you move the pens you might as well remove the scales too.

Ald. Morgan— I think we are in duty bound to remove them in the interests of the citizens.

Mayor Bradburn—This Council does not want to do anything that will affect the business done by farmers in this city. The pens in the past have been a disgrace to the city. Besides they have been of more benefit to the drovers than to the farmers.

Ald. Duncan—We are paying $36 a year each to keep them clean and they are not kept so.

No further discussion was given this matter, which passed as recommended.

Removal of Garbage.

Ald. Anderson aimed the next shot at the recommendation in regard to the garbage removal by-law. He did not think it was comprehensive enough as there were many outside the district outlined who would welcome the removal service. The city might sell the right to collect the garbage as it sells the right to collect the market tolls and the collector could cover as much territory as possible. The Sanitary Inspector would have to have wings if he were to do the collecting. Ald. Anderson moved, that this clause be sent back to the Whole Council.

Ald. Duncan—We have gone into this from all points, but we could not do anything further. I spoke to several in an effort to get them to tender but they would not put in a price. They had no place to put the garbage.

Ald. Anderson—Some will object to this being compulsory in the matter of paying for it.

Mayor Bradburn—How do you mean they will not pay for it. We are not legislating for the few.

Ald. Gillespie—I agree with Ald. Anderson in regard to the Sanitary Inspector not making the collections.

I am also very much opposed to Mr. Meharry as Sanitary Inspector. My opinion has always been that the best qualified man you can get is the man for this position, the man who has training along sanitary lines. We are beginning something new and we want a qualified man.

One Thing at a Time.

Mayor Bradburn—Let us deal with one thing at a time.

Ald. Johnston seconded Ald. Anderson's motion that the by-law referring to the removal of garbage go back to the committee of the Whole Council. The motion was lost on the vote.

Ald. Gillespie thought that the charges for the removal of garbage should be put on the tax bill's.

Ald. Duncan—We all agreed that it would be better to have it that way, but for several reasons we thought it as well to try it in this manner for a time.

Mayor Bradburn—I have been thinking the matter over since the committee meeting and I am convinced it will take a great deal of the Sanitary Inspector's time.

Ald. Gordon— It is a petty job for a man to spend his time at, especially when it is the Sanitary Inspector. It should be added to the taxes.

Mayor Bradburn—Make it chargeable against the property and paid with the taxes.

Moved by Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Ald. Gordon, that the charges for the removal of garbage be collected with the taxes.—Carried.

Supported Mr. Spence.

Ald. Gordon—There is another matter, namely, the recommendation that Mr. J. Meharry be appointed Sanitary Inspector. I would move that Mr. C. A. G. Spence's name be substituted. I understand the committee's selections simmered down to these two.

Ald. Graham—To three. There was Mr. A. Hope.

Ald. Gordon—Mr. Spence, I believe, has good recommendations. If Mr. Meharry is a good policeman, he is needed there. If he is not, he is not wanted as Sanitary Inspector. I do not believe he has any experience as Sanitary Inspector. He had the experience of looking around the yards to see that they were cleaned, but I don't believe that work was properly done. Besides, he is looking after a rink which is being operated on Brock street, and which I understand is a nuisance to those residing in that neighbourhood. His observance of his duties are such that they do not warant the assumption that his sense of the importance of this new office would be in keeping with the requirements from a sanitary inspector.

Ald. Gordon moved, seconded by Ald. Anderson, that Mr. Spence be appointed Sanitary Inspector for the rest of this year at $700 per annum, after which the Council may be in a position to consider the amalgamation of the offices of the Plumbing and Sanitary Inspectors.

Suggested Mr. Turner.

Ald. Johnston concurred in the suggestion of combining the offices of Sanitary and Plumbing Inspector. Not however, to expect one man to do the whole work, but to have one responsible head to see that the duties are properly executed. As head of such a department he offered that Mr. Wm. R. Turner would prove an ideal man; he is a competent practical plumber, [illegible] and sanitation go hand in hand, to no inconsiderable degree.

Ald. Duncan—Mr. Turner is a good man, but we decided there was too much work for one.

Ald. Gillespie—I believe Mr. Spence has some qualifications, but I would like to see one with even better qualifications.

Ald. Brown—After hearing this discussion, I am inclined to think that neither is quite the man we want.

Wanted Mr. Meharry.

Ald. Morgan—Mr. Meharry has lived here all his life and is more entitled to consideration than an imported man of recent date coming here with his uncle's or father's experience as recommendation. Constable Meharry is fully qualified for the position. He understands cattle from the hoof up and knows all about milk. He has attended to the duties for four or five years and has given satisfaction to the Medical Health Officer. The Chief of Police is also highly satisfied with him as a constable.

Ald. Morgan said he would do anything to prevent Ald. Gordon swinging the recommendation.

Resented Statement.

Ald. Gordon—You have just 15 days to get the Sanitary Inspector. I strong resent the suggestion that this man Spence is just a new comer. He has been here three or four years and has as much right to be an applicant as Mr. Meharry, who has been here drawing his salary. I submit that Spence is the best man available and should be given the position.

Ald. Gordon's, motion seconded by Ald. Gillespie, was carried, with the following supporting it: Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Buller, Gillespie, Gordon, Duffus and Anderson. This carried it with a majority of one.

Ald. Duncan said in reply to the Mayor that he was supporting the committee's report.

After the vote was taken Ald. Graham said across the hall, "Good boy, Duncan."

A Parting Shot.

Ald. Brown also directed a shot at the clause giving the contract for the supplying and planting of trees in the King Edward Park to Mr. Frank Wise. He thought Mr. H. A. Porter's tender should be accepted and moved to that effect. Ald. Gordon seconded it, but it was lost, only Ald. Duffus supporting it.

The report with these several amendments then carried.

Hotels to Pay More.

The by-law to provide for the removal of garbage as presented by the Property Committee was passed practically as it was received. Mayor

RINGLING BROS'. CIRCUS HERE ON SAT'Y, JUNE 15

Will Likely Show at the Exhibition Grounds—Appear in Only a Few Ontario Cities

HAVE 1200 EMPLOYEES

Mr. N. J. Petit, representing the Ringling Bros.' circus, was in the city to-day making preliminary arrangements for their coming to Peterborough on Saturday, June 15th. The show begins its 1912 season on Saturday of this week in Chicago, postponing their opening until that day on account of this being Holy Week. The circus comes east and then swings west again. It will be shown in only eight or nine cities in the Province of Ontario and this is just a little recognition of the position and size of Peterborough.

There are 1200 employees with Ringlings this year, an increase since their last appearance in 1907. It now covers 12 acres and will pitch its tents at the exhibition park. There are 86 cars of impediments and the parade will be three miles long.

Mr. Petit stated that the feature of the show this year was a big spectacular ballet entitled "Joan of Arc." It is given just after the opening entry when the participants swing back and present this ballet. This is a special feature, and the number of rings, stages and usual features are on the same large and generous scale that has always characterized the presentation of the Ringling performance.

ANNEX PART MONAGHAN

First Step in Consideration That May Extend City's Boundary West and South

PROPERTY INCLUDED

For some time there have been rumours of a movement to annex to the city a portion of North Monaghan, and at last night's meeting of the council the Legal Committee was asked to bring in a report on the proposal.

The plan it is understood is to take steps to secure the annexation of a strip of Monaghan about 300 yards or more in width along the western boundary of the city from Smith street south practically to the river. If this be done the city will be extended south and west. The northern end of the western boundary would be on Smith street, several hundred yards west of Jackson Park entrance, and the south end would be practically at Crawford's Groove. The southern boundary would be along the river nearly all the way. The plan is yet in its beginning and for the most part has been but a rumour until this step by the council.

The proposed annex would include Byersville, the Hatton property, part of the Chamberlain property, the Catholic cemetery, and the settlement south of Lansdowne street, built up around the Brinton Carpet Co.

Noted Tenor At Red Mill Theatre

R. M. D'ANGELO.

The Red Mill Picture Palace seems to grow more in popular favour each week, and the cream of Peterborough's society and business folk are nightly represented in this delightful place of amusement. The Red Mill Orchestra, under the direction of Mrs Foster, is of a high order of excellence, both from a classical and popular standpoint, while the singing of Mr. Donaldson, the past few weeks, has been delightfully refreshing. His selections have all been familiar and encores have been in large demand. To-night, Mr. R. M. D'Angelo, the noted tenor, recently from the Metropolitan Opera House, will be the soloist. Mr. D'Angelo is a native of Palermo, Sicily, and is only 28 years of age, yet he has sung in most of the pricipal opera houses of Italy, including the La Scala, at Milan, Sambarlo at Naples, and the Massimo, at Palermo. He came to America six years ago, under the Grau management to the Metropolitan Opera House. He is engaged at the Red Mill Theatre all this week, changing his songs with the programme every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Do not fail to hear him.

April Fool's Day proved to be a Jonah for John Hogan. It cost him two dollars in the police court this morning for the privilege of being drunk on the occasion.

BLACKLISTER IN TROUBLE

A local man, the alleged sole support of a wife and family ,was fined $10 for being under the influence of liquor while on the blacklist.

"Where did you get your liquor?" inquired the chief.

"I had a bottle before I was put on the list," began the accused.

"That's an old story," interrupted the Magistrate. "Can't you give us something new?"

"When did you buy the liquor?" asked His Worship.

"A week ago Saturday," replied the witness.

'It must have been bad whisky, or it wouldn't have kept so long," commented the Magistrate.

It further developed that the accused had been on the list but a week, and prior to this had laid in a supply, which he had hid in the woodshed. When questioned by the chief as to the amount of wood which was in the shed the witness became obdurate and refused to answer the questions. He admitted that he had purchased a 50c flask from Montgomery's but could not remember where he had got the rest.

The fine was made payable forthwith. As the necessary sum was not forthcoming an option of 30 days in gaol with hard labour was attached.

"MADE-IN-PETERBORO" OR MADE ELSEWHERE, WHICH SHALL IT BE?

So Queried the Ladies Representing the Women's Auxiliary of the Local Health Association Before the City Fathers Last Night—Council Pass a Resolution.

A deputation from the Women's Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association, consisting of Mrs. Jas. Kendry, Mrs. E. W. Travers, and Mrs. W. M. Bradburn, waited on the City Council last night to present the needs of the "Made-in-Peterborough" Exhibition and to solicit their cooperation and incidentally some "fatherly" advice.

They are in a dilemma. A number of firms outside of Peterborough desire the privilege of exhibiting at their Fair, while the manufacturers of this city have not responded in the manner that was expected. They have secured the Armouries for their exhibition, and have divided it off into booths, about thirty in number, but up to the present have been successful in allotting only fourteen. If they do not secure enough encouragement from our own manufacturers they will be reluctantly compelled to admit outsiders.

Mrs. Kendry, in a few introductory remarks, explained the plans of the local Health Association, how it was their purpose to provide a District Nurse to look after those afflicted with tuberculosis, and by a system of education to remove the contagion from our midst. Money would be required. This they hoped to raise by means of the "Made-in-Peterborough" Exhibition, which should supply sufficient funds to carry on the commendable campaign for two or three years. Other places, such as Brockville, Hamilton and London, had successfully carried out a similar undertaking. It would boom the industries of the City, and she hoped the Council could do something to interest the manufacturers.

Mrs. Travers next addressed the city's representatives, and remarked that "Made-in-Peterborough" seemed to be in the air; everyone seemed anxious to make it a success. She hoped to see three or four thousand dollars raised, which would provide funds for four years at least, including of course, the assistance of membership fees, etc. The manufacturers, however, were not responding as they should, seeing that they are the ones to be benefited most. Great numbers of people will be drawn here which will boom the city as well as advertise her industries. She thought it best to confine the exhibits to those "Made-in-Peterborough." They had in every way tried to meet the wishes of the manufacturers, as to space and price, and while they had met with every encouragement from the larger firms, they could not interest the smaller ones.

The bulk of the receipts will come from entrance fees, and from special booths and attractions, which the ladies are conducting themselves, and if the manufacturers of the city will only cooperate the success of the venture is assured. Mrs. Travers said she would like to see the Council do something to arouse the manufacturers to take their part, otherwise it would be necessary to include outsiders.

The Council was requested to arrange for excursion rates on the railways during the exhibition week.

Mayor Bradburn expressed his sympathy with the movement, and suggested that the Council pass a resolution asking for the cooperation desired.

It was moved by Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Alderman Gordon, "that this Council is of the opinion that the "Made-in-Peterborough" exhibition, which is being arranged by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association will be a good advertisement for the city and for those who exhibit at it, and that in view of the benevolent object to which the proceeds will be applied and for the credit of the city, it should be supported, and that this Council commends the Exhibition to the support of the manufacturers and citizens, generally."

Mayor Bradburn recommended that the Manufacturers' Committee of the Council co-operate with the Ladies' Auxiliary and assist them in every possible way.

Before retiring, the deputation reminded the Council of the importance of having some dignitary perform the opening ceremonies, and if they invited some prominent person they would like the selection to be in accordance with the Council's wishes, who, naturally, should provide entertainment for the guest.

So much for the deputation—now for the manufacturers.

Surely they have not realized the importance of the proposition that is being laid before them. We learn that the larger firms have seized the opportunity, but the smaller ones are hanging back. Various excuses are given. Some say they are too busy to make anything up for the Exhibition; others, that it would be too expensive to provide the exhibit; while other near-sighted ones cannot "see" where there is anything in it for them.

Is it any wonder they are "small?" Here is a golden opportunity that is being laid right at their doors; an opportunity to advertise such as they will never obtain again, at least for some years to come. Advertising, as a usual thing, costs money, but here is an advertising scheme absolutely unique in that it is ridiculously cheap and, instead of employing the usual method of hiring a "drummer," and packing him off with a cart load of samples to scour the country, piling up expense on expense, the ladies of the city are throwing a fortune right in their laps and they cannot see it.

Think of the advantage of having thousands of citizens and strangers (possible customers) brought into the city at their own expense, all in one week, to view the products of Peterborough. I wonder that the manufacturers, particularly the smaller ones, are not falling over one another in an endeavour to secure space before it is all gone.

Th every fact that outsiders are so anxious to secure booths to exhibit their goods should, at least, be a hint to Peterborough manufacturers to arouse from their sleep and resolve that the 'Made-in-Peterborough' Fair shall be the birthpiece of their larger expansion.

What is to become of Peterborough anyway?

Will it be—

"Sleepy Hollow" or

"Greater Peterborough?"

Returned A True Bill For Murder

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ONT., APRIL 2.—A true bill for murder has been returned against Stephen Keyook, an Indian, who was held in connection with the terrible double murder at Walpole Island on New Year's night. His trial will commence at Sarnia this afternoon. The authorities state that they have the strongest kind of a case against Keyook, in connection with the shooting of Chas. Nadhee and Allen Johns, also Indians. The young Indian girl, Flossie Williams, whom Keyook claims as his wife, is also held and it is expected will give sensational evidence.

EXEMPLARY PUNISHMENT.

Government for the people, and by the people has become obsolete in these days of strong "Tory" majorities. Shakspere tells us that "it is excellent to have a giant's strength, but tyrannous to use it like a giant." It is excellent, from a party viewpoint for Sir James Whitney to have an overwhelming majority, but tyrannous to use the strength it implies as if the public money and the rights of the public to share the benefits of its expenditure equitably were subject to considerations of promoting party interests, rewarding party fealty, and keeping the government in office. That the people of a constituency can be punished for presuming the defeat of a government candidate was shown in the Ontario Legislature last Friday. At the general elections, Mr. Aubin, the Government candidate, was defeated largely because of the way in which he had manipulated his patronage in the years he represented the constituency of Sturgeon Falls. On Friday, when the further supplementary estimates came before the House Magean, the gentleman who defeated the Government candidate, rose to call the attention of the members to the fact that not one grant had been give his riding for roads or bridges, while the surrounding districts had been generously treated. Thus the riding was penalized for protesting against the manipulation of government moneys by the Conservative representative in the last Legislature. Sir James tried to square himself with the situation by bluster, but he could not explain away the fact that the supplementary estimates did not contain a single grant for roads and bridges in the riding that "had gone wrong," from a party point of view and was put wrong because it voted against a Government candidate. This is an exemplary punishment which should be a warning to constituencies that they must vote as the Government desires them to do—that they must sell their votes to expect decent and fair treatment.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Last Friday, as a result of a ten-hour campaign—from 9 a.m. to 7 p. m.—the membership of the Galt Board of Trade was increased from 198 to 318.

The following from the Galt Reporter shows how this was done, and illustrates the spirit that made such a result possible:

Yesterday Galt came forward with 318 members for the Board of Trade. Just one strong pull and they fell into the ranks of the aggressive institution which has worked faithfully and well for this growing and solid town.

The appeal made was to the loyalty of the business man and he heard it like a man having great faith in organized effort and not without gratitude for the efforts put forth by the members of the organization to promote the general welfare.

Yesterday's verdict rendered by a discriminating lot of men adds emphasis to the responsible position occupied by the Board of Trade. That verdict could scarcely have been stronger in approval of the achievements to its credit. To the Board the subscribers said: Persevere in well doing, we believe as a working force you occupy vantage ground, and you may count upon our support in the carrying of this end that project to a successful issue.

The Board of Trade, with such a manifestation of public confidence in its work, should labour even harder tha in the past for a greater and more beautiful Galt.

This is an object lesson to Peterborough. If a town with a population of 10,269, to our 18,212, can increase its Board of Trade membership three times over in ten hours, there seems to be no reason why the enterprise of our citizenship should not accomplish something proportionate. It only needs a little getting together and pulling together. A Board of Trade, to be effective, must be live, and a live membership is obviously the necessary condition to life.

UNPARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE

Manitoba has had its geographical boundaries defined, but there apparently should be some bounds placed to the language of Conservative members of the Legislature, as shown by the following despatch on Saturday. The methods adopted by the Roblin Government were brought to light by some incidents which took place before the Legislature Private Bills Committee yesterday afternoon, when the Rosser power bills were up for consideration.

Hon. Colin H. Campbell talked in a bantering way about the actions of the city in protecting its subsidy, finally turning on C. E. McPherson, member for Lakeside, who has constantly fought these bills since they came up. Mr. McPherson was fighting the point with regard to the interpretation of the municipal act, when the Minister of Public Works, in exasperation, shouted at him: "We won't be subjected to your d—d nonsense." This was repeated several times in a heated manner.

Later, when the Manitoba Power Bill has been disposed of Mr. Macpherson asked that it be reprinted, in order that the committee might read it again carefully. It had been reprinted once before, but many changes were made. George Steel, member for Cypress, chairman of committees, shouted at the member for Lakeside: "Shut up, you d—d fool."

Mr. McPherson tried to speak again, but was again told to shut up by the chairman, in the same language, and his fellow members joined in a chorus of "damns."

At this, T. H. Johnson, member for West Winnipeg, stood up and promptly told Mr. Steel that he might feel himself a pretty big man around there, but to tell a member to "shut up" was going altogether too far.

Hon. Mr. Campbell is a ruling elder in Westminster Church, and four Sundays ago occupied the pulpit of St. James' Presbyterian church, speaking on church union.

ENTIRELY INADEQUATE.

Sir William Meredith has reported that the "Workmen's Compensation Act" of Ontario, "is entirely inadequate to meet the conditions under which industries are now carried on." He says, in part:

"I am as yet unable to make any recommendations for enacting in the province any of the provisions of these laws, or to report a bill embodying changes in the law which in my opinion, could be adopted," says the commissioner in a report to the government.

"Sufficient progress has been made, however," he continues, "to warrant the statement that the law of Ontario is entirely inadequate to meet the conditions under which industries are now carried on, or to provide just compensation for those employed in them who meet with injuries or suffer from occupational diseases contracted in the course of their employment.

"It is satisfactory to be able to say that there is practical unanimity on this point and that those who speak for the employers concede the justice of the claim made on behalf of the employees that the industries should bear the burden of making compensation.

"The employers contend, however, that the whole of this burden should not be borne by them, but that the employees should share it and suggest as a fair contribution by the employees ten per cent. of the amount required to provide the compensation. This is strenuously opposed by the employees who take the position that the whole burden should be borne by the employers.'

Sir William states that the basis principle having been conceded the question rises as to the form that legislation should take.

"The employers," he remarks, "favour what is practically a plan of mutual insurance, under the management of the Crown, that the industries should be divided into groups or classes, and that an annual assessment should be made by the board to meet the claims for the preceding year, each group or class being assessed only for the compensation for injuries happening in establishments within it, with a special additional assessment in all cases to provide a reserve fund.

"This plan," he adds, "seems to be favoured by the representatives of labour organizations."

There being practical unanimity on the part of the employers and employees on these two main principles, Sir William states that it is reasonable that they should form the basis of provincial legislation.

"As at present advised I shall," he says, "be prepared to recommend a plan such as is proposed, if after careful and thoughtful enquiry and examination I am satisfied that it is economically sound and workable."

It did not need a year's investigation to demonstrate that the Workmen's Compensation Act was inadequate. In this city a learned judge, by actual trial and experience, found out as one instance and declared the Act inadequate and so far short of meeting the demands of justice, that he appealed to the honour and humanity of a defending employer, in a case of suit for damages for injury, to make the just compensation which, under the inadequate Compensation Act could not be obtained by process of law. Sir William Meredith has been investigating the Act, and the attendant conditions for a year, and has just now made his report—just at the close of the session, and just too late to deal legislatively with the matter. Valuable time has been lost and in the meantime many injustices may be permitted under a law long known, and pronounced by the highest authority, to be "inadequate." The law's delays are proverbial, but the delays of the judges and legislators bid fair to qualify them for admission into the same class.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The final returns of customs receipts at Ottawa show an increase of about 15 million dollars over the receipts of last year.

The Toronto Star suggests the appointment of a commission to investigate the Borden Government's Civil Service Investigation Commission. The proposal has Du Charme and has Morine it than the government bargained for.

Mr. Arthur Hawkes and Hon. Robert Rogers have had a falling out, because the Minister of the Interior will not make public the former's report upon the immigration system. Isn't it too bad, remarks the Ottawa Free Press, that a patriot's effort should be rewarded by having his darling report filed away in a pigeon hole? What a way to reward the "leader of the British born!"

Hon. Mr. Monk, Minister of Public Works, who has by his slaughter of officials, earned the title of Minister of Bloody Works, said in the House that if, after "investigation," the officials whose heads had been demanded, and taken off, were found innocent, they would be re-instated. But there is fear that history will repeat itself and that, as in France, under "The Terror" to "denounce" a man as a "suspect" is equivalent to his head in the basket. The difficulty will be for any partizan investigator to find any man proved innocent who has been assumed guilty and punished accordingly.

A good deal of ink is being wasted to show that the Senate Committee on the Condition of the West is simply flogging the dead horse of Reciprocity. As a matter of fact, says the Montreal Herald, it is eliciting some very pertinent and instructive information concerning the difficulties of the grain raisers and they are difficulties which if they cannot be dealt with by Reciprocity must be dealt with in some other way. It is no use pretending that they do not exist, just because the men who know about them happened to be advocates of Reciprocity last year.

Apropos of Henri Bourassa's retirement for the Quebec Legislature the Galt Reporter remarks htat "the task of dictating to the Borden Government has been too much for him". He succeeded so well in this by forcing his abandonment of the navy on Mr. Borden that he can afford to take a rest. That is enough to immortalize both him and the Borden Government, not to speak of his forcing three Nationalist members on the Cabinet. With three representatives in the Government Mr. Bourassa can take a holiday, with the assurance that in the interim the peculiar interests of Nationalism will be well looked after by the Borden Government.

Is Trade Unionism On Trial—Are Its Leaders Becoming Followers?

(Sydney Brooks, in The London Daily Chronicle.)

People talk of the unrest in the industrial world as predominantly a struggle between Capital and Labour. That is undoubtedly one of its aspects. But it has many others, and among them one which must strike an observer as being both novel and peculiarly ominous—I mean the evidence with which the past few years, and the past few weeks especially, have furnished us of the increasing difficulty experienced by trade union leaders in controlling their men.

Time and again, of late, and conspicuously in the troubles of last August, we have seen what can only be described as a revolt of the working men against their own trade union officials. We have seen strikes initiated against the advice of the men's recognized and freely-chosen leaders; we have seen terms of settlement arranged by these leaders and then rejected by their followers; we have seen agreements between employers and employed broken by the latter at the shortest notice, and in spite of the protests of their appointed officials; we have seen employers placed in the curious position of backing up the trade unions against their own members.

Fight for Recognition.

The significance of this will be apparent to anyone with the smallest knowledge of the principles, workings, and history of trade unionism. In Great Britain trade unions have overcome two powerful enemies. They used to be illegal; they are now, if anything, as much above the law as they were formally below it; certainly they enjoy some legal privileges such as no other associations can show.

And not only have they forced recognition and more than ample safeguards for themselves from Parliament and public opinion, but they have also, after a generation or more of fierce struggle, established themselves in nearly every industry in the country, and overcome the employers' prejudice against them.

To-day in all the principal trades of the country, except the railway industry, trade unions are "recognized," and the fight for the open shop is over. What is more, British employers of late years have more and more been discovering that it is far easier for them to deal with a strong and responsible trade union than with a multitude of individual employers. And trade unions in Great Britain are both strong and responsible.

They are managed by cautious and experienced men; they have amassed very large funds; they are opposed to unnecessary strikes and to violence of all kinds; they are in the main eminently pacific and conservative organizations, with a far stronger inclination towards bargaining with employers than towards fighting them.

But now it seems that they have still one enemy left to overcome, the most formidable, perhaps, of all ,an enemy in their own household—the very men, in other words, on whose behalf they have been called into being. The essence of trade unionism is collective bargaining, is the power to arrange terms with the employers, to include masses of men, and to cover the conditions of an entire industry. But what if the trade unions are unable to enforce those terms upon their own members?

For that is precisely what has been happening with increasing frequency in Great Britain. Working men have apparently come to think little of violating agreements concluded by their own trade union officials, of taking things into their own hands, and of going out on strike not only against the advice and entreaties of their leaders, but in defiance of specific pledges given in their name by those leaders.

SPENDING TWO HUNDRED MILLIONS

Hon. A. K. Maclean's Criticism of Government

WHERE ARE OLD PLEDGES?

Mr. Foster's Warnings to Former Government and His Practices in Power—Hon. Mr. White Defends the Financial Administration

OTTAWA, March 31.—A succinct final review of the spendthrift policy of the lavish heirs of the Fielding surpluses was the feature of Saturday afternoon's sitting of the House of Commons, dealing with the last of the estimates for the coming fiscal year.

Hon. A. K. Maclean of Halifax performed the task. His criticism, though comparatively brief, was comprehensive and compelling. He effectively contrasted the diatribes of Hon. George E. Foster and other members of the Government while in Opposition against the "rising expenditures and intolerable taxation" of the late Government, with the present outlook for a jump in the expenditure during the coming year of many millions and a total vote of over two hundred millions—an increase of over forty millions above the Liberal high record of last year. He noted the inconsistencies of the present Administration with regard to past promises in the matter of Senate reform, the appointment of commissions and general economy. He foreshadowed an end to the period of safe surpluses, and a coming large increase in the public debt.

Hon. W. T. White declared that the Government should really "be surprised at its own moderation," and talked eloquently of the need of "vision" in providing for the future growth of the country—said "vision" evidently not having been realized a few months ago when Mr. Foster was attacking lower expenditures under Mr. Fielding.

Mr. Foster's Protest.

Last session Hon. Mr. Foster had moved a resolution vigorously protesting against the bringing down of large supplementary estimates at the end of the session, thus precluding any effective criticism. This session he had concurred in the bringing down of supplementary estimates totalling twenty millions, within a week of prorogation, which had been rushed through with but little chance for an investigation by the Opposition. The total vote for the coming year, in both main and supplementary estimates, was $169,307,000. In addition, there were provided for by special resolution payments to Manitoba in connection with the boundary bill amounting to over two and three-quarter millions; bounties of one million and a half; the Ontario Government Railway subsidy, amounting to nearly two millions, and other items aggregating in the whole a little over nine millions. Furthermore, there were railway subsidies provided for amounting to twenty-one millions, bringing the total authorized expenditure up to over two hundred millions. Where were now Premier Borden's promises of a few months ago that the extravagance of the Liberal Administration would be stopped? This large increase in expenditure was made in the face of world-wide industrial disturbances, which might easily result in the revenue for next year falling off a little.

Mr. Maclean dealt vigorously with the vicious principle underlying the proposed grants for the improvement of highways, declaring that never since Confederation had there been any legislation more calculated to increase Provincial jealousies in regard to Treasury grabs. He believed that the proper policy for the Government to pursue was to hold the measure over till next session, pending a conference with the various Provincial Governments, with a view to working out a more definite scheme of co-operation in regard to the improvement of roads.

ALL KINDS OF ROOFING

Felt, Gravel, Iron, Slate, etc.

The Barrett-Specification

The above cut illustrates the Barrett 5-ply Felt and Gravel Roofing, which has proved so successful as a durable Weather Protector and stood the test of years.

A Little Talk on Slate Roofs

1. A slate roof adds greatly to the appearance and thereby to the value of the house.
2. The first cost is the only cost.
3. A slate roof lessens rate of insurance.
4. Wood attracts lightning, slate does not.
5. Slate roof will not collect ice and snow as does a shingle roof.
6. Rafters do not require to be any heavier for a slate roof than for a shingle roof.
7. Slate roof cannot rot or corrode and therefore it is positively the only roof which will last for ever.
8. Slate roof may be defamed with water, but is dry in a few minutes, while a wooden roof gets waterlogged, grows worse and drives the dampness into your house.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific Slate Roofs have been used and found satisfactory in every locality.

I am prepared to put on any kind of Roofing required and guarantee good work, estimates given if desired.

Grand Re-opening of BROCK ST. ROLLER RINK

THURSDAY EVENING OF THIS WEEK

Mr. W. H. Beamer (of the Britannia Roller Rink, Hamilton, one of the best in Canada) is in charge with new ideas and has made preparations for a Big Re-opening.

MR. C. A. SPENCE APPOINTED TO SANITARY INSPECTORSHIP

Bradburn said that only 45 cents a month seemed to be too small a charge to hotels for the removal of their garbage.

Ald. Morgan—"If the little fellow pays 15 cents, the hotels should pay a great deal more."

Mayor Bradburn—"If they get off at 75 cents they are getting it mighty cheap."

On motion of Mayor Bradburn, (while in committee) seconded by Ald. Johnston, the rate for hotels was placed at 75 cents a month. This provides for ashes and other refuse.

The maximum penalty for an infringement of the by-law was placed at $10, instead of $50, on motion of Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Brown.

Inspector's Duties.

The by-law defining the Sanitary Inspector's duties was also found in good condition. The Inspector was given authority according to the original, to proceed with prosecutions, himself. But owing to the wide authority this permitted it was decided, on motion of Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Ald. Gordon, that the Inspector consult the Mayor and chairman of the Property Committee before proceeding against those whom he finds breaking the Health Act.

COUNCIL AGREES TO TRADE EDISON LANE FOR PART OF C. G. E. PROPERTY

The council last night agreed to the closing of what is known as the Edison lane, and which is really the western part of Townsend street.

A communication was received from Mr. E. G. Patterson, superintendent of the C.G.E. Co., asking the council to close the unused portion of Townsend street and accept in lieu thereof, conveyance from the company of an equal portion of lot 17 of the same length and width as the proposed closed portion of Townsend street. This portion of land at present separates the company's newly acquired property of the Chamberlain estate from their adjoining property.

The company, in other words, desire to move the unused portion of Townsend street on the south side of lot 17 to the north side thereof, so that no street will intervene.

They claim that property owners will not be injured but that it will be a distinct advantage to the various owners of lot 19, by giving them a frontage on another street.

A blue print plan of the locality was enclosed.

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that the request of the C.G.E. Company to have that part of Townsend street west of Park street moved from the south of Park lot No. 17 to the northern part of that lot, be granted, provided the company will pay the expense of making the change, and that the necessary notices be given.—Carried.

"OH, HOW I ITCHED"!

What long nerve-racking days of constant torture—what sleepless nights of terrible agony—itch—itch—itch, constant itch, until it seemed that I must tear off my very skin—then Instant relief—my skin cooled, soothed, and healed!

The very first drops of D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema stopped that awful itch instantly: yes, the very moment D. D. D. touched the burning skin the torture ceased."

D.D.D. has been known for years as the only absolutely reliable eczema remedy, for it washes away the disease germs and leaves the skin as clear and healthy as that of a child.

If you will come to our store, we have had the agency for this remedy for so many years that we can tell you all about D.D.D. Prescription and how it cures eczema.

WONDERFUL KINEMACOLOR PICTURES OF THE DURBAR

The wonderful Kinemacolor pictures of the Coronation Durbar at Delhi in India last December, were shown at the Grand Opera House last night to the delight of a large audience, whose admiration was unbounded. Those who saw the Kinemacolor pictures of the Coronation as shown here last autumn, will realize what could be accomplished at the Indian pageants when the marvellously rich colouring of those taking part is considered. The Kinemacolor instrument records the colours just as they are, and the result is a veritable riot of tints as the films are presented to the audience.

Every detail of the wonderful display is realistically presented. The pictures show the royal visit to Bombay, preparations for the Coronation Durbar, the state entry into Delhi, the Durbar ceremony, the state garden party, the polo tournament at Delhi, the elephant stockade and the preparation of the elephants for the parades, and the grand review of fifty thousand troops by the King-Emperor. This last picture was probably the most striking of all those shown. Infantry, cavalry, artillery and camel corps in thousands are seen passing the reviewing point, and afterwards the cavalry come by on the gallop—the effect being very realistic.

The pictures will be shown to-night and to-morrow afternoon and evening at the Grand, and everyone in Peterborough should make an effort to see these entertaining and educative films, which are as much superior to ordinary pictures as these in turn are to the old lime-light views.

A FINE ATTRACTION

Clipping From Notice in the Ottawa Journal of March

DAVID GARRICK AT THE RUSSELL

Old Favourite of Ottawa Audiences —Social Comedy of Century Back Holds Boards for One Night

David Garrick is the name of a famous actor that was the Henry Irving of his day in London. For over twenty years he headed the theatrical profession in Britain, what at that time really meant the head of the profession in the entire world. The play deals with actual theatrical experiences, one fact which perhaps explains its perennial popularity, for, as in the case of Zaza and several other plays that might be mentioned, plays that actually deal with theatrical experiences, seem to have a wide vogue.

The scene is laid in London. Garrick is at the height of his fame and popularity, and all England admires him as a wit and social favourite as well as an artist. A society lady falls in love with him, there is cause for secrecy, and the complications rapidly develop.

The actor is in the midst of his famous run as Hamlet, which, as a matter of history, held the boards longer than most runs since his day. It is necessary that he preserve the mask of comedy, although tragedy lies just below the surface, and thus, while the play is properly termed a comedy, there are a few terse moments in which the leading actors are given scope for real art.

Mr. Clifton Mallory, who took the part of David Garrick, is not unknown to Ottawa audiences, and upheld his past reputation as a careful and conscientious artist. Miss Leese, as Mrs. Samuel Smith, Miss Moore, as Aramita Brown, and Miss Brower, as Ada, took the feminine parts with fidelity. Arthur Bell, who played the part of Simon Ingot, loaned excellent support to the star.

A Service On Good Friday

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association of Peterborough, held yesterday, it was decided to hold a public service on Good Friday, as usual. Owing to the lateness of the season it will not be possible to utilize Central Park for this purpose but thanks to the kindness of the military authorities it is altogether likely that the service will be held in the armouries at 3 o'clock on Good Friday afternoon.

Further announcements will be made later as to the speakers, etc.

NEW MASCOT AT FIRE HALL

Davey, the late mascot of the Fire Brigade, has now been replaced.

Mr. George Hatton, reading in the Examiner a week or so ago the obituary of Davey, kindly presented the men this morning with a valuable spaniel dog, by name Jerry. Jerry is eight months old and a well bred animal. He is already adapting himself to his new surroundings, and appears to take kindly to the men, who it is needless to say, are very pleased with the gift.

Visit the New Peterborough Millinery Showrooms, and inspect the display of fashionable Trimmed Hats for spring wear; upstairs in old T. A. S. Rooms. Entrance, 495 George Street.

PRESENTATION TO MR. J. THOMPSON

Mr. John Thompson, who for the past seven years has been foreman of the Review job department, and who is leaving to take the position of foreman of the Lowe-Martin Company, was the recipient of an eulogistic address and a three-piece silver service by his fellow employees and the staff of the editorial and business staff on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Thompson made a suitable reply, in which he thanked his friends for their kindness.

ENTERS SUIT FOR $20,000

MONTREAL, April 2nd.—Claiming that he was dismissed by the Federal Government through a false story circulated about him, George Bourgoin, former lock keeper at the Lachine Canal, this morning entered suit for $20,000 against Ephrempilon, whom he alleges told Hon. Mr. Cochrane he had taken part in the last elections.

CONGREGATIONAL RALLY AT ST. JAMES' CHURCH

There was a good attendance at the congregational rally of St. James' Methodist church last evening. Supper was served by the Ladies' Aid from six until eight o'clock, afterwards the gathering adjourned to the auditorium of the church where a short programme was rendered. A duet by Mrs. Rohill and Mr. Pollard was one of the features of the programme, as also was a solo by Mrs. Leader.

The reports of the different organizations of the church were also received, and as a whole they showed very encouraging progress. The funds collected by the Ladies' Aid during the year amounted to $750. The report of the Trustee Board showed that substantial progress had been made throughout the year in the way of reducing the debt of the church.

Rev. J. G. Brown presided and a very successful meeting was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

Babies Have Itching Eczema

Itching, almost constant and well-nigh unbearable itching, is the marked symptom of eczema. The direct cause is usually friction or irritation of the skin. In babies the trouble often arises from infrequent changing of napkins.

Until you have used Dr. Chase's Ointment in a case of eczema you can scarcely realize the relief which this treatment affords. Gradually the sores are cleaned up and healed, and a new, smooth skin replaces that which has been irritated and diseased.

By keeping Dr. Chase's Ointment at hand, along with the bath soap and using it whenever chafing or irritation appears you can keep baby's skin in perfect condition, save him much suffering and yourself much anxiety.

STORY EXAGGERATED

WOODSTOCK, ONT., APRIL 2.—Principal A. T. MacNeill this morning said the story of the ill treatment of a student at Woodstock College, had been grossly exaggerated. There will be an official inquiry before the local Magistrate to-night.

WEDDING BELLS

McKEE—NICHOLS.

There was a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, March 20th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nichols, when their daughter Evylina, was joined to Mr. Robert McKee of Warkworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. George McKee of Smith. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Bonner. The bride entered the room, leaning on the arm of her father, while the wedding march was played by Mrs. A. Nichols, sister-in-law of the bride. The bride was charmingly dressed in blue Trenaise cloth and wreath of forget-me-nots. After the ceremony a supper was partaken of and a delightful evening was spent. The young couple received many useful presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain. Mr. and Mrs. McKee left on the afternoon train for Warkworth. The bride's going-away dress was a brown Gobelet cloth and hat to match.

POSTPONEMENT

The special meetings which were to have been held in Bethany Tabernacle this week, have been postponed on account of the Rev. Mr. Chandler being called by the Board of the Christian and Missionary Alliance to attend their Easter Convention in New York city. Mr. Chandler will be in the Tabernacle on Monday evening, April the 8th and each afternoon and evening next week.

MAPLE SUGAR SEASON IS ON

Last night's snow was what is called "sugar snow," an animal accompaniment of the sugar-making season, which, this year, comes rather late — it is said by farmers, about two weeks later than two years ago. The season has begun late and will probably be short There has been some sugar and syrup made. Maple syrup has been offered at some residences by farmers at the figure of $1.50 per gallon, and it is probable that local prices will rule high, so that householders need not expect that by holding off they will get lower figures, for, owing to the shortness of the season the supply will possibly be short, and supply and demand are a usual factor in fixing prices. Any way there is evidence that Spring is coming at last, if deliberately.

USED GROSSLY INDECENT LANGUAGE ON THE HIGHWAYS OF DOURO

Residents of Douro Appear in County Court on Trivial Matter--Passage At Arms Between the Contesting Lawyers—Was Fined One Dollar.

When the County Court, with Magistrate Edmison presiding, convened yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the purpose of dealing with the case of one Michael Leahy, who was charged with having used abusive language towards James Crowley on the highways of Douro on March 26th, three of the principal figures in the case were missing. They were Michael Leahy, the defendant, Thomas Leahy, one of the star witnesses, and Mr. F. D. Kerr, counsel for the defence. The names of the first two were called three times by High County Constable Cochrane, but the only response was the silence of the court.

The court sat in silence for ten minutes and just as Magistrate Edmison was preparing to issue an ultimatum in the form of a fine, Prosecuting Attorney Mr. W. H. Moore chanced to look out of the window and observed the missing trio in the act of ascending the hill leading to the court house. At 3.15 they entered the room, and the case proceeded.

Mr. Moore appeared on behalf of the complainant, James Crowley and Mr. F. D. Kerr acted for the defendant Michael Leahy.

How Trouble Commenced.

In the witness box, the complainant stated that he was a resident of Douro and that on March 26th he had met defendant on the road .Witness was on foot and the two Leahy brothers were in charge of a team. When the latter came up, witness called for half of the road, and in reply was told to get off the road as the deep snow made it difficult for the team to accede half of the road. Witness did as he was directed, and when the Leahy boys drove up alongside of him he made a remark to Michael Leahy which the latter resented and some foul language passed between them. The conversation then reverted to hired men and Michael Leahy accused Crowley of hurting his (Leahy's) reputation by repeating slanderous stories about him, to hired men whom he had employed on different occasions. Witness then jumped on the sleigh and rode down the road a short distance with the defendant. On parting witness made the statement that he would have Michael Leahy pulled for using abusive language toward him.

Legal Cross-Fires.

Witness was then taken in hand and cross-questioned by Mr. Kerr, who succeeded in eliciting the fact that Crowley had also been guilty of making some offensive remarks. Mr. Kerr referred to a former occasion in which the defendant and complainant were known to be at loggerheads.

Mr. Moore took exception to this on the ground that it was not evidence.

"I must remind my learned friend, that he must observe the practice of the court and not interrupt when the witness is being cross-examined," said the counsel for defence.

Mr. Kerr then went on to question Crowley regarding a fracas which occurred at Long's hotel three weeks ago and in which witness was alleged to have taken a prominent part, but he was again interrupted by Mr. Moore, who objected to the evidence.

"If my learned friend does not know the rules of the court in respect to cross-examination, he should learn them," interposed Mr. Kerr.

"I don't require to learn the rules of the court. I submit that the actions of the counsel conducting the cross-examination are not consistent,' retorted Mr. Moore.

"You are a bit of a fighting man are you not?" queried Mr. Kerr of the witness.

"When a fellow comes at me, I can go some," replied Crowley.

Again Mr. Moore objected.

"If my learned friend will go into the witness box, I will be pleased to learn what his fighting propensities are." offered the counsel for the defence.

"I would suggest that my learned friend confine himself to the evidence and leave jokes aside. We will get on faster," said Mr. Moore.

"I would like to ask the Magistrate if I have got to submit to the impertinence of Mr. Moore." queried Mr. Kerr.

Orangemen Fled.

Michael Leahy was the next witness called. He stated that when Crowley got onto the sleigh he made the remark that he would know how far his oath would go within a few days. "I'll have you pulled," was Crowley's parting shot. "You can pull away," replied witness. He then reviewed the circumstances of a fight in which Crowley figured at Long's hotel a few weeks ago. Crowley put his man away on this occasion and also put fear into the hearts of three Orangemen who appeared on the scene.

"He not only put away the south of Ireland, but the north of Ireland, too" commented Mr. Kerr.

Mr. Moore took the witness in hand and elicited the fact that witness had used insulting language towards the complainant. He did not recollect the suggestion offered by his brother to apologise for the manner in which he had addressed Crowley.

Michael Leahy's brother, Thomas, was next called into the witness box and related the event of the day in question. The trouble commenced when Crowley made the remark to Michael, "You have wintered it —— poor, you're looking thin." Michael made an offensive remark in reply. The remainder of the evidence offered by the witness practically corroborated that of the former witness. Thomas had played the part of peacemaker, but in this he was unsuccessful.

This practically concluded the case.

Case Was a Farce.

Mr. Kerr in summing up the case, said that it was regrettable that the case had been dragged into the court. It was evident that the men were not on friendly terms prior to this occasion and that Crowley had made use of the court in a farcical way for the purpose of punishing the man whom he himself had insulted.

"Crowley is a self-willed man, who is half a size larger than the ordinary man and he wants his own way."

"I'm not inclined to believe the evidence of either parties and I submit the right to treat the evidence with suspicion,' 'said the Magistrate.

Mr. Moore offered that the evidence went to show that the reference made by Crowley in respect to the manner in which Michael Leahy had wintered, would not alone, have caused the trouble, had not Leahy followed it up with the insulting remarks, which the evidence showed that he had done. The specific issue in which the charge was laid had been proven, if the prosecution had proved that grossly indecent language had been used on the highway of Douro.

Mr. Kerr suggested that peace be restored between the two parties by calling upon them to apologise to one another in the court room.

In this the Magistrate acquiesced. Mr. Moore did not object to the procedure, but he intimated that the costs of the prosecution would have to be met. He therefore asked the Magistrate to give judgment.

This he did by imposing the nominal fine of one dollar. The costs of the court amounted in all to $5.30 to be equally divided between the two parties.

CAUSES MUCH DISEASE

Advice About Stomach Troubles and How to Relieve Them.

Do not neglect indigestion which may lead to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent physician once said that ninety-five per cent. of all the ills of the human body have their origin in a disordered stomach.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be among the most dependable remedies known for the relief of indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is very prompt. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time tends to bring about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets help to insure healthy appetite, to aid digestion, and thus promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store, —The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

INTERESTING LECTURE BY MR. J. B. COLLINS

Members of Astronomical Society Are Rendered Much Appreciated Discourse on "Our Earth"

At the regular meeting of the Peterborough centre of the R.A.S.C. held last evening in the Chemical Laboratory of the Collegiate Institute, an interesting lecture on "Our Earth" was given by Mr. J. R. Collins, of Toronto. Mr. Collins is a well-known astronomer. He was a member of the Government eclipse expedition to Labrador in 1905 and is the inventor of a new kind of telescope, giving the advantages of a large telescope in miniature size. His lecture was, therefore, an interesting one, and was very much appreciated by a large audience.

At the outset he spoke of a new star that had only recently been discovered, and for the benefit of those who used the telescope he showed its position by means of a blackboard.

During the course of his lecture he explained that the earth was eight thousand miles in diameter, and that the curvature of the planet was eight inches to the mile, therefore if an object eight inches high were placed on the earth a mile away, on a level plain, unless brilliantly illuminated, it would be lost to view.

Some lantern slides were then exhibited of the solar system, where the position and relative size of the earth could be distinguished. "Were we at the south pole at the time of the equinoxes, March 22nd and 23rd," he said, "we should see the sun just on the horizon." More slides were shown each of which was fully explained by the lecturer.

A BUSY SESSION

The regular meeting of the City Council was held last night with Mayor Bradburn presiding and all the members present.

A deputation consisting of Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Mrs. Jas. Reandry and Mrs. R. W. Travers representing the Women's Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association, was heard in regard to the "Made-in-Peterborough" Exhibition, preparations for which are already under way. A special report of this part of the meeting has been written specially for the Examiner by "Roy Gilray," and appears in another column.

Mrs. Ferguson, Simcoe street., who was injured in a fall last winter, asked the Council to reconsider their recent decision. The Legal Committee had decided that the city was not liable.

Moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the matter be referred back to the Legal Committee.

Communications.

The following communications were received and disposed of:

From Thomas Dark, Secretary of the Trades and Labour Council, emphasising the desirability of having all the streets in the city named, and stating that the Labour Council heartily approved of this idea.—Referred to Board of Works.

Statement of Roll.

To total amt. on roll	$222,218.01

Balance	$ 9,451.75

Amount collected and deposited during March, $2,133.17.—Received.

From W. D. Lighthall, Secretary-Treasurer of the Union of Canadian municipalities, asking Peterborough to send delegates to the 12th annual convention of the Union, to be held on Aug. 27th, 28th and 29th at Windsor, Ont.—Referred to Finance Committee.

Governor-General Next Year.

From Lieut.-Col. Lowther, military secretary to the Governor-General, acknowledging the city's invitation to visit Peterborough this year, and stating that the time of their Royal Highness is made up to the end of November, and suggesting that it might be better to postpone the engagement until next summer.—Received.

From Miss Helen Denison, Secretary of the Protestant Home, regarding a sidewalk on Anson street, from Water street, to the Protestant Home This was promised last fall, and its completion at an early date is desired, as the opening of the new Home may take place on April 23rd. —Referred to Board of Works.

City Auditor's Report.

A communication was received from Mr. Jas. A. Hall, submitting his report as auditor of the accounts of the city for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1911, as follows.

The books and vouchers of the City Clerk, the City Treasurer, the Treasurer of the Commissioners of the City Trust, the treasurer of the Board of Education, of the Nicholls Hospital Trust, of the Public Library Board, of the Central Charity Board, the Assessment and Collectors' rolls of 1910 and 1911, and the arrears of taxes, have been examined and checked, and I have much pleasure in reporting that all these departments are well and accurately kept.

The bonds of the various officials of the Corporation are in proper form, and for the required amounts. —Received.

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, that the Auditors' report be printed, and 200 copies secured—Carried.

The Whistling of Trains.

From Mr. N. T. LePlante and other residents of the South End, asking that a by-law be passed to prevent the whistling of locomotives within the city limits.

Ald. Gillespie—"I thought that the question was settled several years ago.

Mayor Bradburn—"There was an understanding that the engineers were to try and cause as little annoyance as possible.

Ald. Buller asked if the city would be protected in case there was an accident through whistling being discontinued. He considered that the city should be safeguarded.

Ald. Gordon stated that the residents living in the vicinity of the railroads had a grievance and he moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that a by-law be prepared providing for some means of preventing the whistling of locomotives in the city. The matter could then be threshed out in the discussion.

Ald. Duffus stated that he thought there should be an effort to have the whistling stopped. The question was brought up several years ago, and the City Solicitor who lived in the neighbourhood of the tracks, stated that they had the power to pass a by-law. He was very much opposed to the whistling.

City Not Responsible.

Ald. Buller stated that if the whistling was to be stopped there would have to be some sort of an alarm system provided.

Mayor Bradburn said the G. T. R. Company had not lived up to their agreement. If a by-law were to be passed it must be assured that the city would not be held responsible for any accidents.

The motion carried, and the question will be fully discussed when the by-law is prepared.

Removal of Poles.

From W. J. Duckworth, superintendent of the G. N. W. Telegraph Company, stating that the Company will undertake to remove the poles on George street, and bring the wires in cables from the rear of their office, if the city will agree to pay the sum of $350, which will be the actual cost of making the change.

Moved by Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the offer to remove fourteen poles on the west side of George street be accepted.

Ald Buller stated this was a bargain for the city. When the matter was first brought up, several years ago, the Company wanted $1,100 to remove the poles. They reduced this to $700 and finally to $350. They did not need to move them unless they wished as they had a Dominion franchise.

Mayor Bradburn — "For years we have been dickering for this. The poles referred to are the high ones on the West side of George street, between Charlotte and Brock Sts.

Ald. Anderson—"How many lines are left on the street.

Mayor Bradburn—"Only those of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. The Telephone Company was using only one wire, I understand, and the rest were dead."

W. W. Pope of the Hydro-Electric Commission, wrote that an engineer would be sent to Peterborough shortly in connection with Hydro-Electric matters.

Finance Committee.

The following report from the Finance Committee was passed, as follows:

On the motion of Ald. Anderson, seconded by Ald. Morgan—

That this Committee be given authority to sell debentures that may be issued during this year.

That an offer from the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., to clean the adding machine as often as directed for $2.25 each trip, be accepted. The directions to be given when needed by the Chairman of the Committee, and the City Treasurer.

Temporary Dumping Ground.

Moved by Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Gillespie that Ald. Duncan and Ald. Brown be appointed to make enquiries respecting land suitable for a refuse ground and report to the Council and that they be authorized to make arrangements for the temporary use of ground for that purpose.

Ald. Johnston and Ald. Graham moved the reading of a Firemen's Benefit Fund, which was finally passed.

Curve at Smith Street.

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Graham that the matter of the Street Railway curve at Smith street and George street corner, and the improving of conditions there be referred to the Board of Works, and that the latter take it up with the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. —Carried.

Moved by Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that the request of Mr. G. W. Mulligan, to be permitted to hold religious meetings on Central Park on Sunday evenings be granted. —Carried.

To Settle With Rutherford Bros.

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that Ald. Duncan be authorized to settle with Rutherford Bros. their claim in connection with their Public Library contract.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, that the question of the annexation of that part of the township of North Monaghan on a line west of Mr. Hutton's property from Smith street to the Johnston neighbourhood and east to the river be referred to the Local committee and report.—Carried.

Ald. Gordon moved, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, that the [illegible] of James.—Carried.

Stainer's Crucifixion At All Saints'

Last night All Saints' Church was well filled by an audience that listened to a very satisfactory and becoming presentation of Sir John Stainer's "Crucifixion." It was put on by the combined choirs of St. John's and All Saints, numbering about seventy, under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey. The oratorio was preceded by a shortened form of Evening Prayer, a fitting introduction to the deeply devotional and solemn character of the presentation. These conditions were met in the excellent rendition of the beautiful music by the large capable and well-trained chorus. The incidental solos received full justice. The tenor solos were taken by Mr. George Chandler, and Mr. George Brown, and the base solos by Mr. C. A. Spence and Mr. F. Barling. The entire work of the chorus was satisfactory and developed creditably the solemnly dramatic character of the composition, so well adapted to the spirit of Holy Week.

The oratorio will be presented by the same combined choirs, at St. John's, on Good Friday night, April 5th.

THE FUNERAL OF MR. W. J. TULLY.

In publishing the notice of the funeral of the late Mr. W. J. Tully of Smith yesterday an error occurred in stating the date of the funeral as Tuesday at 2 o'clock. It should have been given that the funeral would take place from the family residence, lot 4, con. 2, Smith, on Wednesday, the 3rd, at 2 o'clock.

AGGREGATE SNOW FALL OF EIGHT FEET FOOR

Some inquiries have been made as to the total amount of snow that has fallen this winter, and a little research has brought to light the following figures. The first snow (sufficient to whiten the ground) came on October 6th.

	Inches
October	½
November	6¾
December	11½
January	37
February	26
March	23
Total	104½

The snowfall was measured in each case shortly after its descent, and when possible before it had drifted, and become more solidified. Some of these falls of snow melted shortly after they arrived.

The greatest depth on the ground at any time was about the middle of March, when snow covered the ground to the depth of 40 inches on the level in sheltered and undrifted locations. —W.P.

LEAVING FOR NEW ONTARIO.

Mr. Fred Stanley, caretaker of the Peterborough Club, and Mr. William Stanley, steward, are leaving for New Ontario in the course of a few days. In severing their connections with the Club, they carry with them the best wishes of the members, who as a body, are unanimous in their commendation of the manner in which the Stanley brothers have performed their respective duties.

The Messrs. Stanley brothers have decided to start life afresh and with this object in view, have selected New Ontario as the scene of their labours. They have secured nine hundred acres of virgin soil in Ontario's promised land and with lots of ambition and indomitable energy, their success is assured. Ernest Stanley, son of Mr. William Stanley will also accompany the party and at a later date they will be joined by the remainder of the family.

Mr. Kent of Ottawa, and Mr. Sproat of this city have succeeded the Stanley brothers as caretaker and steward of the Peterborough Club respectively.

"In the Grip of Alcohol"

By Pathe Freres

This is the greatest moral Drama ever made by any film manufacturer. It throbs and pulsates with human interest, it paints the terrors of the fatal downward path, showing no brutality—but just the awful sad downfall of one of God's creatures through the drink evil. It tells the story of eight years of a man's life, eight years of a slow death for him, eight years of misery for his devoted wife, eight years of hardship for his little sick child, all because of the great evil. It is a moral lesson which should be seen by everyone, young and old alike. To-day and To-morrow only.

BIG SURPLUS IS SHOWN

NEEDS OF THE NAVY

London, April 3.—The British budget for the financial year, 1912-13, was introduced by David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer in the House of Commons yesterday before the thinnest attendance on such an occasion for fifteen years.

The Chancellor was in the comfortable position of having a nest egg of $32,795,000 remaining from the year just closed. This, he said, was the largest realized surplus on record.

The loss to revenue from the coal strike has been upwards of $2,000,000.

The estimated expenditure for the financial year, 1912-13, amounts to $634,635,000, an increase of $28,035,000 over that of the past year.

This is mainly due to the compulsory insurance act for workmen and the acquisition of all the telephones in the United Kingdom by the state.

From the good trade outlook, the Chancellor of the Exchequer considered that it was safe to estimate an expansion of most of the revenue-producing taxes. He announced therefore that, although there would be no reduction of taxation, no new taxes will be imposed.

The revenue for the coming year he estimated at $638,345,660, leaving a surplus of $1,350,000.

Referring to the increase of $28,000,000 in the expenditure of the fiscal year of 1912-13, the Chancellor said he had been disappointed in his anticipation of a big reduction in naval expenditure.

He was afraid the prospect of a decrease in that direction was not bright. He, however, took a rosy view of trade prospects. He said:

"Trade throughout the world appears to be in an exceptionally healthy condition. The conditions in the United States are stronger than they have been for years, and instead of the devastating cyclone we had a few years ago from across the Atlantic, we are likely now to have a steady trade wind. There is only one disturbing factor, the Presidential election, but I do not think that is going to have a very serious effect on the trade of the United States. That is full of hope for our trade here."

Teamsters Strike Averted.

Toronto, April 3.—Thanks to a good measure of common sense exercised by the three Toronto cartage companies, who teamsters went on strike yesterday morning, a serious tie-up in the delivery of fright from the railroads has been averted.

After a conference between the Dominion Transport Co. and the committee appointed by the 300 striking teamsters of that firm, the men decided to accept the offer made by the company and agreed to return to work this morning. The transport company refused to make public the wage settled on, as all the little details have not been completed.

Mrs. Pankhurst To Be Released.

London, April 3.—The Home Secretary yesterday directed that Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes, who on March 2 was sentenced to two months' imprisonment for window-smashing, shall be released on April 4. The remainder of her sentence has been remitted to enable her to prepare her defence in the conspiracy charge.

Mrs. Pankhurst is jointly charged with Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence with conspiracy and inciting to commit malicious damage to property. This case has several times been remanded at the Old Bailey sessions.

Guelph to Have Real Hospital.

Guelph, April 3.—Though the General Hospital has been improved recently, in accordance with the Government inspector's orders, by erecting a nurses' home and an isolation hospital, it does not meet with his approval, and he has intimated that the Government grant may yet be withheld if the desired improvements are not made. The directors of the hospital have asked the City Council to submit a bylaw for $20,000 to the people to make the hospital second to none in any respect.

Five Men Escape.

St. Louis, Mo., April 3.—Five men, one a confessed murderer, and four charged with burglary and robbery, escaped from Judge Taylor's court room while court was in session on the third floor of the municipal courts building yesterday.

They were in a cage adjoining the court-room and crawled through a small door in the rear of the cage to the window sill, then walked along a narrow ledge to another window, 20 feet away, re-entered the building and escaped.

Fodder Famine In Kent.

Chatham, April 3—Farmers throughout Kent are becoming greatly worried over the fodder famine existing here. Many of them have to buy corn and hay to keep their stock alive, and it is proving very expensive. Corn is now selling at as high as 80 cents a bushel, and bran is up to $1.30 a hundred. Stock in many parts of the country is suffering for want of feed.

REJECT THE PROPOSAL

Conservatives Defeat Mr. Rowell's Civil Service Amendment

YESTERDAY IN LEGISLATURE

Toronto, April 3.—Lift the civil service out of politics, eliminate the spoils and patronage system, make appointments and promotions by competitive examinations, and create a non-partisan civil service commission. These were the proposals N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, advocated in a motion before the Legislature yesterday. His motion was lost on division. The Premier introduced an amendment to the effect that the House congratulate the people on the present administration of the civil service and the absence of the spoils system, and it was carried.

Mr. Rowell delivered a splendid oration in support of his idea, but after he retired the Premier gave his views on the matter and introduced an amendment which looked rosy to the Government supporters.

Dr. Jamieson, South Grey, referred his bill respecting osteopaths to a special committee. The bill requires, among other things, that all osteopaths who have been practicing less than five years will require to submit to an examination by the Ontario Medical Council. The special committee consists of Jamieson, Reaume, Pyne, McQueen, Thompson (Simcoe), Marshall, Musgrove, Johnson, Bowman, McNaught, McPherson, Sinclair.

"It is a well understood maxim of civil polity," said Hon. Dr. Pyne, in moving for the second reading of the bill respecting the compulsory school attendance of adolescents, "that in countries were the people have a part in the function of government the electorate should possess at least the essentials of an education." The Minister then told of how some countries like Germany and Switzerland have compulsory school attendance laws under varying conditions up till the 17th or 18th year. In Ontario, however, this law will be optional, each municipality voting on the proposition for itself.

N. W. Rowell thought the compulsory plan would be best, but admitted that the optional plan might be preferable till the system gets in working order.

N. W. Rowell criticized the bill to amend the Power Commission Act when it came up for second reading at last night's session of the Legislature. Mr. Rowell objected to the principle of the bill, giving added powers to the commission. He thought the powers of the municipalities ought to be increased and not curtailed, as the present bill proposes to do. Mr. Rowell suggested the appointment of a public service commission to deal with such matters. He also declared in favor of municipalities having direct representation on the commission and a voice in its management.

W. K. McNaught drew attention to the meeting that was held at the Parliament Building a week or two ago, when malcontents from one end of the province to the other stated their objections to the Hydro-Electric Commission, regarding the giving of added powers to the commission.

"At these meetings," said Mr. McNaught, "there was not a single municipality represented. The malcontents were all corporations, and the leader of the Opposition in a very attenuated way to-night echoes their sentiments."

"I wasn't at these meetings," interrupted Mr. Rowell.

"Well, you must have read about them," replied Mr. McNaught.

Sir James Whitney introduced an amendment to the Power Commission Act to provide, if necessary, for the remuneration of members of the commission other than the chairman, in case members of the commission at some future time may not be members of the House.

Honor For Boy Scouts.

Ottawa, April 3.—The Duke of Connaught, chief of the Canadian Boy Scouts, has approved the following awards:

Harold Whitcomb, Smith's Falls, and Gordon Scott, Niagara Falls, silver medals for saving human life; Victor Garnham, Tillsonburg, gilt medal for merit; G. Bowman, Wingham; Charles Heintzman, Toronto, and Alvin Gray, Millbrook, scrolls of honor signed by His Royal Highness.

Heintzman, a member of Toronto troop, No. 20, rescued Willie Jackson in the Don River on August 23 last. The lad had gone beyond his depth while bathing.

Gray pulled a fellow scout, K. H. Boyle, out of a deep hole in the river at Millbrook.

Lt.-Col. William White Dead.

Ottawa, April 3.—Lt.-Col. William White, C.M.G., one of Ottawa's respected citizens, died yesterday.

In 1899 he succeeded W. H. Griffin, C.M.G., as Deputy Postmaster-General of Canada. This office he held until June, 1897, when he retired from the Department, when he was appointed Canadian delegate to the postal union at Washington.

He commanded the Canadian rifle team which went to Wimbledon in 1894 and won the Kolapore Cups, and was also chairman of the executive committee of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association from 1896 to 1899.

CHARGES OF ASSAULT

Woodstock Professors Are Accused of Administering Too Severe Punishment to Boy

HE HAD MISBEHAVED

Woodstock, April 3.—At 7.30 o'clock last night, the three Woodstock College professors, Messrs. R. A. F. McDonald, Leon McCrimmon and Vincent Price, who it was alleged administered a severe thrashing to Vincent Hopwood, a student at that institution, were charged in the local police court with assault. The accused professors were represented in court by G. G. McKay, K.C., of this city, while Crown Attorney Ball prosecuted.

Hopwood stated that at about 11.30 p.m. on March 22, Prof. McDonald came to his room and told him to follow him. Witness did so, and was taken to the gymnasium, followed by Prof. McCrimmon and Prof. Price. Hopwood was ordered to take off his bath robe and to lie across the vaulting horse. He refused, but the three masters forced him to do so. McCrimmon and Price held him and McDonald applied ten cracks with a strap over his bare back, leaving long welts. Witness did not think he had been cut. McDonald told him he would get twice as much next time.

Hopwood admitted that he had been a bad boy. He had been punished by other teachers several times and had been warned that his next offence meant severe punishment. Witness stated that he had attended other schools and had received similar punishment for disobedience, although it had never been on bare skin.

Dr. Walford, who examined the boy the day after the punishment, stated there were several marks on the student's back about 12 or 14 inches long. The skin was not cut. Dr. Walford thought that the beating was most severe.

The only witness called for the defence was Prof. R. A. F. McDonald, who administered the punishment. He stated that, previous to the whipping, he had repeatedly warned Hopwood regarding his disobedience. Witness did not feel that the whipping had been too severe.

McDonald stated that, although he had not secure special instructions from the principal in this case, the masters were generally trusted regarding the punishment to be administered.

After the hearing of the evidence, Magistrate Ball reserved judgment until Thursday next.

Negress Slew Seventeen.

Lafayette, Ind., April 3.—Clementine Barnabet, a "half-blood" negress, told a story here yesterday that the police authorities say they accept as clearing the mystery veiling the killing of twenty negroes in southwest Louisiana, and which, it is said, gave clues that will fix the guilt for fifteen other night assassinations of blacks in Louisiana and Texas.

From Clementine's story it appears she led a mysterious negro cult, the members of which performed the rites of "human sacrifice."

The negress declared she killed seventeen of the victims with her own hands.

David Dexter Dead.

Hamilton, April 3.—David Dexter, president and managing director of the Federal Life Assurance Co., died at his late residence in Hamilton yesterday afternoon. Mr. Dexter, who was 67 years of age, had been ill and confined to his bed for the past week. He was one of the founders of the Federal Life Assurance Co. and occupied the position of managing director since the company's inception. He was a past president of the Life Officers' Association of Canada. At one time he was a member of the Hamilton School Board. His activities were many and varied.

Thames River In Flood.

Chatham, Ont., April 3.—The Thames is still rising and now stands fifteen feet above normal level. The country is inundated above and below Chatham, and in many down-the-river localities the farmers go about their farms in boats and on rafts.

Monday night an ice jam formed opposite Tecumseh Park and broke gas and water mains crossing the river. On account of the torrent, workmen cannot fix them, and the escaping natural gas is boiling up through the water.

Lenses do not wear out, but eyes do. Every part of the body changes with advancing years, and our eyes in common with the rest of our physical being show the effects of age. We must therefore meet the changed conditions of the eyes. The glasses that you bought ten, or even three years ago, are not giving your eyes the proper assistance. As the eyes are wearing out year by year, your lenses should be made stronger or weaker to correspond to your failing vision.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Orlando was in that about of natural forces, but he is not in this stillness. They look aloft, but the heavens are void. Emptiness is where life was. Oswald begins to sway, and Doris, remembering him now and him only, has thrown her strong young arm about him, when—What is this sound they hear high up, high up, in the rapidly clearing vault of the heavens. A throb—a steady pant—drawing near and yet nearer,—entering the circlet of great branches over their heads—descending, slowly descending,—till they catch another glimpse of those hazy outlines which had no sooner taken shape than the car disappeared from their sight within the elliptical wall open to receive it.

It had survived the gale! It has re-entered its haven, and that, too without colliding with aught around or any shock to those within, just as Orlando had promised; and the world was henceforth his! Hail to Orlando Brotherson!

Oswald could hardly restrain his mad joy and enthusiasm. Bounding to the door separating him from this conqueror of almost invincible forces, he pounded it with impatient fist.

"Let me in!" he cried. "You've done the trick, Orlando, you've done the trick."

"Yes, I have satisfied myself," came back in studied self-control from the other side of the door; and with a quick turning of the lock, Orlando stood before them.

They never forgot him as he looked at that moment. He was drenched, battered, palpitating with excitement; but the majesty of success was in his eye and in the bearing of his incomparable figure.

As Oswald bounded towards him, he reached out his hand, but his glance was for Doris.

"Yes," he went on, in tones of suppressed elation, "there's no flaw in my triumph. I have done all that I set out to do. Now—"

Why did he stop and look hurriedly back into the hangar? He had remembered Sweetwater, Sweetwater, who at that moment was stepping carefully from his seat in some remote portion of the car. The triumph was not complete. He had meant—

But there his thought stopped. Nothing of evil, nothing even of regret should mar his great hour. He was a conqueror, and it was for him now to reap the joy of conquest.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

NIGHT.

Three days had passed, and Orlando Brotherson sat in his room at the hotel before a table laden with telegrams, letters and marked newspapers. The news of his achievement had gone abroad, and Derby was, for the moment, the centre of interest for two continents.

His success was an established fact. The second trial which he had made with his car, this time with the whole town gathered together in the streets as witnesses, had proved not only the reliability of its mechanism, but the great advantages which it possessed for a direct flight to any given point. Already he saw Fortune beckoning to him in the shape of an unconditional offer of money from a first-class source; and better still,—for he was a man of untiring energy and boundless resource—that opportunity for new and enlarged effort which comes with the recognition of one's exceptional powers.

All this was his and more. A sweeter hope, a more enduring joy had followed hard upon gratified ambition. Doris had smiled on him;—Doris! She had caught the contagion of the universal enthusiasm and had given him her first ungrudging token of approval. It had altered his whole outlook on life in an instant, for there was an eagerness in this demonstration which proclaimed the relieved heart. She no longer trusted either appearances or her dream. He had succeeded in conquering her doubts by the very force of his personality, and the shadow which had hitherto darkened their intercourse had melted quite away. She was ready to take his word now and Oswald's, after which the rest must follow. Love does not lag far behind an ardent admiration.

Fame! Fortune! Love! What more could a man desire? What more could this man, with his strenuous past and an unlimited capacity for an exchanged future, ask from fate than this? Yes, as he bends over his letters, fingering some, but reading none beyond a line or two, he betrays but a passing elation, and hardly lifts his head when a burst of loud acclaim comes ringing up to his window from some ardent passer-by: "Hurrah for Brotherson! He has put our town on the map!"

Why this despondency? Have those two demons seized him again? It would seem so and with new and overmastering fury. After the hour of triumph comes the hour of reckoning. Orlando Brotherson in his hour of proud attainment stands naked before his own soul's tribunal and the pleader is dumb and the judge inexorable. There is but one Witness to such struggles; but one eye to note the waste and desolation of the devastated soul, when the storm is overpast.

Orlando Brotherson has succumbed; the attack was too keen, his forces too shaken. But as the heavy minutes pass, he slowly re-gathers his strength and rises, in the end, a conqueror. Nevertheless, he knows even in that moment of regained command, that the peace he had thus bought with strain and stress is but momentary; that the battle is on for life; that the days which to other eyes would carry a sense of brilliancy—days teeming with work and outward satisfaction—would hold within their hidden depths a brooding uncertainty which would rob applause of its music and even overshadow the angel face of Love.

He quailed at the prospect, materialist though he was. The days—the interminable days! In his unbroken strength and the glare of the noonday sun, he forgot to take account of the nights looming in black and endless procession before him. It was from the day phantom he shrank, and not from the ghoul which works in the darkness and makes a grave of the heart while happier mortals sleep.

And the former terror seemed formidable enough to him in this hour of startling realization, even if he had freed himself for the nonce from its controlling power. To escape all further contemplation of it he would work. These letters deserved attention. He would carry them to Oswald, and in their consideration find distraction for the rest of the day at least. Oswald was a good fellow. If pleasure were to be gotten from these tokens of goodwill, he should have his share of it. A gleam of Oswald's old spirit in Oswald's once bright eye, would go far to throttling one of those demons whose talons he had just released from his throat, and if Doris responded too, he would deserve his fate, if he did not succeed in gaining that mastery of himself which would make such hours as these but episodes in a life big with interest and potent with great emotions.

Rising with a resolute air, he made a bundle of his papers and, with them in hand, passed out of his room and down the hotel stairs.

A man stood directly in his way, as he made for the front door. It was Mr. Challoner.

Courtesy demanded some show of recognition between them, and Brotherson was passing with his usual cold bow, when a sudden impulse led him to pause and meet the other's eye with the sarcastice remark:

"You have expressed, or so I have been told, some surprise at my choice of mechanician. A man of varied accomplishments, Mr. Challoner, but one for whom I have no further use. If, therefore, you wish to call off your watch-dog, you are at liberty to do so. I hardly think he can be serviceable to either of us much longer."

The older gentleman hesitated, seeking possibly for composure, and when he answered it was not only without irony but with a certain forced respect:

"Mr. Sweetwater has just left for New York, Mr. Brotherson. He will carry with him, no doubt, the full particulars of your great success."

Orlando bowed this time with distinguished grace. Not a flicker of relief had disturbed the calm serenity of his aspect, yet when a moment later, he stepped among his shouting admirers in the street, his air and glance betrayed a bounding joy for which another source must be found than that of gratified pride. A chain had slipped from his spirit, and though the people shrank a little, even while they cheered, it was rather from awe of his bearing and the recognition of that sense of apartness which underlay his smile than from any perception of the man's real nature of the awesome purpose which at that moment exalted it. But had they known—could they have seen into this tumultuous heart—what a silence would have settled upon these noisy streets; and in what terror and soul-confusion would each man have slunk away from his fellows into the quiet and solitude of his own home.

Brotherson himself was not without a sense of the incongruity underlying this ovation; for, as he slowly worked himself along, the brightness of his look became dimmed with a tinge of sarcasm which in its turn gave way to an expression of extreme melancholy—both quite unbefitting the hero of the hour in the first flush of this new-born glory. Had he seen Doris' youthful figure emerge for a moment from the vine-hung porch he was approaching, bringing with it some doubt of the reception awaiting him? Possibly, for he made a stand before he reached the house, and sent his followers back; after which he advanced with an unhurrying step, so that several minutes elapsed before he finally drew up before Mr. Scott's door and entered through the now empty porch into his brother's sitting-room.

He had meant to see Doris first, but his mind had changed. If all passed off well between himself and Oswald, if he found his brother responsive and wide awake to the interests and necessities of the hour, he might forego his interview with her till he felt better prepared to meet it. For call it cowardice or simply a reasonable precaution, any delay seemed preferable to him in his present mood of discouragement, to that final casting of the die upon which hung so many and such tremendous issues. It was the first moment of real halt in his whole tumultuous life! Never, as daring experimentalist or agitator, had he shrunk from danger seen or unseen or from threat uttered or unuttered, as he shrank from this young girl's no; and something of the dread he had felt lest he should encounter her unaware in the hall and so be led on to speak when his own judgment bade him be silent, darkened his features as he entered his brother's presence.

But Oswald was sunk in a bitter reverie of his own, and took no heed of these signs of depression. In the reaction following these days of great excitement, the past had reasserted itself, and all was gloom in his once generous soul. This, Orlando had time to perceive, quick as the change came when his brother really realized who his visitor was. The glad "Orlando!" and the forced smile did not deceive him, and his voice quavered a trifle as he held out his packet with the words:

"I have come to show you what the world says of my invention. We will soon be great men," he emphasized, as Oswald opened the letters. "Money has been offered me and— Read, read-" he urged, with an unconscious dictatorialness, as Oswald paused in his task. "See what the fates have prepared for us; for you shall share all my honours, as you will from this day share my work and enter into all my experiments. Cannot you enthuse a little bit over it? Doesn't the prospect contain any allurement for you? Would you rather stay locked up in this petty town——"

"Yes; or—die. Don't look like that, Orlando. It was a cowardly speech, and I ask your pardon. I'm hardly fit to talk to-day. Edith—"

Orlando frowned.

"Not that name!" he harshly interrupted. "You must not hamper your life with useless memories. That dream of yours may be sacred, but it belongs to the past, and a great reality confronts you. When you have fully recovered your health, your own manhood will rebel at a weakness unworthy one of your name. Rouse yourself, Oswald. Take account of our prospects. Give me your hand and say, 'Life holds something for me yet. I have a brother who needs me if I do not need him. Together, we can prove ourselves invincible and wrench fame and fortune from the world.'"

But the hand he reached for did not rise at his command, though Oswald started erect and faced him with manly earnestness:

"I should have to think long and deeply," he said, "before I took upon myself responsibilities like these. I am broken in mind and heart, Orlando, and must remain so till God mercifully delivers me. I should be a poor assistant to you—a drag, rather than a help. Deeply as I deplore it, hard as it may be for one of your temperament to understand so complete an overthrow, I yet must acknowledge my condition and pray you not to count upon me in any plans you may form. I know how this looks—I know that as your brother and truest admirer, I should respond, and respond strongly, to such overtures as these, but the motive for achievement is gone. She was my all; and while I might work, it would be mechanically. The lift, the elevating thought is gone."

Orlando stood a moment studying his brother's face; then he turned shortly about and walked the length of the room. When he came back, he took up his stand again directly before Oswald, and asked, with a new note in his voice:

"Did you love Edith Challoner so much as that?"

A glance from Oswald's eye, sadder than any fear.

"So that you cannot be reconciled?"

A gesture. Oswald's words were always few.

Orlando's frown deepened.

"Such grief I partly understand," said he. "But time will cure it. Some day another lovely face—"

"We'll not talk of that, Orlando."

"No, we'll not talk of that," acquiesced the inventor, walking away again, this time to the window. "For you there's but one woman—and she's a memory."

"Killed!" broke from his brother's lips. "Slain by her own hand under an impulse of wildness and terror! Can I ever forget that? Do not expect it, Orlando."

"Then you do blame me?" Orlando turned and was looking full at Oswald.

"I blame your unreasonableness and your over-weening pride."

Orlando stood a moment, then moved towards the door. The heaviness of his step smote upon Oswald's ear and caused him to exclaim:

"Forgive me, Orlando." But the other cut him short with an imperative:

"Thanks for your candour! If her spirit is destined to stand like an immovable shadow between you and me, you do right to warn me. But this interview must end all allusion to the subject. I will seek and find another man to share my fortunes (as he said this he approached suddenly, and took his papers from the other's hand); or—" Here he hastily retraced his steps to the door which he softly opened. "Or," he repeated. But though Oswald listened for the rest, it did not come. While he waited, the other had given him one deeply concentrated look and passed out.

No heartfelt understanding was possible between these two men.

No answer, yet she was there. He knew it in every throbbing fibre of his body. She was there and quite aware of his presence; of this he felt sure; yet she did not bid him enter. Should he knock again? Never! but he would not quit the threshold, not if she kept him waiting there for hours. Perhaps she realised this. Perhaps she had meant to open the door to him from the very first, who can tell? What avails is that she did ultimately open it, and he, meeting her soft eye, wished from his very heart that his impulse had led him another way, even if that way had been to the edge of the precipice—and over.

For the face he looked upon was serene, and there was no serenity in him; rather a confusion of unloosed passions fearful of barrier and yearning tumultuously for freedom. But, whatever his revolt, the secret revolt which makes no show in look or movement, he kept his ground and forced a simle of greeting. If her face was quiet, it was also lovely—too lovely, he felt, for a man to leave it, whatever might come of his lingering.

Nothing in all his life had ever affected him like it. For him there was no other woman in the past, the present or the future, and, realizing this—taking in to the full what her affection and her trust might be to him in those fearsome days to come, he so dreaded a rebuff—he, who had been the courted of women and the admired of men ever since he could remember—that he failed to respond to her welcome and the simple congratulations she felt forced to repeat. He could neither speak the commonplace, nor listen to it. This was his crucial hour. He must find support here, or yield hopelessly to the maelstrom in whose whirl he was caught.

She saw his excitement and faltered back a step—a move which she regretted the next minute, for he took advantage of it to enter and close behind him the door which she would never have shut of her own accord. Then he spoke, abruptly, passionately, but in those golden tones which no emotion could render other than alluring:

FIVE DOCTORS GAVE UP ALL HOPE

Said the Worst Site of Kidney Trouble

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HER

MOUNTAIN, Ont., Dec. 14th, 1911.

"For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were frightfully swollen, and the pain was awful. My people thought sometimes I was dead, as I would faint from the agony. Five different doctors attended me, and all said it was kidney trouble and gave me no hope of getting well. A kind neighbor told me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick, who was cured by them.

I took "Fruit-a-tives" and in a short time, I began to feel better, the swelling went down, the pain was easier, and then "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cured me. All my friends [illegible] my recovery as a miracle, and I am unable to praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough."

(Miss) MAGGIE JANNACK.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the most scientific remedy ever discovered for Irritation or Congestion of the Kidneys, frequent Pain In The Back, and Swollen Limbs. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Sore Chest Croup

You often have pains in the muscles, in the side, the back, the neck, or chest. If the inflammation is severe the pain will be intense.

Nothing so quickly cures local inflammation, so thoroughly drives out pain, as "Nerviline," which is without an equal for penetrating, soothing, pain-relieving power.

Nerviline simply can't fail to cure, because it's a perfect antidote for all the pains and aches that invade the family.

Nerviline

"For ten years we have used Polson's Nerviline in our home," writes Mrs. M. E. Graves of Freeport. "For hard, croupy colds there is nothing better. In case of a chill, sudden cold, or neuralgia, Nerviline cures before the trouble gets serious. I have used Nerviline for chronic rheumatism and lame back and find it a wonderful remedy."

All dealers sell Nerviline in large 25c bottles. Get it to-day.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

"SALT RHEUM"

Had It On Hands For Two Years.

ITCHED SO DID NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO.

Tried Three Doctors and Went to Hospital.

All skin diseases are more or less occasioned by a bad state of the blood, and no one can expect to be free from some form or other of this trouble unless the blood is kept in good shape. All skin diseases can be very easily cured by the wonderful blood cleansing properties of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This is due to the unrivalled purifying action of Burdock Blood Bitters on the blood, coupled with the thorough manner in which it cleanses and expels the impurities from the body.

Mrs. Richard Cousins, White Head, Que., writes:—"I have been bothered with salt rheum, on my hands, for two years, and it itched so I did not know what to do. I tried three doctors, and even went to Montreal to the hospital without getting any relief. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got three bottles, and before I had the second used I found a big change, and now to-day I am cured."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about 35 years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

D & A CORSET

Why so many wear this "Marmola Belt"

Quality and Price

D & A Corsets are popular simply because you can buy for a given price a better fitting and wearing D & A than if you bought any other kind.

A perfectly equipped factory in Canada, thus saving all customs charges, and an immense output, are real reasons why.

D & A No. 540, shown in cut, is known as a "Marmola Belt," specially designed for the rather stout. It has a reinforced spoon front, duplex steel bones, stopped top and bottom, six extra wide suspenders, etc., etc., and is sold at first-class stores at only $2.00. Imported corsets of even quality would cost about $3.00.

Every D & A is guaranteed.

Eczema 25 Years Cured by "Cuticura"

Mme. J. B. Renaud Montreal

Leg Like Raw Mountain Knee Down

"I have been troubled by doctors for eczema for twenty-five years. I had a case of eczema on my leg. They did their best, but failed to cure it. My druggist had advised me to have my leg cut off, but I said I would try the Cuticura Remedies first. He said, 'try them if you like, but I do not think they will do you any good.' At this time my leg was painful from the knee down, my skin was like a piece of raw flesh and I had to walk on crutches.

"I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. After the first two treatments the swelling went down and in two months' use of the Cuticura Remedies my leg was cured and the new skin grown on. The doctor could not believe his own eyes when he saw my leg. Everyone had congratulated me and said that he had told me. I am truly grateful for the fact that Cuticura brought and I recommend it most highly as a sure and practical cure for skin troubles." (Signed) Mme. J. B. Renaud, 277 Mentana St., Montreal.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the speediest and most economical treatment for skin and scalp humours, aided by dreadful and disfiguring eczemas. For a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book, send to Potter D. & C. Corp., Dept. 28, Boston, U.S.A.

TO ENCOURAGE IMPROVEMENT

Horticultural societies are brought into existence under and conduct their business and undertakings in accordance with the provisions of an Act of Legislature of Ontario, and are under the direct supervision of the Department of Agriculture, to which annual statements of their transactions are made.

The object of the horticultural societies, as set out in Section 9 of the Act referred to, "Shall be to encourage improvement in horticulture."

(a) By holding meetings for discussion and for hearing lectures on subjects connected with the theory and practice of improved horticulture.

(b) By holding exhibitions and awarding premiums for the production of vegetables, plants, flowers, fruits, trees, and shrubs.

(c) By the distribution of seeds, plants, bulbs, flowers, shrubs, and trees in ways calculated to create an interest in horticulture.

(d) By promoting the circulation of horticultural periodicals.

(e) By encouraging the improvement of home and public grounds, by the planting of trees, shrubs, and flowers, and by otherwise promoting outdoor art and public beauty.

(f) By offering prizes for essays on questions relating to horticulture.

(g) By importing and otherwise procuring and distributing seeds, plants, and shrubs of new and valuable kinds.

The Peterborough Horticultural Society seeks under the above authority and conditions to improve the horticultural surroundings of the "Electric City" and district, and it heartily requests every resident to join in the good work.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do ordinary housework in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blades. I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

DEER AT HAVELOCK

Wandered Into Village and Thought It was Still in the Wilds.

Havelock was visited on Friday afternoon by a large doe, which traversed the village very leisurely and did not seem to be at all strange to its surroundings. The animal entered the Park from the adjacent wood and made its way up the sidewalk on King Street and across the back lots on Alexander Street, until it reached the West-end, when it turned north to the woods again. Another deer, or it may have been the same animal, was seen crossing the ice at Round Lake last week.—Havelock Standard.

An English Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair

In England the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing rats, which is due entirely to this new discovery.

It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

The Americans are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA, and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair dressing. McDermid and Jury, your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into Peterborough, and a large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50c. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

SEEN AND HEARD

His Time Was Occupied.

John Collier, the secretary of New York's board of moving picture censors, said the other day:

"It's no good getting up objectionable picture plays. We never pass them. In fact, we turn them down so invariably that it seems to me the composers of such plays are animated by a spirit of perversity. They remind me of old Uncle Jethro Husk.

"Uncle Jethro sat fishing on the bank of a tiny rivulet when a stranger stopped beside him and said:

"'Is it possible that there are any fish in such a small stream as that?'

"'No, there ain't none,' Uncle Jeth grunted.

"'But you're fishing!'

"'Yep,' said Uncle Jeth.

"'What, then, is your object?'

"'My object,' said Uncle Jeth, 'is to show my wife I ain't got no time to shift the ashes.'"

Hadn't Brought It.

Teacher (disgustedly): My boy, my boy, where is your intuition?

Boy: I ain't got any. I'm only here a few days, and I didn't know what I had to git.

Assault.

Algy: Why do you think she is a window-smashing suffragette?

Cholly: She loked vewy viciously at my monocle!

Liked It at Rest.

He had sung several times during the evening and his friends had murmured brief words of appreciation, which somehow or other did not ring true. On his homeward way he managed to fall in with one of these same friends, and pressed him for a truthful opinion.

"You see," he explained, "I hardly know how to take Miss Kewton's remarks on my singing to-night. She is awfully smart and on thinking it over I'm inclined to——"

"No, really! Why, what did she say?" asked the friend, hopefully.

"Well, she said she'd heard Caruso several times and thought his voice was wonderful, but she was quite certain that mine was better still."

A Matter of Size.

Wife: I want a cap, please, for my husband.

Shopkeeper: Yes, madam. What size does he wear?

Wife: Well, I really forget. His collars are size sixteen, though I expect he'd want about size eighteen or twenty for a cap, wouldn't he?"

On His Way.

A negro came running down the lane as though the Old Boy was after him.

"What are you running for, Mose?" called the colored from the fence.

"I ain't a-runnin' fo'," shouted back Mose. "I'se a-runnin' from!"

Well Styled.

Willis: He calls himself a human dynamo.

Gillis: No wonder; everything he has on is charged.

The Wisdom of Mrs. Wyse.

Mrs. Green: You spoke just now of social tact. Precisely, what do you mean?

Mrs. Wyse: By social tact, I mean getting familiar with all sorts of people without letting them get familiar with you.

Pleasantries of the Sporting House.

Comedian Boarder: I have named this coffee November, my dear madam.

Stern Landlady: Indeed, sir. And why?

Comedian Boarder: Because it is so cold and cloudy.

Stern Landlady: What a brilliant young man! I thought of naming it after you.

Comedian Boarder: And why?

Stern Landlady: Because it is so long before it settles!

A Tip.

Cheer up, girls,
That's Leap Year nearing
Jes' off yonder
By the clearing;
Take a tip
From this suggestion:
Pick your man
And pop the question.

So Illuminating.

"Since Nellie's engagement, how bright and happy she looks."

"Yes; a match does light up a girl's face so."

It is the fashion in New York society this season to give ropes of pearls to brides. Nevertheless, the matrimonial knot is made no more secure by being tied with this kind of a rope.

If new kid gloves are found to fit too snugly on first trying to wear them, lay them on an old handkerchief over a radiator where the heat will affect them, rendering them soft and pliable to the hand. Adjust them while warm, and they will take the shape of the hand readily.

OLD ROME'S POLICEMEN.

Policemen of old Rome were about 10,000. They were kept hard at work, but were well treated. They lived in a palace of stone and marble, with plenty of room and air and had everything in the way to comfort and even many luxuries. Many of the Roman policemen spent some of their time writing on walls. These scribblings, though 1,500 years old, are easily read when uncovered, and they give away many of the inside doings in the old days and show the police were only human. They wrote down all their troubles, and what they thought of certain captains and sergeants. And then there were lots of jokes. Somehow the Roman officers did not do any too much to the band of assassins and murderers which at times kept the people of Rome in terror.—New York Press.

Not That Kind.

"It would save a lot of trouble," said a newspaper man the other day to Representative Slayden, of Texas, after the Democratic caucus on the "Money Trust," "if you would allow us to attend the caucus."

"On the contrary," replied Mr. Slayden, with a twinkle in his eye, "I think it would make a lot of trouble."

"Well, can't you give me an interview on it, now that the fight is over?"

"No," answered Mr. Slayden, "it would be against my principles. I never kiss and tell!"—Los Angeles Times.

Mistaken For a Hotel Firm.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at a tea at the Colony Club in New York, was talking about European society.

"Well-bred Americans," she said, "usually succeed in foreign society, but they are confused at first by the difference in social customs. If they are not careful, they make odd mistakes.

"I heard of an odd mistake that an American artist made in England. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon, desiring to honour his art, sent this artist an invitation to Gordon Castle. But the poor artist, never having heard of the Duke, declined the invitation haughtily. The address to which he sent his declination showed the wherefore of his haughtiness. The address was, 'Messrs. Richmond & Gordon, Gordon Castle Hotel.'"—Washington Star.

Two Views.

Upton Sinclair, at a recent convention of college Socialists in New York said:

"We are told by certain rich and powerful persons that if we help the poor and weak we interfere with the great natural law of evolution. The fittest, we are told, should survive. The unfit shouldn't be helped. They must be allowed to die off in their pestiferous slums and foul, black sweatshops. Otherwise we'll soon have a world made up of unfit wreckage.

"That sounds reasonable at first hearing. But my reply to it is this:

"If you put a bishop and a greenhead fly to live together in a fever-breeding swamp, the bishop will die and the greenhead fly will survive—and that is the survival of the fittest in the strictest scientific sense—the survival of the life best adapted to a swamp environment. But drain your swamp, let the sunlight in, make the place wholesome—and then the bishop will survive and the noisome fly will die."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Earned the Quarter.

Winslow Homer was a great painter who had the unusual good fortune to have his merit appreciated early in life. But no one ever presumed less on a wide reputation. Affectation was a weakness from which his sense of humour saved him.

In his biography, lately written by W. H. Downs, is printed the story of a New York gentleman of wealth and artistic tastes who made the journey to Scarboro, Me., where Homer had his studio, to make the artist's acquaintance.

On his arrival he found the studio door locked; the owner was nowhere to be seen. He wandered about the cliffs for a while, until he met a man in a rough old suit of clothes, rubber boots, and a battered felt hat, who carried a fish pole. He accosted the fisherman thus:

"I say, my man, if you will tell me where I can find Winslow Homer, I have a quarter for you."

"Where's your quarter?" said the fisherman.

He handed it over, and was astounded to hear the quizzical Yankee fisherman say, "I am Winslow Homer."

The sequel of this unusual introduction was that Homer took his new acquaintance back to the studio, entertained him, and before he left sold him a picture.—Youth's Companion.

Cold Weather Amusement.

I love at midnight's holy hour
When I am snug in bed,
To rise, step on a tack, and freeze
My shanks, and bump my head;
And when I've won the telephone,
Learn with a sharp intake
Of breath, that central gave my wire
To someone by mistake.

PRESENTATION TO DEPARTING MEMBERS

The regular monthly meeting of the Belmont Club, held Monday, in the club rooms, developed into a social evening in honour of two of the club's departing members, namely, Mr. Harold Jobbett, who is leaving for the west, and Mr. Will Gallagher, who is also leaving the city shortly.

During the evening's proceedings each of these members was presented with a handsome silver napkin ring, engraved with the crest of the club. A euchre contest was engaged in, the winner being Mr. Will Cowan. After refreshments had been served the remainder of the evening was passed in music and singing, and a very enjoyable time was spent.

The Belmont Club are now making preparations for the approaching summer season. It was learned from good authority this morning that the Club is negotiating for the purchase of a 30-foot war canoe. This craft will hold from 18 to 20 men and will doubtless form a source of pleasure to the members this season.

Extensive improvements are now being made at the Club House, in painting, etc.

NOT ONE WOMAN IN TWENTY HAS A STRONG BACK.

THE KIDNEYS ARE TO BLAME NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN.

Women are doomed to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The poisons that ought to be carried off are sent back into the blood, taking with them a multitude of aches and pains. There is no use of expecting relief until the kidneys are restored to health.

Doan's Kidney Pills are the quickest and most reliable remedy. Mrs. Ed. Baxter, Upham, N.B., writes:—"I take a good deal of pleasure in telling you what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I was troubled with my kidneys for a number of years, and my back was so lame I could not sweep the floor. A friend of mine advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and after using three boxes I am as well as ever. I highly recommend them to anyone suffering from lame back or kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

More Facts About The Passover

Meaning of Symbolism Employed in Jewish Feast Celebrated This Week

TEACHING THE CHILDREN

BUFFALO, April 2.—Pesach, the annual Feast of the Passover or of unleavened bread, is the most ancient feast of the Jewish calendar and carries us back almost 38 centuries into the dim past when Moses' followers, 2,000,000 strong, escaped from Egyptian bondage into the promised land.

"The awakening of spring has its normal appeal and its practical symbolism to every primitive people," said ReRv. Dr. Israel Aaron, rabbi of the Temple, Beth Zion Congregation, when asked to explain the significance of the feast. "The agricultural aspect of the holiday is seen in the phrase, 'that it is to be kept in season of the Month of Ripenings,' when the barley sown in winter has become ripe and when an offering consisting of an omer—one-half gallon—of barley was brought in gratitude to the Giver of all good.

Festival's Significance.

"The historical significance of the festival has over-shadowed its agricultural aspect. As the Feast of Freedom it commemorates the emancipation of Israel from Egyptian bondage and the entrance into the dignity and destiny of national life. It thus marks the birth of the Hebrew people and the first commonwealth. At that time 2,000,000 people walked forth as free citizens without a drop of blood having been spilt or a sword unsheathed.

"The main characteristic of its celebration has always been domestic; in the homes the families and the invited friends gather on teh first and second evenings to recount in song and story and amid appropriate symbolism the deliverance of Israel. The main symbols of this Sedar Service are the roasted lamb bone reminding them of the lamb each Israelite slaughtered as a sacrifice of the Covenant; second, the mazzah or unleavened bread to be eaten during the whole week, recalling not only the hasty preparation with which they absolute reliance upon God and readiness to trust in His leadership of them; and the bitter herbs suggesting vividly the bitter life of their forefathers in Egypt which, even to-day, have not lost their poignant application.

Other Symbols.

"Two other symbols of the table decorations should be noted. The four cups of wine allowed to each one are strong reminders of the four-fold phrase in which God couched the first declaration of independence. There, too, is the cup of wine set out for the Prophet Elijah, who, always present in spirit, brought ever anew the message of undying hope of the Messianic reign of universal justice, freedom, and peace."

Teaching the Young.

An unusual feature of the Jewish ceremony, and one perhaps that has held the people true to their religion, is the custom of allowing the children to enter into discussion of religion. The boy, in fact, is taught to ask questions about passages or ceremonies that he does not understand. On the first two days of the Passover the father dresses in a big white robe, the family gather about him and the youngest boy asks why the day is celebrated. Then they talk it over an deat and drink wine.

The Talmud about 1,600 years ago regulated the Sedar, the banquet which begins the Feast of the Passover, and it particularly exacts that the children shall be the main consideration of it, for it says, "Hasten the meal on the Passover nights so that the little ones shall not fall asleep unfed."

Among the orthodox every adult male sits in a leaning or lounging position on cushions or pillows. The head of the family commences the service or family feast by reciting the sanctification of the festival over a cup of wine. The first part of the "Hegedah" a book which relates the history of thedeliverance from Egypt, is then read and the ceremonies it enjoins are performed. The evening meal is then eaten and finally the second part of the "Hegadah," a collection of hymns praising and glorifying God is chanted.

The Matzoths.

Before beginning with the reading of the "Hegadah" the master of ceremony (the head of the house) breaks off half of the middle one of the three "matzoths" and puts it aside. This is called "afeekomon," a Greek word meaning dessert. This "afeekomon" is usually hidden away by one of the family and not returned to the "seder giver" until some promise of reward is made. In some countries a part of this "afeekomon" hangs on the wall of every Jewish home from "Pesach" to "Pesach."

Feast is Domestic.

"The Feast of the Passover is principally domestic and the ceremonies in the synagogues are only slightly more elaborate than the usual Sabbath service," said Dr. Aaron.

When The Lungs Are Weak

To every person with weak lungs or who has a family history with records of consumption, a cough or cold is a serious matter.

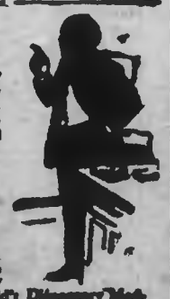
Coughs have a tendency to hang on. They irritate the weakened membranes and prevent healing. There is always the danger that a cold may get a firm foothold and settle on the lungs. It is so easy under these conditions for pneumonia or consumption to develop.

About the surest means of controlling coughs and colds is by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. This treatment loosens the cough, allays the irritation and inflammation and thoroughly overcomes the disagreeable symptoms. The success of this medicine has given rise to many imitations. It is only natural to suppose that the original possesses merit of an unusual degree.

Acid-Throwing by Young Woman

A young woman named Jeannie Mackerracher was charged at Falkirk with having, at Letham Farm, Aairth Parish, assaulted Andrew Johnstone, farmer, and thrown at him a quantity of sulphuric acid, whereby he was severely injured on the right arm and slightly on the face. The accused pleaded guilty. Some years ago she had considered that Johnstone had grieviously wronged her, and that feeling, whether justified or not, had preyed on her mind. She was put on probation for three years.

When You Think



Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no women rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you want a book that tells all about women's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page Illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps.

PROMOTING AVIATION

Graham-White, the Noted Airman to Popularize the Sport in England

In order to encourage the science of aviation in England, Mr. C. Grahame-White has decided to organize weekly flying meetings, exhibitions, and competitions at the London aerodrome, Hendon. With the co-operation and support of the most influential sportsmen and members of Parliament, prizes will be offered to the successful aviators in the respective competitions which are set for Saturdays, while on Sundays there will be exhibitions of the different competing machines.

Many English and French pilots have been engaged to appear at these meetings, and it is hoped that every Saturday some fifteen or twenty aviators will compete. The programme will include such items as weight-lifting, bomb-dropping and ascending and descending competitions. There are also to be out-and-home cross-country handicap races for all classes of aeroplanes over a ten mile course.

EYE-SIGHT AND TYPE

Printed Hebrew Characters Cause Less Strain Than Average Book

Prof. Karl Pearson, the eugenics expert of University College, London, is in charge of an interesting series of experiments now proceeding at the Jewish Free School in London's East End. The professor is inquiring into the question of heredity and environment as it effects the vision of the children. In this connection some interesting experiments were carried out in the school a short time back with the object of determining the causes leading to the prevalence of bad eyesight among the scholars. It has often been asserted that the reading of Hebrew characters had a harmful influence on the vision. This, however, was, according to a physician who periodically examines the eyes of the Free School children, far from being the case, for as a matter of fact it was found that Hebrew type, being square and well-defined, was far easier to read than the type in the average school-books.

FATHER'S TERRIBLE MISTAKE

Young Men Murdered For His Money by His Own Parents

A curious tragedy has been enacted at Parvenehre, a small Russian village near the frontier of Germany, a man having murdered his own son for the purpose of robbery without being aware of his identity. The son arrived home from abroad and demanded hospitality of his parents without disclosing his identity to them. He declared that he had made his fortune and that he had a large sum of money in his possession. His mother and sister resolved to kill him, and got the father to do the deed. When the lodger's back was turned, the father dealt him a blow on the head with a hammer. Death was instantaneous. The body was disposed of. When the father went to the village inn, he was asked about his son, and seeing that he was ignorant of the name of his lodger, he was informed that the young man staying with him was his own son. The authorities discovered the crime and the whole family were arrested.

WIRELESS CLOCK REGULATION

Germany's public clocks, which cause much confusion by faulty regulation, will shortly be placed under strict supervision. The Imperial Post Office is about to attempt the novel method of controlling public clocks throughout the country by means of wireless telegraphy. From one great central clock situated in Fulda—a large German wireless telegraph station—signals will be sent out once every minute which will control these clocks all over the Empire. A tower 320 feet in height is being erected for the wireless aerial, from which the master clock will radiate its signals. By this means there will be less than a thousandth part of a second difference in the time in the various parts of the Kaiser's domain.

Clergyman's Linguistic Feat

Two years ago the Rev. S. L. Brown, formerly curate of Benwell, was appointed warden of the Bangor Diocesan School of Divinity. A Yorkshireman, Mr. Brown did not know a word of Welsh, but his brilliant qualifications and his promise to learn secured him the appointment, in spite of strong protests from patriotic Welsh Churchmen. Mr. Brown has studied Welsh to such purpose that he was selected to preach the Welsh sermon at Newcastle-on-Tyne, in connection with the local celebrations of St. David's Day, and he did so to the entire satisfaction of the Welsh congregation.

Raid for Fuel

Remarkable scenes were witnessed at a plantation situated between Irvine and Kilwinning, Scotland. The plantation was being demolished, and the acres of wood lying around proved too great a temptation. Scores of men, women, and children were hard at work with axe and saw cutting up the trees and carrying them off in great quantities in barrows and mail-carts.

Terror at a Farm

An old ex-soldier, sixty years of age, who acts as farm laborer at Brynhill Farm, Penyboat, Radnorshire, Wales, was terribly injured in a midnight encounter with an infuriated bull. The family and servants had gone to bed when the bellowing of the bull in the farmyard indicated that the animal had broken loose, and on the laborer going down with a lantern the bull began to gore him furiously. The lantern acted like a red rag. The man lost the light, and the bull then went for this, tossing it into the air repeatedly. This enabled the injured man to make his escape.

The scenic committee will also have charge of the tree cutting and trimming in the city limits.

Rogers May Tell.

Montreal, April 3.—It is understood that the speech to be delivered by Hon. Robert Rogers here on April 13 at the Conservative Club dinner will give out the secret in connection with the coming Manitoba school settlement by Premier Roblin.

Mr. Bourassa's paper, Le Devoir, does not, however, want to be pacified, as that paper has an article in that evening stating that if The Free Press report of the alleged settlement is correct, it will never be satisfactory.

Be this as it may, it is well understood that His Grace Mgr. Langevin has been given an inkling as to the coming modification in the law and has expressed himself as perfectly satisfied. The same attitude is also reported to be taken by the papal delegate at Ottawa.

AN EXPLANATION OF THE WOMAN SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

BY ADELINE C. ROBERTS.

NO. 6.

In the second article by "Sylvia" in the Examiner for 21st March (the writer had not the pleasure of seeing "Sylvia's" first article) appears a phrase describing certain Toronto ladies who are interested in woman suffrage as "double-dyed suffragettes, who write over their own names."

It is generally conceded that those who have hecourage of heir opinions, and who believe in the truth and justice of the cause they advocate, usually do write over their own names. Pseudonyms are the refuse of the timid, the self-conscious, and those who fear adverse criticism. The latter is easier to bear when one's identity is concealed.

"Sylvia" is evidently labouring under the delusion, so common among opponents of equal franchise, that those who are actively engaged in advocating it are working solely for their own advantage and are endeavouring to bring about a change which will enable them to become "schemers" in politics, to the neglect of all the domestic duties. Women who desire to "scheme" in politics do not trouble themselves in the interests of equal franchise, for they can "scheme" without it, by exercising that "indirect influence" which anti-suffragists so assiduously assure women that they possess. eW need but turn to our history books to find numerous examples of "scheming" women politicians, who, without the franchise, attained success of a certain kind, and a notoriety which women suffragists have no desire to emulate. Those to whom equal franchise will be of the greatest benefit, when it is established, are, as stated in a former article, mainly the large army of women who are weekly wage-earners, the women and children of the very poorest class, and the unfortunate victims of the "white slave" traffic, that appalling evil of our modern civilization which continues to spread and increase. It is in the interests of these that women who are more fortunately circumstanced, and have therefore the time and the means at their disposal, are working so earnestly, and the opposition of the selfish, the ignorant, and the indifferent will not discourage nor deter them.

As one of man's strongest instincts is and has always been a material one—money, profit and money loss—so one of the strongest instincts of woman is and has always been a human one—race preservation. This instinct is the real force behind the present world-wide women's movement. Women, the world over, are beginning to realize that present conditions tend too much to put business interests in the forefront of practical politics to the detriment of human interests, and that property and money profits are considered as of more value than the lives, health, and welfare of the race.

Miss Rheta C. Dorr, a well-known American writer on the subject, says: "Women want political liberty because it will enable them to get other things needed, directly or indirectly, by children; directly, such as educational improvements, child labour laws, pure food laws, juvenile courts; indirectly, such as shorter working hours, living wages, social purity, legal equality with men (tending to conserve future mothers of children)."

As stated in a previous article, much eglislation in these subjects has already been obtained, in places where woman suffrage exists, and only in such places is the "white slave" traffic decreasing. eW are told that in Norway, "Women voters have already produced an effect upon the national left by forcing a consideration such as was never given before, of state problems affecting the welfare of women and children."

In Finland: "To the women voters are largely due the rational and conservative reforms that have already done so much to lift the national curse of intemperance, and they have been chiefly instrumental in securing a large Governmental appropriation for rescue work among women and children in cities."

In New Zealand: "The woman vote has had a marked influence upon the life of the colony by directing public attention to many questions, chiefly bearing upon the welfare of women and children, that had formerly received scant recognition."

"In Australia: "Australian experience convinces this House (of the Federal Parliament) that to adopt woman sucrage is simply to apply to the political sphree that principle of government that secures the best results in the domestic sphere—the mutual co-operation of men and women for the individual and general welfare."

Replying to "Sylvia's" question—"If the legislation against impure food is now ineffectual, how could the votes of women remedy the grievance?" If "Sylvia" were somewhat better informed as t oher subject, she would know that woman voters have already aided materially in remedying the grievance in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, and Idaho, as also in Australia and New Zealand.

Those opponents of woman suffrage who "with a little superficial knowledge" write or speak publicly against it, are not, as they fondly imagine, upholding the true duties of wifehood, womanhood, and motherhood, but are, in reality (though one hopes unwittingly), upholding the "white slave" traffic, child labour, the sweating system, underpay for women workers, and numerous other evil conditions and are using their best efforts to prevent those evils from being successfully dealt with. As to the "disgraceful acts" of the English suffragettes and their "eagerness to get before the public," reforms are not won by their advocates keeping in the background; publicity, as well as opposition must be faced by all reformers. English suffragettes are teaching us that the enfranchisement of women is worth fighting for, worth suffering for, and even dying for. Let those who so lightly condemn these women ask themselves when they themselves have ever made any sacrifice for the sake of humanity, and whether they would be willing to suffer in upholding a just cause.

In "Sylvia's" third article she asserts that "Toronto suffragettes claim intellectual superiority, and refer to themselves as highly educated." She does not mention from what source she obtained this piece of information and general statements of this kind have no weight unless accompanied by exact quotations and other data.

Through the chaotic mass of confused ideas presented in "Sylvia's" articles, it is not easy to penetrate to the pearls of wisdom so effectually concealed therein. A little more lucidity might not be amiss. Does she wish to imply that Toronto suffragists are endeavouring to obtain the franchise in order that the state may educate their particular children, and see to their health and morals, and so save those mothers the trouble of doing so themselves? A very improbable reason; and women who desire to avoid being troubled with the care of children can do so without the franchise. Or does she mean to imply that all the children of Toronto and elsewhere, however miserably circumstances, are already receiving all the care and attention of every kind, which they require, without further legislation? As for the women who indulge in "folly and extravagance, and ridiculous fashions in clothes," that kind of woman is not a suffragist. Such women belong to the "parasite" class (see Olive Schreiner's "Women and Labour") and as a class or as individuals do not interest themselves either for or against equal franchise.

"Sylvia's" ideas of the probable comportment of women in an election campaign, are also strange and startling! Are women to go to the polls armed with broom sticks, rolling pins and other weapons of defence, and upon whom are they to be used? Upon each other or upon the men voters? If on each other then her opinion of the manners and customs of the average Canadian woman is, to say the least, somewhat peculiar; (one is inclined to wonder if it is based on personal exoprience.) If on the men voters, she must have a very low estimate of the average Canadian man. Or possibly her meaning is shrouded in the mysterious wrappings of metaphor, and will be found to be quite different,—when discovered!

For the rest,—some opinions of prominent men and women of wide experience may be illuminating.

Lady Stout, wife of the Chief Justice of New Zealand: "The most marked and beneficial effect of the franchise in New Zealand is that the women are awakening to the responsibilities of motherhood, and consider their living children of more value to the state than those that are peopling the graveyard."

Governor Shafroth, of Colorado:—"Woman suffrage tends to elevate. At political conventions every man now shows that civility to women which makes him deport himself decently when ladies are present."

Rev. William Ganaeh, Rochester, N. Y.: "Womanhood and motherhood will yet be arguments for voting, as manhood and fatherhood are to-day, and the scorn will be for those whose 'refinement' shirks the duty."

Prof. MacNaghten, (Tasmania): "Ninety per cent. of the men of Australia would agree that the concession of the vote to women has been a real benefit to the state."

W. S. Collins, (Wyoming): "For the 21 years I have lived in Wyoming women have voted at all elections. Husband, wife, father and daughter, brother and sister, go to the polls together as to any other meeting, and woe to any man who would show any disrespect to women at the polls."

Mr. Max Eastman: "With the advance of industrial art the work of women has gone from the house to the factory and market. Women have followed it there, and there they must do it until this civilization perishes. Most of these women have no choice as to whether they will work or not, and many of them are working in circumstances corruptive of health and motherhood. It is therefore a vital problem for the future of our race, how to render the conditions of industry compatible with the physical and moral health of women. And to one who knows a little about human nature and the deep wisdom of representative government, it is clear that the only first step in solution of that problem is to give to the women themselves the dignity and defence of political recognition."

Pruning the Appendix

What thousands of people are rushthe idea that pruning the appendix teh idea that pruning the appendix will rid them of the cause and effect of wrong habits of eating and living.

We eat too much, take too little outdoor exercise, breathe impure air, and when the system gets loaded with foul impurities, which irritate the digestive system and set up inflammation, we are told that the operating table is the only place for us.

Why not prevent appendicitis, as well as acute indigestion, peritonitis and Bright's disease of the kidneys, by keeping the liver active and the bowels regular. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cleanse the digestive system of foul impurities more quickly than any treatment you can obtain. They awaken the liver and ensure the healthful action of the kidneys and bowels.

Census Branch Transferred.

Ottawa, April 3.—An important departmental change went into effect yesterday by order in council when the census and statistics branch which have been under the Minister of Agriculture since its organization, was transferred to the Minister of Trade and Commerce. Archibald Blue, census commissioner, will continue at the head of the branch. This is the most important departmental change since the new Government went into power.

The archives has already been transferred to the Secretary of State and it is likely that patents and copyrights will also be placed under Hon. W. J. Roche.

Hit Prosecuter With Poker.

Victoria, B.C., April 3.—City Prosecutor C. L. Harrison is nursing a sore head as a result of an incident in the police court.

"I think this man has been here before," said he, referring to a defendant named Arthur Morris, charged with vagrancy. No sooner was the remark made than Morris hit him over the head with an iron poker, which he had surreptitiously procured from the prison stove and smuggled into court.

Redistribution Bill Before Provincial House

Proposed New Constituency to be Formed With Biggar as Seat

The Provincial Parliament now have the new Distribution Bill framed up into working shape, and this will erect 15 new seats and make 54 seats for the whole province.

One of these new seats is allotted to our own town of Biggar, with a district extending thirty miles from east to west and from sixty to ninety miles from north to south, the deflection being caused by the North Saskatchewan River.

Starting from a point on the line between ranges 11 and 12 on the top of township 39, and proceeding straight north along this line to the North Saskatchewan river in township 40; then along the line of the river till reaching the line between ranges 17 and 18 in township 44, and proceeding south along this line to the N. E. corner of township 39 in range 18, and from there straight east to the starting point.

This gives the Biggar constituency an area of somewhere about 2,880 square miles, and includes the towns of Biggar, South Battleford, Rosetty, Traynor, Harris, Zealandia, Hershel, Palo, Osea, Hand, Vance, Neola, and a lot of other smaller places inside the area mentioned above.

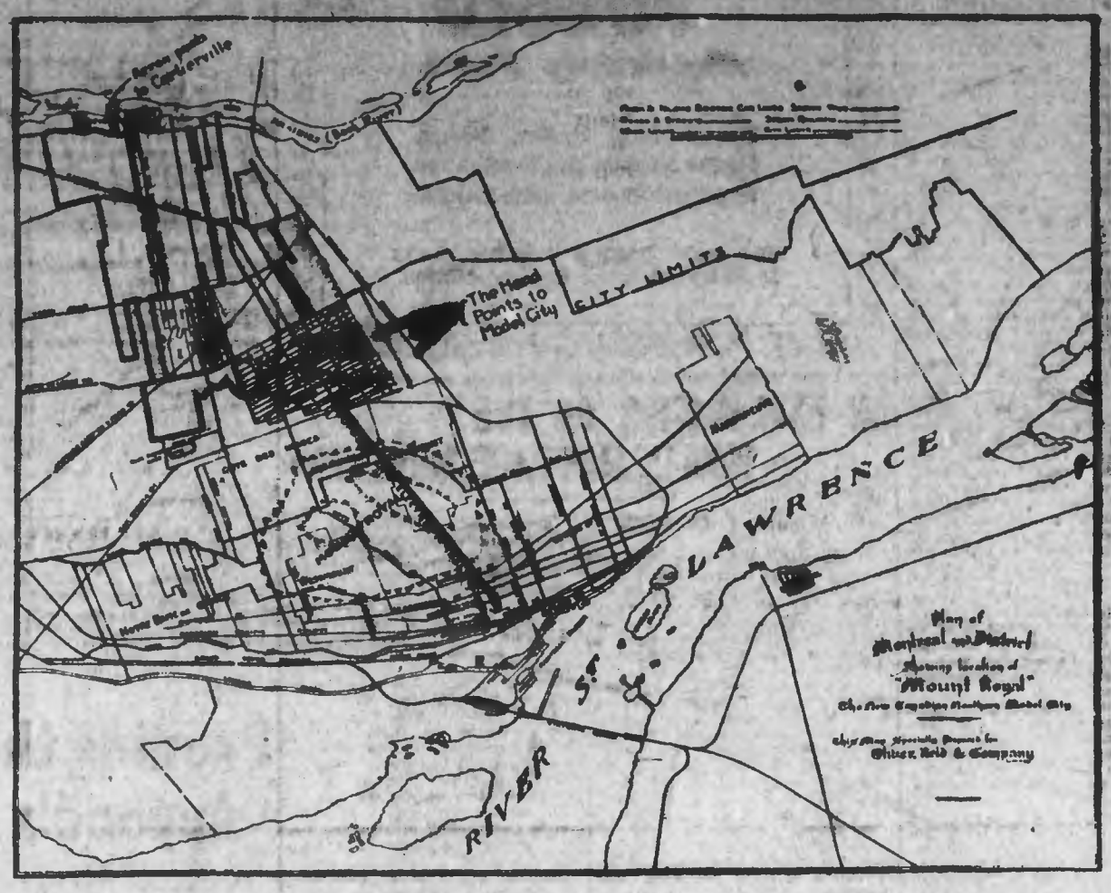
DEALERS IN PIANOS and REAL ESTATE

Canada's Greatest Real Estate Opportunity

YOU have been reading about MacKenzie and Mann's great coup in Montreal, whereby they will secure a terminal in the business heart of the city by means of a tunnel driven through Mount Royal from the North; and at the same time bring the beautiful residential district north of the mountain within eight minutes of the centre of the metropolis.

Unique in its originality, daring in its conception, and gigantic in its cost, it is little wonder that the announcement of the undertaking caused a sensation in Canada, United States and Europe; and provided the material for hundreds of special articles in the daily press, magazines and financial publications.

By opening up the district North of Mount Royal for settlement, the project will confer a great benefit on Montreal, which for years has been one of the most congested cities in America. Hemmed in on a narrow strip of land between Mount Royal and the St. Lawrence, the congestion in Canada's greatest metropolis has grown more frightful year after year.



Montreal's Yearly Increase In Population Large Enough To Fill "Model City"

UNLIKE Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London and other Canadian cities, Montreal is not a city of homes. It is a city of tenements, flat houses and apartments. And there are thousands of home-hungry people within its borders.

And it is growing fast. Montreal has the largest birth rate of any of the world's largest cities. Montreal's percentage of increase in population during the last ten years shows that it is without a rival compared with the cities of the United States. New York's percentage of increase was only 38.7 per cent., Boston's 19.6, Baltimore's 9.7, whereas Montreal's was 70.3 per cent.

30,000 Increase

Every year Montreal is adding to its population a city larger than London, Ontario; or Halifax, or St. John, N.B.; or Calgary, or Regina, or Victoria. Every two years its increase is greater than the entire present population of Hamilton or Ottawa.

The yearly increase in Montreal's population is large enough to occupy the whole of the Model City—the beautiful new residential district laid out North of the Mountain by the C.N.R.—and still leave 10,000 people to find homes elsewhere. Montreal is increasing at the rate of 50,000 a year, but the Model City is only planned to accommodate about 40,000 people.

This means that a real estate investment in the Model City is a safe, sure, high-grade opportunity—and one that will double and treble in value as the work on the tunnel progresses and the erection of homes proceeds.

C. N. R. Anxious

Preliminary work on the tunnel commenced on March 26th. No time will be lost in rushing the tunnel to completion. The C.N.R. are exceedingly anxious to become a strong factor in handling the increasing volume of business concentrating at the metropolis. They are also anxious to provide the Model City with rapid transit at the earliest moment and enjoy the lucrative traffic that will result.

So that you see the necessity of prompt action if you are to benefit largely from a real estate investment in the Model City—a city laid out by a noted landscape gardener, a city with broad diagonal boulevards, wide avenues, a circular driveway, and fourteen small parks—an ideal residential district in every respect A district whose residents will be carried in comfortable electric trains through a well-ventilated, double-tracked subway to the business heart of Montreal in less than 10 minutes. No snow blockades. No delays by congestion of street traffic. Express speed all the way.

See the Map

The strategical location of the Model City is well shown on the map. Notice the direct course of the tunnel from the Model City terminal to city terminal. Note also that the distance from Montreal Harbor to Cartierville on Riviere des Prairies (Back River) is less than the distance of the city limits from East to West. With the tunnel through Mount Royal, the natural growth of Montreal in the future will be in the direction of Cartierville towards the Back River. The Model City is midway between the Harbor and Cartierville. Notice also the close proximity of the fashionable suburb of Outremont to the Model City. Also notice that the Montreal city limits run just outside of the Eastern side of the Model City, continuing on to Riviere des Prairies (Back River).

And just think you can secure lots in the Model City at less than half the price of similar size lots in other purely residential sections of Montreal. Less than half the price of lots in the fashionable residential districts of Toronto, such as Rosedale, Avenue Road, Deer Park, and High Park, which are from 20 to 50 minutes from the business centre of Toronto.

First Choices

The lots will be First Selections, too. Only one other syndicate had an equally wide choice of C.N.R. Model City properties. We have, at all times, been in close touch with the C.N.R. since the birth of their project. We handle only large propositions, this one amounting to over $1,500,000. We invite business men and professional men to share in this great real estate opportunity in the solid old metropolis of Montreal. Its like has never occurred in Canada before, and the same combination of circumstances, that made this opportunity possible, will never occur again. MARKET REPORTS

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Exchange Closed—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

WINNIPEG, April 2.—There was little doing in wheat options locally to-day, and prices were unchanged to 1c higher at the opening and, with the Chicago market closed, and unfavorable cables from abroad, trading was decidedly dull and uninteresting. The close was unchanged to 1c lower.

The Chicago Board of Trade was closed all day Tuesday, civic election day. It will also be closed next Tuesday after the elections, but will remain open this Good Friday and Easter Monday.

Liverpool wheat closed ½d to ¾d lower than on Monday, and corn unchanged to ¼d higher. Antwerp wheat closed unchanged, Berlin ½c lower to ½c higher and Buda Pest ½c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, April 2.—On anticipated increased arrivals of wheat cables to Manitoba grades were easier and bids for nearby shipments were 1½d lower. The demand was quieter and sales of only a few odd loads were made. American No. 2 yellow corn continues very strong, and prices have scored another advance of 1½c. In oats the feeling is strong, with a fair amount of business doing. There was some enquiry from Leith and Glasgow for winter wheat flour, but as dealers here could not get cars to offer from Ontario millers no business resulted. A fairly good local trade continues to be done in spring wheat flour. Demand for bran and shorts is good. Butter is scarce and strong. Demand for eggs is active, and the market is well cleaned up of supplies. Provisions in good demand.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 68c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 39½c to 40c; Canadian western, No. 3, 38c; extra No. 1 feed, 38c; No. 1 feed, white, 38c; No. 2 feed, white, 38c; No. 3 feed, white, 38c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, April 2.—The railways reported 48 carloads of live stock at the City Yards, comprising 704 cattle, 703 hogs, 245 sheep and lambs, 687 calves and 3 horses.

Butchers

Heavy butchers sold at $6.60 to $7; butchers, 1000 to 1100 lbs., at $6.60 to $6.75; medium, $6.40 to $6.50; common, $5 to $6.25; cows, $5 to $6.40; bulls, $4.50 to $6.

Stockers and Feeders.

There is a fair demand for [illegible] and feeders, but few are being [illegible]. Steers, 800 to 900 lbs., are worth from $5 to $5.50; stockers, 600 to 800 lbs., are worth $4.50 to $5.

Milkers and Springers

There was a fair supply of milkers and springers, amongst which were a few extra good quality. Prices were reported at $60 up to $90, but very few reached the latter price, and $80 to $90 would quite the bulk.

Veal Calves.

There were nearly 700 calves of all kinds, quality and description. It was a shame to see some that were on sale that ought to have been left with the mother two weeks longer anyway. Look at C. Zeagman & Sons report and you will have a fair look at the calf market of the different weights and qualities of the bulk on the market.

Bobs sold at $5.50 to $6.50 each, the rest sold from $4 to $5 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep ewes sold from $5 to $5; rams, $4 to $5; yearling lambs, $8.50 to $9.50. Spring lambs sold at $8 to $7.50 each. There were too many choice lambs for which it was cruel to take away from their mothers, and too young to slaughter, especially when they would have grown quickly into heavier weights, and have brought more money, especially in this a time a scarcity of meats.

Hogs.

Hogs were quoted at this market and sold at $7 for selects fed and watered, and $6.65 f.o.b. cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, April 2.—Cattle—Receipts 50; trade fair, market steady. Prime steers, $6.60 to $6.85; butcher grades, $6.60 to $7.

Calves—Receipts 200; market active, 25c higher; cull to choice, $3 to $10.50.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 4000; market fairly active, steady; choice lambs, $8 to $8.35; cull to fair, $7 to $7.90; yearlings, $7 to $7.35; sheep, $5 to $6.40.

Hogs—Receipts 3200; market slow, 10c to 15c lower; Yorkers, $7 to $7.05; pigs, $7.05 to $7.10; mixed, $7.10 to $7.15; heavy, $7.10 to $7.20; roughs, $6 to $6.25; stags, $5 to $5.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Cattle—Receipts 3000; market steady to strong; beeves, $5.20 to $8.70; Texas steers, $4.60 to $6.30; western steers, $5.20 to $7.75; stockers and feeders, $4.20 to $6.60; cows and heifers, $2.80 to $6.60; calves, $6.75 to $9.25.

Hogs—Receipts 14,000; market steady to 5c up; light, $7.20 to $7; mixed, $7.10 to $7.45; heavy, $7.10 to $7.50; rough, $7.10 to $7.25; pigs, $5.40 to $7.35; bulk of sales $7.20 to $7.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 15,000; market slowly to a shade higher; native, $4.40 to $5.70; western, $4.50 to $5.80; yearlings, $5.70 to $7. Lambs, native, $6.40 to $8.10; western, $6.50 to $8.10.

THURSDAY EVENING OF THIS WEEK

Mr. W. H. Beemer (of the Britannia Roller Rink, Hamilton, one of the best in Canada) is in charge with new ideas and has made preparations for a Big Re-opening.

COMPLETE BY 1ST OF JUNE

Extension of C. G. E. Line May Be Ready in Two Months—Service To Be a Good One

RESIDENTS SHOULD LIKE IT

It is understood that it is the intention of the Peterborough Radial and Railway Company to complete the extension of the C. G. E. line, by the first of June. Several diamonds to be used where railway tracks are to be crossed, have arrived recently and the supplies of ties and the other necessaries have been here for months.

There will be two cars put on the C. G. E. line, in order to make the service there equal to that of any other of the city lines. The Company have purchased a lot of land on Boundary Road, near the C. P. R. tracks, which will likely be used for a loop. The provision of a good fast service to this part of the city, it is thought, will be appreciated by the residents there who will thus have a direct up-town service.

The cars on this line will be removed and several of the George St. cars will be put on in their place. This will be another improvement that should be much appreciated, and will go a long way in making a favourable impression upon those who ride in the better cars only after a transfer. A switch will probably have to be made on the C. G. E. line if the two-car service is provided. This may be obviated by an extension of the line to make it practically the same length as the Jackson Park line, but there has been nothing definite upon this point.

The putting on of three pay-as-you-enter cars on the George street line, is also planned, and with these improvements the local service should be about as trim and rapid as that of any city of a similar size.

BRIDGE IS SWEPT AWAY

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., APRIL 3.—Earl Shaw and Jack Armstrong of Brigden, aged 11 years, were sitting on a bridge watching the water rising, when an ice jam swept the bridge away. They were some distance down the stream before Clayton Wheeler noticed them. He got a canoe and after the hardest kind of a battle against the ice and current, rescued the boys.

STEAMER IS WRECKED BY A TYPHOON

Special to The Examiner.

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, APRIL 3.—From wreckage piled up on the beach of Western Australia, it is believed that the British steamer, "Koomboona" has been wrecked with all on board. She left here for England on March 15th, with fifty passengers and a crew of eighty. Immediately afterwards there was a terrible typhoon off the western coast, and it is supposed the Koomboona ran into it.

Great Damage By The Floods

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MEMPHIS, TENN., APRIL 3.—Flood conditions along the banks of the Lower Mississippi are decidedly grave. Several towns have been inundated, with considerable loss of life in the negro and poor white quarters. Thousands of acres of cotton fields are flooded by the river, and the damage will be in the thousands.

CITY'S POWER BILL SHELVED AGAIN AFTER MEETING WITH COMMITTEE'S OPPOSITION

Member For South Hastings in Private Bills Committee Called it Confiscation---One Clause in Particular Drew Objections---Not Much Hope For It Now.

Peterborough's Bill was again shelved yesterday by the Private Bills committee of the Legislature in spite of the changes that had been made in its form.

When it was first presented it asked for the right to expropriate any power plant and equipment in the county. This was regarded as altogether too sweeping and the Peterborough deputation were asked to take it back and tone down the demands.

This the city did and confined their request to the right to expropriate the plant and equipment of the Peterborough Light and Power Co.

Toronto Heard First.

Peterborough's bill was the first on the list, but Mayor Geary and the rest of a Toronto deputation were successful in an attempt to be first. Their claim, it is learned, was somewhat similar to that of Peterborough's, but was simply an attempt to grab the Etobicoke railway and there was no agreement between the city and the railway company.

The committee had therefore, a surfeit of expropriation demands after Toronto's characteristic efforts and it is thought Peterborough's case was somewhat weakened by this fact.

Opposition Evident.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk, presented a clear statement of the city's requests and made a good case of it in spite of the heckling of Mr. R. R. Gamey, Sam Nesbitt of East Northumberland and others before the city's case had been presented. Mr. J. W. Johnston of West Hastings and others were against it.

Called it Confiscation.

"This is confiscation," Mr. Johnston said. "The Legislature is breaking a solemn contract, entered into between the Legislature and the company. As long as I am a member I shall never consent to it." His remarks were followed by cries of "Take it back."

Mr. Johnston continued, declaring that in London, Hamilton and Toronto, under the Hydro-Electric System, nearly twice as much was paid for power as in Peterborough.

The argument, which was quite heated, hinged principally on one clause in which the city sought to avoid paying compensation to the Peterborough Light and Power Company for prospective profits or because of the granting to or enjoyment by the company of the rights granted under the municipal by-laws.

In the end the bill was left over for the consideration of another meeting.

This indefinite hoist for the bill is not regarded as a good augury by those who have been boosting it, and it looks as if it has been laid away on the shelf.

BIG COAL STRIKE PRACTICALLY OVER

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., APRIL 3.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Albert Stanley, M.P., Secretary of the Midlands Miners' Federation, made a statement which was practically an announcement that the great national coal strike in the United Kingdom was at an end.

DIED IN THE WEST.

Information Concerning Late Edward Lunscombe is Sought After by Administrators of Estate.

Chief of Police Thompson is in receipt of a communication from F. R. Holland, provincial manager of the Standard Trust Company, in which the writer desires information concerning the late Edward Lunscombe, who died at Swan River Settlement, Alberta on September 26th, 1911. The writer goes on to say that from meagre information to hand it would appear that Lunscombe originally lived in the vicinity of Peterborough or Bobcaygeon.

Deceased went west ten or fifteen years ago and has lived most of that time in British Columbia and Alberta. No information as to age, height or build is to hand. The Standard Trust are official administrators of the estate of the deceased.

Ottawa Barbers Ran Lotteries

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, APRIL 3.—Irving Robinson pleaded guilty before Magistrate O'Keefe this morning, to running a series of lotteries in barber shops in this city and was sent to prison for one year. One hundred barbers and customers, who played the game, paid fines aggregating $1,500.00.

WILL CONDUCT SHOOTING GALLERY.

Local Man is Applying to Lindsay Council for a License.

Mr. Louis Yeates of this city, is applying through the medium of Mr. L. R. Knight to the town council of Lindsay for a license permitting him to conduct a shooting gallery in Lindsay. Mr. Yeates recently leased the store formerly occupied by Mr. J. L. Primeau, and he intends to open a shoe-shine, cigar store, and hat-cleaning department; also a shooting gallery, if the town council will grant the necessary license. He would pay the usual license of $50 for selling cigarettes and an additional fee of $10 or $15 for the shooting gallery privileges. At a meeting of the council the matter was referred to the Committee.

Some Thousands British Miners Have Returned to Work But Majority Are Against the Settlement

WANT SOMETHING DEFINITE

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ENG., APRIL 3.—While some thousands of miners have resumed work in the mines there is not that unanimous opinion regarding the acceptance of the minimum wage bill, which was hoped for. It was given out this morning that a great majority of the miners of North England and Scotland had joined the Lancashire men in demanding concrete pronouncements as to what the minimum wage fixed by the district boards will be before ending the strike. Consequently they have cast their ballots against the settlement.

Notwithstanding the fact that this may cause a large majority of the whole vote in favour of continuing the strike it is probable that the officers will declare the strike terminated.

Special Songs by the Great Italian Singer

D'ANGELO, at the Red Mill Theatre

The Red Mill Picture Palace seems to grow more in popular favour each week, and the cream of Peterborough's society and business folk are nightly represented in this delightful place amusement. The Red Mill Orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Foster, is of a high order of excellence, both from a classical and popular standpoint, while the singing of Mr. Donaldson ,the past few weeks, has been delightfully refreshing. His selections have all been familiar and encores have been in large demand. To-night, Mr. R. M .D'Angelo, the noted tenor, recently from the Metropolitan Opera House, will be the soloist. Mr. D'Angelo is a native of Palermo, Sicily, and is only 28 years of age, yet he has sung in most of the principal opera houses of Italy, including the La Scala, at Milan, Sambarlo at Naples, and the Massimo, at Palermo. He came to America six years ago, under the Grau management to the Metropolitan Opera House. He is engaged at the Red Mill Theatre all this week, changing his songs with the programme every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Do not fail to hear him. The motion pictures are of the best variety, featuring "Bill and the Lions." Admission, 5c. to all.

WANT CARL HEMMAN LIBERATED

MONTREAL, APRIL 3.—Captain Gorman, United States Consul here, intimated this morning that he was in consultation with his Government at Washington, regarding the detention of Carl Hemman, a United States musician, who is being held for the shooting of the Chapman brothers. Captain Gorman says the statements of the Chapman boys vindicates Hemman, and his further detention is unwarrantable under international law.

LAST MINUTE DESPATCHES PRINCE OF WALES TO BE INVITED TO CANADA

His Royal Highness Will Be Asked to Dedicate the Cartier Monument---Conservatives Discuss "Abolish-the-Bar" Resolution in Caucus This Morning.

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, ENG., APRIL 3.—The Times and other papers this morning calling attention to the fact that the surplus referred to yesterday by Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, of thirty million dollars, was really a neat egg, which the Government is keeping at hand to help maintain the two-to-one navy power standard, in case Germany takes a notion to build more Dreadnoughts than at present arranged for. The Times rather compliments the Government for this for their foresight, but the Radical newspapers are silent.

OTTAWA, ONT., APRIL 3.—Ottawa will, through the Governor-General, extend an invitation to H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, to visit Canada in the summer of 1914 to dedicate the National Monument to Sir George's Etienne Cartier to be erected at Vercheres.

OTTAWA, APRIL 3.—A conference between the delegates of West Indies and Canadian ministers was resumed in the House of Commons building to-day. The question of steamship and cable communications was discussed.

CONSERVATIVE CAUCUS.

TORONTO, APRIL 3.—Seldom is the quarantine ward in the Hospital so safely guarded as was the public accounts room to-day, when a caucus of Conservative members in the Legislature was in session this morning. Whether the Temperance element succeeded in getting the Government to adopt their views will be known when Sir James Whitney or Hon. Mr. Hanna move the Government's amendment to Mr. Rowell's resolution. Whatever went on inside the meeting, not a member would give a hint of what had been discussed, when it was over. All were sworn to secrecy.

BROCK STREET ROLLER RINK OPENS TO-MORROW NIGHT

Lovers of roller skating, and their name is legion in Peterborough, will be glad to learn that the Brock St. Roller Rink will open for the season to-morrow (Thursday) night. Everything is in good shape and the patrons of the popular amusement place will find the rink more pleasing than ever. It will be under the management of Mr. W. H. Beamer, formerly manager of the well-known Britannia Rink in Hamilton. Mr. Beemer has had long experience in managing roller rinks and brings with him many new ideas which he will no doubt successfully introduce here. The Band will be in attendance on Thursday night, Friday afternoon and evening, and Saturday night.

EATABLES FOR GOOD FRIDAY AND EASTER

Harry Bradshaw has just received a fine lot of fish for Good Friday. Let us have your orders early so as to deliver them on Thursday. Full line of fruits, domestic and foreign, oranges, bananas, pineapples, grape fruit, etc. Also new vegetables, lettuce, onions, radishes, rhubarb, celery, parsley, tomatoes, potatoes, etc., which are sure to give perfect satisfaction. New maple syrup in a few days. Both phones 271. HARRY BRADSHAW, 332-334 Charlotte street.

SERVICE IN THE ARMOURIES

Arrangements are being completed in regard to the Good Friday afternoon service in the Armouries, under the auspices of the Peterborough Ministerial Association. The splendid Band of the Salvation Army will lend their services for the day, and will lead in the singing. Short addresses will be given by several of the local clergy and it is expected that the service will be bright and inspiring.

BULLETING OF PRICES

Suggestion to Place Blackboard in Market Hall Does Not Meet With the Approval of the Farmers.

WOULD APPEAL TO GROCERS

A number of the members of the Lindsay Town Council are agitating for a blackboard to be placed in the Market Hall, in order that the Clerk might place thereon the prices paid by local grocers for produce.

The resolution, which is of two years' standing, was resurrected for the second time by Deputy-Reeve Dobson. The mover of the resolution pointed out that the citizens were anxious to see the blackboard in the market hall, as they felt they were being "bled," owing to the exorbitant prices charged for certain goods. The placing of the prices on the board would enable buyer and seller to arrive at a more satisfactory price basis. After some further discussion the matter was referred to the Property Committee.

Merchants Favour Principle.

For some time past there have been rumours of introducing a similar measure in this city, but so far as known it is not meeting with the general favour of the farmers, who sell their produce on the market.

A North Monaghan farmer expressed himself to-day as being opposed to the introduction of a blackboard. "It would have a tendency to drive farmers away from the market," he declared.

The merchants take an entirely different view of the matter. They have their reasons for favouring the bulletining of prices upon the grounds that it would result in a modification of the present high prices, and would appeal in the form of a convenience for both buyer and seller.

FIRE LADDIES SEE BIG FIRE PICTURE

Brigade Receive an Appreciated Invitation From Proprietor of the Princess

Through the kindness of Mr. E. J. King, proprietor of the Princess Theatre, the members of the Peterborough Fire Brigade have been given an opportunity of seeing the wonderful fire picture "Making Heroes," which is being shown at the Princess to-day and to-morrow. The picture is a demonstration of the latest methods in fire-fighting and life-saving, and is instructive as well as highly interesting. Mr. King tendered an invitation to the Brigade, through Chief Howard, and the latter has arranged to have his men go in relays of two each to see the picture.

Post Office To Have Holiday

Good Friday will be observed as a holiday at the Peterborough post office. The outgoing morning and afternoon mails will close at the usual hours. A mail for Great Britain and Europe will be despatched on Friday. Letters and parcels intended for this mail, should be in not later than Thursday. The wickets at the office, including the registered letter department, will be open from 12 to 1 o'clock.

The letter carriers will observe the day as a holiday. Therefore, there will be no regular delivery of mail throughout the city.

MAKING PLACES.

The amiable tendency of both the Dominion and Ontario governments is to look well after its own, possibly a very commendable evidence of solicitude. At the sessions of both there have been a multitude of new offices created, and of course a proportionate rush of office-seekers. The Ontario Health Act provides for the division of the province into seven districts and a Medical Health Officer for each district. To show the widespread anxiety to serve the public, it may be mentioned that for these seven positions there are already 250 applications and it is stated that several Peterborough gentlemen are reaching out for one of the plums. Of course some of the 250 will have to be disappointed; and it will be necessary in the interests of peace to create more offices.

KNIGHTLY HUBBISH.

The Toronto News quotes Sir James Whitney as saying, in regard to the Senate's action in "killing T. & N. O. Railway subsidy and the Highways Measure":

"It is simply an evidence of the dislike and hatred which Sir Wilfrid Laurier feels for the Province of Ontario. For years he has kept his real attitude more or less under cover, but he is not attempting to disguise it now. He pretends to be an admirer of British institutions and in this matter defies the expressed wish of the people of the Province. I have no doubt, however, it will be all right in the end."

The Senate did not kill these bills; the Senate proposed amendments to them in the public interests, and the Government abandoned the measures rather than have them right. Sir Wilfrid "hates Ontario" because the Senate demanded that the highly important proviso be put in the railway subsidy bill that it should be brought under the Dominion Railway Commission, as is done in the case of every railway receiving Government aid. Sir Wilfrid simply favoured this proper amendment, and he therefore "hates Ontario." Did Rt. Hon. Mr. Borden show any excess of love for Ontario in extending the boundaries of Ontario? He gave Manitoba 178,000 square miles, Quebec 351,981 miles, and Ontario only 146,000 miles, with access to a port on Hudson Bay by means of a gooseneck lane through Manitoba territory. Did Sir James show any excess of love for Ontario, when he agreed, or rather submitted, to this arrangement? Sir James Whitney sometimes talks rubbish and this is one of the occasions.

MR. BECK'S SALARY.

(London Advertiser.)

The people of Ontario do not ask their servants to work for nothing, and no one will cavil at the grant of a salary to Hon. Adam Beck as chairman of the hydro-electric commission. The post has exacted a great deal of time and hard work. Mr. Beck has not been one of the Seven Sleepers, and is entitled at least to as much remuneration as his portfolioed but somnolent colleagues, who seem to regard a cabinet job as a berth, not a business.

Mr. Beck's salary of $6,000 is to be charged to the municipalities, not to the Government. It is another reason why the Government ought to give the municipalities representation on the commission. The commissioners are three cabinet ministers — Messrs. Beck, Hendrie and McNaught. The municipalities, which bear the whole financial responsibility of the hydro-electric system, have not a single voice in its management. This is taxation without representation with a vengeance. It is a rank injustice, against which the municipalities ought to have cried out long ago. The Government's object in keeping affairs in its own hands is to make the hydro-electric enterprise a huge engine of party patronage. All but the better positions requiring a high degree of technical skill, have been systematically filled by party workers. It is high time that this state of affairs should be ended, and that municipalities should have a hand in their own business.

A FEW THINGS DONE AND NOT DONE AT OTTAWA

How Borden Government Has Shaped Itself to Its Promises and the Polices on Which It Gained Power

OTTAWA, APRIL 2.—Yesterday, the first session of the twelfth Parliament of Canada, came to an end. The selection of All Fools' day for the exploitation of the red fire effects, has its moral, and it is not hard to decide who has been "fooled." The Borden government has been "fooled" if it expected smooth sailing; if it expected that it would be able to satisfy the platform or platforms on which it gained place and power. The country was 'fooled' if it expected that the new government would in action justify the weird theories upon which it appealed for and gained popular support.

The government was chiefly elected on the grounds of the loyalty of its leaders and followers, on the grounds of its hostility to any possible disloyal element. It was claimed that there was disloyalty in trading freely with our neighbours to the south of us and that idea was approved of by the electors. The flag, British connection and imperialism were the keynotes.

The first departure from the loyal policy was when Mr. Borden, in forming his cabinet, submitted to the dictation of the leader of the Nationalist element—the arch-type of what our Conservative friends call "French domination" and took into a superloyal British cabinet, three Nationalist ministers, giving them the portfolios appertaining to the largest spending departments of the government; with the result that the Borden government has broken into a saturnalia of extravagant expenditure—forty millions greater than in any year of the history of the country.

When the new government came into power, we were to have the ne temere decree quashed; we were to have people know when they were married, and they were to stay married. We were to have instant justice; but when a private member of the government party brought in a bill to make marriage uniform and draw the teeth of the hated ne temere decree the loyalist government and its supporters voted it down (and among the members who joined in this inconsistent vote was the member for West Peterborough), so the matter was shelved—the responsibility shirked—by referring it to the Supreme court, with the certainty of prolonged delay and the title of a man to his wife, hung up in doubt, indefinitely.

Another of the first acts of the government, elected on the loyalty and British connection cry was to kill the contracts for ships for a Canadian navy and do nothing in the way of assisting in imperial defence, though Mr. Borden himself regarded the matter when he was in opposition, as so urgent tha the wanted to hand over twenty-five million dollars to the British government to build Dreadnoughts at once. When he got office and responsibility he shirked it and is going some time in the sweet by and by to consult the British Admiralty. This shirking of duty would not be so bad if it had not been done at the orders of the Nationalists and Mr. Bourassa.

The Borden government has marked the session by further displacement of responsibility—shown its inability to do its own business, by the appointment of commissions. These commissions are so numerous that the commissioners, to the number of forty-eight, have been appointed, at an expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars to do the work of ministers.

One of these commissions serves to further show Mr. Borden's failure to connect with his promises. He was righteously insistent upon a pure civil service — men must not be dismissed without cause and they must be replaced by men chosen for merit.

Yet in all the history of Canada we have never had such a slaughter of the innocents, such a riot of place hunters as under the Borden government and the merit of the dismissed and the merit of their successors so little heated. In his zeal for a pure civil service, Mr. Borden appointed a commission to investigate the civil service—really to flog a dead horse by trying to find crookedness among the appointees of the late government and to create vacant places for Conservative camp-followers. The personnel of this purity commission itself, convicted the government of insincerity. Two of its members rest under grave charges of improper conduct—one is said to be a convicted criminal, a very practical application of the police theory—"set a thief to catch a thief."

The tariff commission, another promise, formed a basis for an attempt to manipulate the tariff in the interests of the highly protected classes, and rather than forego this advantage, and accept reasonable amendments, the bill has been dropped—aut Caesar, aut nullus; full power to favour the classes against the masses, or nothing. Thus is the practical election support of the "big interests" acknowledged.

The promise of greater economy in Dominion expenditure has been met by increasing the national outlay forty million dollars more than under the most "extravagant" days of the Liberal government.

The promise to assist the construction of highways was kept in the letter, but not in the spirit; the proposal to make the grant of a large sum of money and its expenditure a political machine for strengthening the government, was defeated.

The proposal to promote economy, by devoting two million dollars to a subsidy to the Provincial railway of Ontario, lost its value when the government refused to have the railway subsidized by the Dominion, brought under the authority of the Dominion Railway Commission — a condition that applies to all other roads receiving government aid.

Altogether the session has revealed that the government has disappointed, by its lack of effective work and its failure to implement its promises and justify its policy, not only the people but its own friends; the latter are secretly disgusted, but still loyal— as the Nationalist ministers subordinate their principles to the retention of their salaries, so does a certain-class of government supporters swallow their disgust, in hope of favours to come. "Principles" be blowed. Keep on the sunny side of the hedge — do anything, surrender anything to maintain power."

AVON MARSH DRUGS

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing, and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odourless, tasteless, and colourless. Combined with other well-known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge, nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons, and aged people, as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in three size packages, 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store, —The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

W.C.T.U. NOTES

The Matter Under This Heading is Supplied by the W.C.T.U.

From an address by Joseph Gibson, President of the Dominion Alliance.

A NATIONAL FOE

Moreover, in these days we claim to have a desire to do some nation building. Look how the old Motherland is crobbing from centre to circumference in its anxiety to reach the submerged masses. Look at the efforts we have made and are making to people the great Northwest with this Imperial race. Is not the liquor traffic a positive disgrace to our national life? So friends as an old man I am going down to my grave with one wonder in my heart and brain. That this imperial race, to which you and I belong, that has conquered so many difficulties, and never turned its back on foe (Churchill voiced its spirit the other day at Dublin. "We threaten no nation, but thank God we fear none.") to think that a race that is imbued with the thought that could inspire a public man to make a statement like that, should up to this time hesitate to strike down the liquor traffic and actually nourish it in its bosom, and makes it a legitimate business around which the law throws itself. God pity the country that has got to get down to the bung-hole of a beer barrel to get its inspiration.

Gentlemen, let us be nation-builders in the best, truest sense of the term. Let us build up on this side of the Atlantic a greater Britain than is even on the other, so that in the hour of the old Mother Country's peril we on this side of the Atlantic will stand by the old mother—one nation; one king, one flag. Some day in the future—I wish it may be in my day—we shall fling the old flag to the breeze, when from ocean to ocean it shall not protect one licensed whiskey shop beneath its sacred folds.

DID YOU CONSENT?

How many the hearts that are broken
'Neath the rum fiend's cruel sway,
And deep is the anguish unspoken
Where he walks his remorseless way!
O the lives o'er which the dark clouds hover,
The sighs where there should be song,
The disgrace which love would cover!
Did you consent to the wrong?

Shame- shame! upon this great nation,
Which barters its honour for gold,
Forgetting its high vocation,
Permitting its sons to be sold.
The price of blood in its coffers
Brings judgment, though mercy bears long,
While virtue in solitude suffers.
Did you consent to the wrong?
—Rev. W. H. Clark, in the Youth's Companion.

THE SALOON IS UNFAIR

"The liquor traffic is unfair."

The liquor traffic is unfair to the city. It makes the saloon a city institution; all its impurity and crime a city of impurity and crime. Whatever disgrace the traffic produces becomes the disgrace of the city licensing it. The citizens are made partners in the criminality of the saloon.

The liquor traffic is unfair to the home. The principal business of a city or village is the making of homes. Nothing should be allowed in the city but such as conduces to the benefit of the home. We know of nothing in all of life in any nation that damages the home as does the liquor traffic.

The liquor traffic is unfair to the drinker. It takes his strength, it takes his reputation, it takes his character, it takes his clearness of brain, it takes his skill of hand, it takes his satisfaction in life, and his hope of eternal life. It takes away his manhood and his God. It gives nothing in return.

The liquor traffic is unfair to the business man. It gets the first grab at the workman's wages, by trapping him Saturday and Sunday just after he has been paid his weekly wage. It shows its greed by keeping open long after other stores are closed. It plays upon its patrons' weaknesses and passions and unfits them for legitimate business. It strips them of their money and precludes the possibility of their paying other legitimate bills.

The liquor traffic is unfair to labour. It uses up raw material, employing a less number of men in the process than any other business. It employs a far smaller number of men for the money invested than any other activity. It makes life for the labourer, in these days of machinery, exceedingly dangerous. It unfits the man, who, without it, is a very capable workman. It spends for the labourer all his money and makes it impossible for him to use liquor and buy a home. Everything that makes against the labourer also is a damage to the employers of labour.—Pioneer.

RIGHT WILL HAVE VICTORY.

My friend, if thou hadst all the artillery of Woolwich trundling at thy back in support of an unjust thing, and infinite bonfires waiting ahead of thee to blaze centuries long for thy victory on behalf of it, I would advise thee to call halt, to fling down thy baton, and say, "In heaven's name, No!"

Thy "success?" Poor fellow, what will thy success amount to? If the thing is unjust, thou hast not succeeded; no, not though bonfires blazed from north to south, and bells rang, and editors wrote leading articles, and the just things lay trampled out of sight, to all mortal eyes un abolished and annihilated thing.

It is the right and noble alone that will have victory in this struggle; the rest is wholly an obstruction, a postponement and fearful imperilment of victory. Towards an eternal centre of right and nobleness, and of that only, is all confusion tending. We already know whither it is all tending; what will have victory, what will have none! The heaviest will reach the centre. The heaviest has its deflections, its obstructions, nay, at times its reboundings; whereupon some blockhead shall be heard jubilating: 'See, your heaviest ascends!" but at all moments it is moving centreward, fast as is convenient for it; sinking; sinking; and by laws older than the world, old as the Maker's first plan of the world, it has to arrive there.—Carlyle.

ROLL AWAY THE STONE.

The Master's body lay in the Garden of Golgotha, in Joseph's tomb, the door of which was blocked by a great stone."

On that Sabbath morning, "at the rising of the sun," when the women came with myrrh and spices, they said, one to another, "Who shall roll away the stone?"

A "great stone" blocks the way of every good thing in American civil life and religious life. Those who come laden with good things of public betterment find that a "great stone" blocks the way.

Roll it away and give the village preacher a chance. Roll it away and give your business men a chance. Roll it away and give your schoolmaster, your banker, your labouring man, your manufacturer, your reformers, your civic workers, your philanthropist a chance. Give your son and daughter a chance. Chase away the ghost of fear from the brain of your wife.

Roll away the stone and give the Master a chance.—The Amethyst.

UNIQUE REQUEST OF LABOUR COUNCIL

Want "Fair Wage" Clause Inserted in Constitution of Board of Education

At the meeting of the School Board last evening a communication was received from the Labour Council of Peterborough, in which they express the desire to have a "Fair Wage" clause inserted in the constitution of the Board. The proposed clause would affect all work carried out by the Board, including the building of the two new schools. The Board was not inclined to take the suggestion seriously and decided to leave the matter in the hands of the Building Committee.

NOTICE

IN THE SURROGATE COURT OF THE COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH, IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF THE LATE EMMA DUMONTET, LATE OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH, IN THE COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH, WIDOW, DECEASED.

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to Statute L, George the Fifth, Chapter 24, Section 56, that all persons having claims against the estate of the late Emma Dumontet, deceased, who died on or about the 24th day of December, A.D., 1911, are required to send by post prepaid or to deliver to the undersigned Solicitor for the Executor at his office, 370 Water St., in the City of Peterborough, aforesaid, on or before the first day of May, A.D., 1912, their names, addresses and descriptions and a full statement of the particulars of their claims and the nature of the security, if any, held by them, duly certified to.

And that after the said date the executor will proceed to distribute the assets of the deceased among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which he shall then have received notice, and that he will not be liable for the assets or distribution of any part thereof to any persons of whose claim he shall not then have received notice.

Dated this 16th day of March, A.D., 1912.

OZIAS DE LAPLANTE,
Solicitor for the Executor.

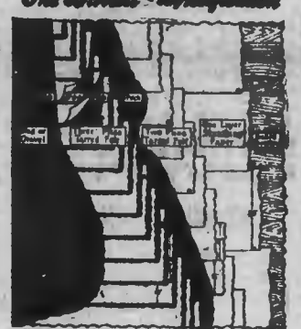
ALL KINDS OF ROOFING

Felt, Gravel, Iron, Slate, etc.

The Barrett 5-ply Construction



The above cut illustrates the Barrett 5-ply Felt and Gravel Roofing, which has proved so successful as a durable Weather Protector and stood the test of years.

A Little Talk on Slate Roofs

1. A slate roof adds greatly to the appearance and thereby to the value of the house.
2. The first cost is the only cost.
3. A slate roof lessens rate of insurance.
4. Wood attracts lightning, slate does not.
5. Slate roof will not collect ice and snow as does a shingle roof.
6. Rafters do not require to be any heavier for a slate roof than for a shingle roof.
7. Slate roof cannot rot or corrode and therefore it is positively the only roof which will last for ever.
8. Slate roofs may be deluged with water, but is dry in a few minutes, while a wooden roof gets waterlogged, grows worse and drives the dampness into your house.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific Slate Roofs have been used and found satisfactory in every locality.

I am prepared to put on any kind of Roofing required and guarantee good work, estimates given if desired.

BILIOUS HEADACHE, BAD BREATH AND SOUR STOMACH WHEN LAZY LIVER AND BOWELS

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, cleansing, too.

Cascarets

REGULATE STOMACH, LIVER & BOWELS

TASTE GOOD—NEVER GRIPE OR SICKEN.

NEW OUTFIT OF UNIFORMS FOR PETERBORO' RANGERS

Will Be Served Out Next Tuesday Night---Regimen Will Go Into Camp on June 6th and Return on 10th---Orders For the Week.

The first drill of the season of the 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers was held last night at the Armouries. A fairly large number turned out, and considerable interest was shown by the men in the manner in which they performed their respective duties. There was a large muster of recruits, and indications are that the companies will soon all be at full strength.

Headquarters, Peterborough, 2nd April, 1912.

Orders by the Officer Commanding 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers.

No. 1—The following extracts from General and Militia Orders are promulgated for the information of the regiment:

Militia Order No. 38, dated 27th January, 1912. Instructions for training, Infantry, City Corps.

The training for each week will be divided into two periods.

(a) Training at regimental headquarters—11 days.

(b) Training at camp of instruction—5 days; total, 16 days.

For this portion of the training, as regards distribution of time, credit will be given on the following scale:

(a) For an evening drill of two hours from the time of falling in until time of dismissal—half a day.

(b) For a forenoon (or afternoon), drill or parade for field exercises, musketry inspection, divine service, etc., of less than 5 hours' duration—half a day.

(c) For a practical tactical exercise of 5 hours' duration—1 day.

Recruit drill, of which there should be at least 10, should be voluntary.

General Orders, No. 28, 6th February, 1912, 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers—To be provincial Lieutenants: Sergeants Benjamin Howes, Meyers and Cyril Karl Lech, 2nd January, 1912.

No. 2—Instruction for training for city corps in the active Militia for 1912 have been issued with Militia Order No. 38 on 27th January, 1912. These instructions will govern all drill for 1912. The course prescribed for each training day will require two successive nights.

No. 3—The regiment will fall in promptly hereafter at 8 p.m. on each drill night, and attention is called to the order to be observed re "falling in." This will be the same as set for the Regimental Order No. 5, dated 11th April, 1910.

FOR RECRUITS.

No. 4—Practice with the sub target will be carried on at the Armouries from this date as follows:

Wednesday, April 3rd, at 8 p.m.—Co. H.

Thursday, April 4th, at 8 p.m.—Co. G.

Monday, April 8th, at 8 p.m.—Co. F.

The practice will be under the direction, instruction and supervision of Sergeant Instructor Fletcher, R.C.D.

A FIVE DAYS' CAMP.

The annual trip of the regiment, which this year will take the form of a five days' camp at Kingston, will be held in June, commencing June 6th, and concluding on June 10th. All the city corps of this division, including Belleville, Kingston, etc., will go into camp on the same date. The rural district regiments will camp at a later date.

A brand new outfit of uniforms will be served out to 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers next drill night.

At the conclusion of last night's parade, Nos. 6 and 7 Companies were entertained to an informal smoker.

No. 6 Company will hold their annual dance on April 15th.

ST. ANDREW'S CONGREGATION ORDER FINE NEW ORGAN

In accordance with authority given them by a recent congregational meeting the Organ committee of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church has placed an order for a new pipe organ with the well-known Karn-Morris organ builders of Woodstock.

The organ will consist of 92 registers, made up of 40 speaking stops, 25 tablet couplers, 27 pistons and mechanical accessories. The stops run for the most part to 68 notes. There will be a great organ, swell organ, choir organ, solo organ and pedal organ. This ordinarily means a four-manual organ, but the St. Andrew's organ will be played on three-manuals, the solo organ being a floating organ, which means that it can be played on any manual.

The action will be electro-pneumatic, which will permit of the console to be placed at any distance from the organ without in anyway impairing the immediate response of the instrument. The wind pressure will vary between 3 1-2 inch, 4 inch, 7 inch and 10 inch prasure. The power will be supplied by an electric motor.

The organ will be modern and complete in every detail and the congregation and committee are to be congratulated on taking the position that the best is none too good. They are doing a bit of pioneer work in Peterborough, which will be generally appreciated.

IN REGARD TO THE TREE CONTRACT

Peterborough, April 3rd.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me in the interests of the minority of this city to offer a protest to the way some business is done by our city fathers, and to thank Ald. Duffus for the assistance he gave me in the tree contract for the King Edward park.

At the meeting of the Property committee they awarded the contract, of trees, to Mr. Frank Wise. I was not disappointed, as I did not expect it, unless through belonging to the same ward as the chairman of the Property committee, but so did Mr. Wise, who digs with a different foot, and I suppose a better foot for planting trees.

I thought the tree affair was settled until last night, when I noticed it came up again, Ald. Brown and Gordon proposing to give the contract to Mr. Porter, with only Ald. Duffus supporting it. Mr. Porter likely belongs to his ward, which frees his (Duffus') conscience from any charge of not favouring his own colour. And it might hurt his business if he raised his gentle voice in my favour. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours truly,

BERNARD WELSH.

ITEMS FROM CITY COUNCIL

This is the Council's chorus for its next meeting:

Every time we take our bill to town
The committee starts kicking the measure aroun',
We don't care if it makes power magnates frown,
They've gotta quit kicking our Bill aroun'.

Hon. Adam Beck's salutation of "what are you fellows here for" was not very promising.

A prominent citizen remarked recently that the Mayor had asked the citizens to clean the ice and slush from the sidewalks, but at the same time there were some crossings that needed attention.

The disposal of the garbage by-law, the defining of the Sanitary Inspector's duties and the appointment of that official is a task off the Property committee's hands that has been for some months a knotty problem, and the committee will doubtless be glad that they have been passed through the Council.

That the spirit of the suffragettes manifests itself more benignly than in London, is shown by the presence of the ladies as a deputation for the Health Association. Another thing was revealed—that the husband in official harness, robed with official dignity, is far different from average modest submission or sometimes apologetic husband. After Mrs. Landry and Mrs. Travers had presented their views, the Mayor in his official capacity and with the unconscious dignity and authority office confers, demanded of Mrs. Bradburn what she had to say. In contrast with the fact that in the average domestic establishment, the lady of the house generally has her say without any prompting or inviting, official or otherwise.

The Council sat until after half past eleven Monday night before they completed the business at hand. Following this Mayor Bradburn and Ald. Gordon were seen Tuesday morning about half past five wending their way south on George street to the C. P. R. station to catch the 5.51 a.m. train for Toronto. With City Clerk Armstrong they went to Toronto to attend the Private Bills session when the city's bill came up. These late and early hours go to show that the city's business is at time exacting.

GIVING UP FARMING

APSLEY, APRIL 3.—Mr. George A. Bullied, who has resided in Chandos, near Apsley, for over 30 years, has given up farming and removed to Coe Hill, where he has leased the Temperance House, near the station, which he intends to refit and refurnish throughout, when visitors to that Village will find a comfortable and up-to-date stopping place. Mr. Bullied will be missed in this locality, as he was always ready and willing to help in every cause for the good of the community. He was a working member in the Agricultural Society, for many years as a director, Vice-President and President; a director in the cheese factory, and also the Telephone Co. The respect in which he and his family were held was shown on Thursday night last, when the members of the Ladies' Aid together with a large number of other friends, drove up to his residence and presented each member of the family with a handsome gift, accompanied by a suitable address. After a pleasant evening of singing and conversation, lunch was served. "Blest be the tie that Binds" was then sung and the visitors departed with farewells and every good wish for their friends in their new home.

Friday, the day of the sale, was bright and warm, and before noon between 200 and 300 people had gathered to invest in stock and implements, bidding was brisk and at five o'clock everything was sold. Good prices were realized, the proceeds amounting to about $1,000.00. A valuable team of matched horses was not sold, otherwise the proceeds would have been a great deal more.

WEDDING BELLS

INNIS—SWEET.

Samuel Innis, of Haliburton County, was married yesterday afternoon to Miss Elva Maud Sweet of this city, by Rev. R. Pogue at St. Paul's Church Manse. They will reside in Haliburton.

CAMPBELL—THROOP.

The wedding was quietly solemnized on Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock of Mr J. H. Campbell, of Peterborough, to Miss May Throop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Throop, Lock street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of the Murray Street Baptist Church. Mr. Burton Throop was best man, while the bridesmaid was Miss Mina Throop, and the flower-girl, Miss Helen Throop. After the ceremony, some thirty-five guests sat down to a delightful dejeuner. The bride and groom received a number of useful and valuable presents, including a handsome clock from the employees of the Armature Department of the C.G.E. The guests consisted only of the relatives of the contracting parties, and included Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Throop and their daughter, Edith, of Cobourg, and Miss Mary Goody of Cobourg, a cousin of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left on a wedding trip to Toronto, Hamilton, and Niagara Falls. On their return, they will reside at 104 Lock St.

THOMPSON—MARTIN.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Knox Church Manse at 7.30 last evening, when Mr. John Herbert Thompson, late of the Review staff, and Miss Alberta Martin were united in marriage by the Rev. R. J. Keith. The bride was given away by her brother.

After the ceremony supper was served at the home of the bride's parents at the corner of King and Park Sts., and at 9 o'clock the bridal couple left for Port Hope and other points.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will reside in Ottawa.

RAILWAY NOTES

Frankman Brothers of Transcona, Man., have started unloading steel near St. Bonafice for the new Grand Trunk Pacific approach to Winnipeg.

Owing to the difficulty of obtaining a sufficient number of skilled workmen at Winnipeg, the contractors who are building the Grand Trunk Pacific through the Rocky Mountains west of Edmonton, have been forced to employ a number of American labourers from Minneapolis and adjacent centres in the United States.

The Government of Saskatchewan proposes to extend the time of construction of all railways for which it has guaranteed bonds. An additional year has been granted for the construction of lines which were to have been completed last December, and a year more for those which were to be completed on an additional 850 miles, bringing up the total guarantee of the province to 2,505 miles.

It is rumored that the Grand Trunk Railway intends to relieve the congestion in Hamilton by locating large yards at Stoney Creek, where it will also erect a round house and repair shops. For the past few years the congestion of the Stuart and Cannon street yards has seriously interfered with the handling of freight and although the report says that these will not be abandoned, they will be used chiefly to look after business from the centre of the city and small freight business in the east end while the new yards will take care of the big traffic in the industrial annex.

Mr. A. O. Wheeler, the well-known typographer who was for many years connected with the Department of the interior at Ottawa, was in Montreal recently conferring with the officials of the Grand Trunk Pacific Ry. regarding the mountain division of that line through the Canadian Rockies.

Mr. Wheeler spent three months last summer in the territory from the east entrance of the Rockies to the Grand Forks Valley, and made an exhaustive topographical survey of the mountain fastness for use of the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Alpine Club. He was accompanied by one of the best mountain photographers in America, and the material that he has secured gives one an idea of the great attractions that the new route will open to the tourist, and Alpine climber.

In conversation with Mr. Wheeler he states that the route is one of scenic grandeur, and there are parts that contain more variety of mountain scenery than can be found in any other part of the world, such as Burg Lake and the valley of the Thousand Falls near Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, the resplendent valley to the north of Mount Robson and the beautiful Maligne Lake district south of the Athabasca and reached by trail from Fitzhugh.

RESTLESS LIFE OF NEW YORK SCORED

Very Air of City Savors of Overwork, Worry and Rush

NEW YORK, April 3.—Dr. Edward Livingston Hunt, Professor of Nervous Diseases in Columbia University, scored "New York life" the other evening. He said the very air of the city savours of overwork, restlessness, and lack of sleep. The length of life is much shortened by the New Yorker's manner of living, which narrows his field of vision and is a menace to his success in every way, the doctor declared.

"There is a tendency to overwork even in the schools," the speaker said. "And there is a tendency among women to overestimate their strength. People here do not sleep enough. They don't realize what right living means.

"Worry is overwork of the most disastrous kind, leading to a diminution of nerve force and degeneracy of the blood vessels of the brain and the value of fresh air and freedom from noise are not realized."

BUILT UP

How Richmond Hill (N. Y.) Man Got Rid of Colds.

The best time to do things is right when they need to be done.

That is why we are urging you to build yourself up right now, before spring passes. If you are weak and worn out, nervous and miserable, you ought not to delay another day, but start now to taking Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil. The longer you wait, the more unnecessary trouble you have.

We say "unnecessary" because we know Vinol will build you up and make you strong. Here is what M. E. Leggett of Richmond Hill, N. Y., says: "Last spring when I was badly run down and had a cold I used Vinol with the greatest satisfaction. It not only cured the cold but built up my strength and made me feel much better than I had for a long time."

There is no risk—we guarantee Vinol to give satisfaction, and you get your money back if it does not. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

OPENING ON SATURDAY

The Gordon-Davies Company will open their meat store in the H. P. Kennedy building near the Royal theatre on Saturday, April 6th. The first notice of their coming to Peterborough was given in these columns about two weeks ago. The store is being made ready for occupation and is certainly well equipped and located for a meat store. Mr. Davies is in the city today looking after the work of preparing for the opening on Saturday. Mr. Wm. McCracken will be the local manager.

WILL PRESENT PRIZES.

To Public School Winners of Canadian Club's History Essays.

The presentation of the Canadian Club prizes for Canadian history will be presented to the public school winners to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock in the Central School.

Choose Your Hat To Suit Your Style

In choosing the hat for midsummer wear bear in mind a few practical considerations. First, will it fade? Unless you feel that you can buy another before the season is over it is better to be a bit conservative as to colour than to have to wear an anaemic, forlorn looking bonnet through the end of the season. The taffeta and chiffon covered models are being highly recommended on this account, because the covering can be removed when soiled, and, presto! you have a new hat.

Study your style and your face carefully before you venture into the emporiums of bewitching, bewildering millinery. And whereas it is permissible, nay, desirable, to match your suit or your gown or your coat, be particular not to match your face. You have seen them, I'm sure—women whose hats matched their faces.

If your face inclines to the broad, heavy type fight shy of the broad, squatty hat of no particular outline.

If your face is narrow and thin, beware of the hats that turn either up or down at the sides, and eschew wings, especially if your nose is inclined to be sharp.

If your chin is a good, strong chin, but with a slight tendency to protrude a little beyond the line of classic beauty, do not exaggerate it by a head covering that hugs your brow and sweeps out boldly behind.

Notice the curve of your lips and the line of your eyebrows. If your mouth droops do not accentuate it by drooping, pensive brims. If your nose is what small brother calls a "pug," pass by the hat that turns square up in the front.

Only if you are beautiful—perfectly, classically beautiful—may you sally forth, shut your eyes, put anything upon your head, and rejoice.—Chicago Tribune.

RICHARD HALL & SON

THE JEWISH ANALOGUE OF THE CHRISTIAN EASTER

At sundown Monday began the Feast of the Passover, and it will continue until one week from sundown Tuesday night. The solemn observance of this occasion is the most rigid ceremony of the Jewish faith, and wherever the Jews may be, in Palestine, in Russia, or in New York, or Peterborough, their method of observing the occasion is the same. The duty of keeping the Passover is laid down in the twelfth chapter of Exodus, in these words:

"And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to ye and to thy sons forever. And it shall come to pass when your children shall say unto ye, What mean ye by this service? that ye shall say, It is the sacrifice of the Lord's Passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt when He smote the Egyptians and delivered our houses."

For thousands of years the Jews have been keeping the Passover wherever they were allowed to do so, but for centuries they were not allowed to worship in many European countries, and even to-day they perform the sacred ceremonies at imminent peril in some parts of the world.

The ordinary explanation of the open door at the Passover is that it is a sign that the Prophet Elijah is to visit the home. The true reason, however, is that the door is open so that the Gentile may be convinced there are no dark rites being practised. For hundreds of years the Jews had to live under the charge that at the Feast of the Passover the blood of Christian children was shed, and that it was used in making the unleavened bread. It is not very long ago since there was a fierce riot in a Hungarian town because the Christians were persuaded that the Jewish butcher of the place had slaughtered a child. The Jews sought to placate their persecutors by throwing open the doors, and even in times and places where they run no risk of being interfered with the open door is often to be noticed.

Pesach is the name the Jews give to the Passover, and it begins of the fourteenth day of the month of Nisan, because in the Holy Land the barley begins to ripen in this month. It is the first month of their religious year, and the seventh of their civil year. When the Jews dwelt in the Holy Land it was incumbent on all the males to go to Jerusalem to keep the feast, and to take their offerings with them. On the fourteenth day of Nisan the Pascal lamb was slain in memeory of the lamb their forefathers were commanded to slay, and whose blood was sprinkled on the door posts, so that the Angel of the Lord would "pass over" while slaying the first-born of all the Egyptians. On the day of the beginning of the Passover it is the duty of all the first-born male Jews above the age of thirteen to fast, and on this account the Passover is sometimes called the "Feast of the First-born." Another name for it is the "Feast of Unleavened Bread."

The significance of the unleavened bread will be understood when the anxiety of the Egyptians to get rid of the Jews is recalled. The Jews were hurried away so fast that the women did not have time to make their bread in the ordinary way, but were compelled to make their dough before it was leavened. Of this dough they afterward baked their unleavened bread, and it became a sacred symbol to them ever afterward. Through the entire Passover the Jews are most scrupulous to eat nothing leavened, and they will not even allow an leaven to remain in their homes durig the festival. The night before the Passover is sometimes called the "Evening for Searching for Leaven," for the Jews carefully go through their larder in order to throw out any food that has been leavened. The first two days of the Passover and the last two are the most important in the eyes of the orthodox Jew, the intervening four days being merely half-holidays.

The most imposing ceremony of the eight days is the Seder, or ordered banquet. The table is prepared scrictly in accordance with the injunction of the Talmud. At this banquet it is necessary for everyone present to drink four cups of wine. The number, four, is suggested by the fact that in recounting the deliverance from Egypt the Bible tells us that God mentioned four different phases: "And I brought you out," "And I delivered you," "And I redeemed you." "And I took you." In giving the directions for this banquet the Talmud says that the children shall be the chief consideration, and among other things it says: "Hurry the meal on the Passover night so that the little ones should not fall asleep unfed."

30 DAYS IN GAOL FOR WM. KELLY

The strong arm of the law holds no terrors for William Kelly. He came back this morning in much better style than Jim Jeffries did at Reno city. Since his appearance in the police court yesterday, Kelly has been operated upon by a tonsorial artist, with the result that his face was entirely free of vegetation when he faced the magistrate this morning. The back benchers gasped in astonishment at the transformation, and even his Worship failed to recognise the man whom he has had to deal with on three occasions within the past two weeks.

Kelly addressed the court in his usual manner and endeavoured to explain the cause of his predicament. He received a small loan from a friend yesterday and proposed using it to pay his transportation expenses to parts unknown, but he fell by the wayside. He was charged with being drunk in a public place. This, coupled with the fact that he was out on suspended sentence, earned for him a fine of $10, with an option of 30 days in gaol thrown in. Unless Kelly's friends come to the rescue he will become a ward of the county gaol for a month.

Will Walk to Campbellford.

A man named Turner, purporting to hail from Orillia, pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk in a public place. He was on his way to Campbellford where work awaited him on the Trent Canal. So great was his desire to shake the dust of Peterborough from his feet, that he announced his intention of walking to Campbellford if the Magistrate would allow him to depart in peace. He was discharged with a warning.

CONDITIONS BETTER FOR MISSIONARIES

That the Methodist missionary work in Chengtu is now on a sounder basis is made evident by a letter received from the Rev. Dr. Kilbourne, dated Chung King, Feb. 6th, and published yesterday in the Brockville Times.

Dr. Kilbourne writes: Mr. Stewart plans to return to Chengtu from here before the end of this month. Prospects are getting more hopeful for work by the selling of this part of the country so that our work may be resumed in all the departments. For this we frequently hope and pray. Our work, however, is not all stopped because of the absence of our foreign missionaries, not by any means. Rumour tells of great activity and faithfulness on the part of the native Church during the absence of the missionaries.

Dr. Kilbourne will return to Chengtu at once.

HIGHLY RECOMMENDS NEW FIRM

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As per press reports of last week I have disposed of my fixtures and lease of my store, situated at 340 George street, Peterborough, to the Gordon-Davies Co'y., Limited, of Toronto.

I have much pleasure in stating to the citizens of Peterborough that I have had considerable dealings during the past two years with the said Company; in fact I have supplied them largely, during the summer months from the Toronto market with all classes of live stock for their stores in Haileybury, Porcupine and Golden City, where they carry on a large business, as well as several retail stores in Toronto.

I can assure all the customers who dealt with me at 340 George street, in the past, the best possible service, and would consider it a favour if all of my past customers would give them a fair share of their patronage, and I feel satisfied that a few trial orders will convince everyone that this Company is prepared to cater to all classes of trade in a most satisfactory manner.

I am also pleased to state that the two principal members of this Company, Mr. W. E. Davies and Mr. J. R. Gordon are both practical men in the Meat and Provision business; and from past experience can confidently state that they will edeavour in every way to handle only the very best quality of meats and to serve the public in the most up-to-date manner. I have the pleasure to remain,

Yours respectfully
H. P. KENNEDY.

Toronto, April 2, 1912.

PUTS THROUGH A BIG DEAL

Mr. Fred Whitcroft is Making Success in the West

The many friends of Mr. Fred Whitcroft, the former Peterborough hockey player, and now Second Vice-President of MacGrath Holgate, Limited, real estate and financial brokers, Edmonton, will be interested in learning that he has just put through one of the largest financial propositions on record in Edmonton. On the 28th of February Mr. Whitcroft paid $10,000 for a 60-day option on some property, known as the New Hagmann estate, at a price of $600,000. He immediately put the proposition on the market, and within ten days had sold ove. $200,000 worth. It is expected that he will clean up for his firm $200,000 on the transaction when completed.

EASTER VACATIONS

Begin To-day and First Signs Have Been Seen

The Easter vacation period begins to-day and for the next ten days students at the schools and universities will have an opportunity of enjoying a reasonable rest.

This morning a large number of the boys attending the Geeve Preparatory School at Lakefield, passed through the city on their way to their respective homes.

The Separate schools in the city will close this afternoon and the Public Schools and Collegiate Institute to-morrow. At the latter institution the students are finishing the writing of their Easter examinations.

The Peterborough students at the various universities will begin to arrive home to-night and to-morrow, after an absence since Christmas. There will probably be inroads into the larders at the students' home after the three months of dining in boarding houses or at the college tables. The fatted calf will be figuratively killed and a generous fare will surely be provided by these parents particularly who have been over the same ground their hopefuls are now travelling. Possibly the Easter vacation is designed principally to enable the students to "pull through" until the close of the midsummer term.

EXHIBITION REPEATED

Y. W. C. A. Girls Score Another Big Success

The gymnasium exhibition by the Y. W. C. A. members, under the direction of Miss Coventry, the physical director, which was given with so much success on Friday night last, was repeated last night in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, where a large audience was delighted with the programme, and the clever work of the members. Miss Coventry is to be congratulated upon the fine performance given by those under her charge. The programme was a striking demonstration of the success of her methods. All the different classes did exceptionally well, last night, seniors and juniors alike coming in for warm praise from the audience. Miss Coventry was made the recipient of two beautiful bouquets and was also presented with a handsome brass clock as a mark of the esteem in which she is held.

Will Visit Toronto And Look Into Workings Of Penny Bank

May Adopt the Scheme in Peterborough---Board of Education Met Last Night in Regular Session---Public Schools of the City Will Close on Thursday Noon.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening in the Board room. The business transacted was light, and of a routine character. Those present were Mr. John Crane, chairman, Messrs. V. Eastwood, B. F. Ackerman, R. Fair, Dr. Burnham, T. H. Adams, Dr. Morrison and W. H. Hill

Communications Received.

Two communications were received from Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, one asking for a grant of $50.00 towards the purchase of new books for the Collegiate Institute Library, and the other referred to the new science instruments which the Board decided to purchase some time ago.

It was moved by Mr. Hill, seconded by Mr. Fair that the sum of $50 be granted towards the maintenance of the Collegiate Institute Library.

As regards the second communication of Mr. Kenner's, Dr. Morrison stated that steps had been taken to have the instruments purchased at once.

A letter was received from Miss Jean Kennedy of Pontypool, applying for a position as teacher on the Public School staff.

A letter from Miss Brown, accepting a similar position was also received.

A letter from Mr. Neal of the Public School teaching staff, enclosing his resignation, was left in the hands of the Chairman.

The appointment of a delegate to the Teachers' convention, which will take place in Toronto, on April 9th, was also left in the hands of the Chairman.

It was moved by Mr. Eastwood, and seconded by Mr. Hill, that the Property Committee be given power to receive tenders for the purchasing of fuel supplies for the ensuing year.

Mr. John Crane, Mr. V. Eastwood, and Inspector Mowat were appointed as a committee to look into the Penny Savings Bank system, as adopted in Toronto, with a view to introducing the system here.

Closing of the Schools.

It was moved by Mr. Hill that the Public Schools of the city close on Thursday at noon, and reopen one week from Easter Monday.—Carried.

Dr. Morrison introduced the question of opening the doors of the school a few minutes earlier than is customary. In stormy weather the children who arrive early are compelled to remain outside until fifteen minutes to nine o'clock.

Inspector Mowat favoured the idea of having the doors opened at 8.30. Mr. Fair thought that the trouble rested with the janitors. Mr. Hill and Dr. Morrison concurred in this opinion.

It was decided to have the doors of the school opened at 8.30, and Inspector Mowat was instructed to see that the matter was looked after.

Are Opposed to Site.

A resolution was received by the Board in which a number of the ratepayers of East City desired to be placed on record as being opposed to the Armour site, upon which the new East Ward school will be erected.

It was moved by Mr. Fair, that the matter be left in the hands of the Building Committee.

Mr. Hill moved in amendment that the resolution be received—Carried.

An Advisory Committee, composed of six members of the School Board and six non-members will be selected to act in that capacity in the approaching commercial examinations, which will take place in the Collegiate Institute.

Monies Received.

WHAT DOES BALD MEAN

When you see a man with a bald head you know he has had a scalp disease and that he neglected caring for his hair or he would not have been bald. So many people have a scalp disease and neglect it, because it don't pain them at the time. The disease is commonly called dandruff, it is a certain hair destroyer and means baldness sooner or later. No man or woman should have dandruff. Sagaine is a sure dandruff germ killer and W. J. Kent sells it with his personal guarantee to give entire satisfaction or money back. Only 50c. a large bottle from W. J. Kent, or direct, all charges prepaid from F. V. Marion, Bridgeburg, Ont.

LOCAL TALENT PUTTING ON OPERETTA.

The pretty operetta "Sylvia" in two acts, will be given by the Sodality of St. Peter's Cathedral in aid of the T. A. S. building fund on Monday evening, April 15th. Rehearsals have been so successful that it has been decided to have it appear in the Grand Opera House. The cast of characters includes some very excellent talent and the citizens of Peterborough are sure of seeing one of the finest local productions in the city in some time.

WHAT IS PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY?

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In the Review of last evening I notice a brief reference to a sermon delivered at the Charlotte street Methodist church by Rev. C. E. Cragg of the Mark street Methodist church. The report states that the preached "delivered a strong, urgent appeal for the carrying out of a more practical Christianity in every-day life." I should like to know what the reverend gentleman means. He is a member of the Protestant Federation, whose secret meetings he has attended within the past three months. Now what does he mean by an "appeal for more practical Christianity?" Is it "practical Christianity" to conspire behind closed doors against the religion of a third of the community, or does he feel that his pulpit ministrations are not sufficient to promote "practical Christianity." Is it necessary for a man to advance "practical Christianity" and show Christian charity, to enter and abet an organization that, under the cloak of solicitude for religion, prostitutes religion to the promotion of the interests of the cheapest kind of partisan politics? Is this consistent with right views of what "practical Christianity" is? It may be practical politics, but it does not seem to me to be "practical Christianity."

Yours, etc.,
INQUIRER.

THE ROYAL-ROYAL BANK REPORT

There lies on the Examiner's desk a bank report that is royal in a double sense—royal as regards its elaborate elegance of form and contents and as the forty-second report of the Royal Bank of Canada. It is not anything like the dry-as-dust, ordinary bank report. It is a handsome octavo booklet of 88 pages, in extent; but something like a reference library in the fullness and amplitude of its contents. A glance at the statement presented at the last annual meeting shows the Royal Bank to be as sound and solid financially as it is alert and enterprising in a business sense. Of the authorized capital of the Royal Bank of $25,000,000 there is paid up $6,201,980, and the Reserve Fund is $7,000,000, or nearly a million in excess of the paid-up capital. The total deposits amounted last year to $89,264,893, and as against these the total assets are $110,523,512 or more than $20,000,000 in excess of the deposits, the growth of assets during the year amounting to $18,000,000. The wide range of the bank's business is shown by the list of branches, principally in Canada, but to be found in every part of the North American continent and islands. The list of shareholders includes names from Halifax to Vancouver and in Great Britain and the United States.

The latter part of this bank report de luxe, contains a veritable mine of statistical information, covering the area, revenue and expenditure of the Dominion; parliamentary elections; bank clearing returns; investment of capital in Canada; world and Canadian wheat production; grain and field crops in Canada; complete trade summary; imports and exports; mineral and forest production; traffic returns; figures relating to insurance, failures and wholesale prices; immigration and census statistics, etc., etc., and an abridged customs' tariff, followed by a financially romantic history of the rapid progress of the Royal Bank. Accompanying the report is a useful folding map of the Dominion, giving in colour completed, building and project transcontinental railway lines. The Royal Bank is represented in Peterborough by the agency capably presided over by Mr. V. Eastwood.

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Arnprior, P.O., writes: "Seven of our little children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house and recommend it as the king of all remedies. I was formerly completely ignorant of proprietaries by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

MUST PAY TAXES.

A resolution, passed at the last regular meeting of the City Council, demanding the return of the Collector's roll, not later than the 15th of April. Those who have not paid their taxes will please do so at once, and save legal expenses.

FAMOUS TRAGEDIES that BALKED SOLUTION

Some Celebrated Crimes in Which Women Were the Victims and Which, Refuting the Adage That "Murder Will Out," Would Give Poe Material for Other Marie Rouget Studies. The Baffling Ryan and Annie Martin Cases.

(Copyright, 1912 by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

A CITY of unsolved mysteries is New York—a great seething whirlpool of humanity where men and women go down out of sight, vanish as completely as though their physical bodies had been dissipated. Murders are committed within a stone's throw of the lighted highways and the stories behind the crimes are never unravelled, the person who committed the crime never so much as suspected. A bolt from the sky might have caused the death of the victim, so completely lost are all traces of the murderer.

Since the baffling murder of Mary Cecilia Rogers, on which was based Edgar Allen Poe's famous story "The Mystery of Marie Roget," New York has been the scene of an unbroken string of mysterious murders and disappearances, in most of which a woman has figured.

It was on a Sunday afternoon, July 25, 1841, that Mary Rogers, known in New York as "the pretty cigar girl," met her fate. The mystery of her death in the woods west of Elysian Fields, Hoboken, has never been solved and year by year since then the list of tragedies which have successfully challenged police investigation has grown. Those expert in the tracing of crime say that where a woman is concerned it is more difficult to solve the mystery because of more complex motives and often because of the difficulty in establishing a true motive.

One of the most famous cases which has occurred within the memory of the present day newspaper readers was that of Mary and Nicholas Ryan, who were killed on December 22, 1873, in their home, at No. 204 Broome street.

An Air of Gentility.

When Nicholas and Mary, brother and sister, applied to Mrs. Patrick Burke for a single room in her apartment in the building in Broome street she noticed immediately that they seemed not to fit with their surroundings. There was an unmistakable air of gentility about them which suggested that they had not always been obliged to live in a single room on the fourth floor of a tenement house. Their language was not that of the men and women about them, and their appearance of refinement, their delicate hands and features were signs that they had been used to luxury. The two lodgers became the source of much mysterious gossip between Mrs. Burke and her friends.

Nicholas gave it out that by trade he was a shoemaker, and Mary said that she was a "gaiter fitter," employed by Burt & Co. in their store in Thomas street. Each month the rent for the single room was paid promptly, and the mysterious roomers evaded all Mrs. Burke's cunning inquiries. In the room which they occupied were a single walnut bedstead and a new horsehair sofa, which were separated at night by a large screen, serving as a partition. The room was the sitting room, sleeping room and kitchen, but the brother and sister seemed to be very comfortable there, they never quarrelled and each was always doing something for the comfort of the other.

Mary Ryan seemed particularly out of place among the Italians, Russians and other foreigners of a low class among whom she lived in the tenement. She had the bearing of one accustomed to command. Her figure was slight and considered beautiful and she carried herself with dignity. Black hair and blue eyes, a combination peculiar to peoples of Celtic origin, and a clear, pinkish complexion added to her beauty and attractiveness.

They seemed very much alone, and in fact it was noticed that they received but one visitor. This was a young man somewhat resembling Nicholas Ryan in appearance and seemed to Mrs. Burke to be from the same class of society to which she believed her lodgers to belong. This young man was always well dressed and gave the impression that he was in customary for the three to walk out together. Much curiosity was aroused by the visits of this young gentleman and his actions were closely followed by Mrs. Burke, who seems to have been inordinately interested in the Ryans, as is the custom of most landladies.

The visitor seemed quite as familiar and affectionate with Nicholas as he did good circumstances. He sometimes left the building with Mary Ryan, but more often went away in the company of Nicholas, and on Sunday afternoon it was with Mary, and in no way could their actions have shown that they were more than three good friends and been companions. It was generally believed in the neighborhood that the strange visitor was some member of the Ryans' family who alone was true to them in adversity which had been brought about by some family quarrel. Nothing ever occurred to substantiate this theory, and the identity of the mysterious stranger and the purpose of his visits to the house in Broome street remain as great a puzzle as does the reason for the crime which followed.

On the morning of December 22, 1873, a policeman passing the house at half-past two o'clock in the morning heard shouts of "Police! Murder! Help!"

In a second every window in the front of the six story brick tenement in which the Ryans lived was thrown open violently and heads began to appear. Several women screamed and the policeman dashed into the building.

The cries of murder came from an upper story, but there were stains on the bannisters and the lower steps of the stairway which gave unmistakable signs of the crime. On the landing of the second story the policeman found the body of a man, clad only in an undershirt, lying head downward on the stairs, but the outcry upstairs continued. By this time three more policemen had arrived, and all four hurried to the fourth floor, where Patrick Burke led them to the room the Ryans had occupied. On the bed which Mary Ryan used lay her body. Her throat had been cut, and there were marks on the throat showing that she had been strangled. There was no sign of a struggle in the room. The clothes of the two occupants were laid neatly over the backs of chairs. No furniture was displaced. The bed in which Nicholas had slept looked as though he had leaped out of it, throwing the sheets and blankets over the footboard. Trinkets, such as a lady's watch and chain, a gold mounted pencil and pearl studs, strengthened the belief that the brother and sister had not been the poverty stricken persons they had seemed. The idea arose that they had been hiding from something. What could it have been? That was the question which occupied the minds of police and private investigators. The affair began to look like a deep laid plot. It was shown that robbery could not have been the motive.

"The Policeman Climbed Onto the Chair and Confirmed the Hairdresser's Story."

The story of the mysterious visitor offered a clew, and when the police learned that Nicholas and Mary had a brother, Patrick Ryan, living in Brooklyn they had little doubt that he would prove to be the man who had so often called at the house in Broome street. Patrick Ryan, the brother, was sought out. He held an executive position in a firm of shoe manufacturers and said that Nicholas, who was a sober and constant young man, had at one time worked under him. He denied that there had been any family troubles which had forced Mary and Nicholas to live as they did, and said that since the death of their mother they had been very poor.

But what most seriously upset the theory of the police was that Patrick Ryan was not the visitor who had so frequently been seen with the Ryans. The one occasion on which he had seen Nicholas and Mary since they had taken the room from Mrs. Burke was on the very night of the murders. He with his two children had taken tea with the brother and sister in their little room. They had all left the building together, but parted at the corner of the street. Patrick had called after Nicholas, saying:—

"What are you going to do with Mary while you are visiting with your girl? Tell us who she is, anyway."

Nicholas had only laughed at this remark, and Mary had waved her hand at Patrick and the children. Patrick had no idea who the frequent visitor could be. He was sure that neither of the dead persons would have committed suicide. There was no reason why they should. They were not destitute, for they had several hundred dollars in two savings banks.

Another Puzzling Question.

This led to another puzzling question. The bank books showed that they had made recent deposits very regularly and had been living far within their earnings, which were decently large. Why then had they lived in such miserable quarters? All who were interested in the case were asking these questions. None doubted that there was some subtle plot behind it all. Then it was learned that Nicholas Ryan had always worn a very heavy, fine gold watch. This was missing, and it appeared that after all robbery might have been the motive for the crime. Suspicion was cast upon the inmates of the building, but presently Jenny Burke, daughter of the woman who let the room to the Ryans, found the man's vest on the roof, the gold watch in one of its pockets. Stains and marks showed that the murderer himself must have fled by way of the roof, yet as far as the street door another trail of marks indicated that he had gone that way. The puzzle seemed absolutely baffling. It was impossible to determine whether the crime was a double murder or whether one of the victims had taken his or her own life.

Another question which was hard to answer was how the body of the man came to be on the stairs two flights below the room where he had slept, and why there had been no sound of a struggle. Patrick Burke had discovered the body of the girl when he had investigated a noise made by the banging of the Ryans' door in the wind.

The only possible supposition was that the mysterious stranger had committed the double crime. He was never seen after the night of the murders. The bartender of a saloon in Broome street testified that on the night of the tragedy a man, whom she did not recognize, by description, entered the saloon and asked for a drink of whiskey. He was in a state of great excitement, and his hand shook so that he spilled whiskey on his overcoat. But there the trail ended.

"On the Landing of the Second Story the Policeman Found the Body of a Man."

It is supposed that the mysterious stranger was Mary Ryan's lover and that he had refused to marry her. It is probable that he was threatened with exposure and was a lawyer, and, fearing the result, had entered the Ryan room with the express intent to murder the girl. Nicholas must have wakened and attacked the man and been killed while pursuing him on the dark stairs. It is even probable that the murderer intended to despatch Nicholas as well as his sister, on the principle that dead men tell no tales.

For months the man who had stopped in the Broome street saloon to take a drink of whiskey was sought throughout the country, but who he was, whether he killed Mary and Nicholas Ryan and whether he was the well dressed visitor who so often called on them will remain among the unanswered questions in the annals of the history of crime in New York.

Quite as strange was the case of Annie Martin, killed January 17, 1880. Annie Martin was thrown on her own resources at an early age and supported herself and her invalid mother by selling bouquets along the Bowery. She was a pretty girl and when young wore her hair short. This gained for her the name of "Curly Tom," by which she was known to her friends until the time of her death. As the girl grew older friends who had been attracted to her when she was a flower girl made it possible for her to find more lucrative employment, and she took a room in a house at No. 111 Prince street, where she lived alone when her mother died.

Annie Martin was a slender girl with raven black hair, an intelligent, attractive face and frank, girlish manners, which made her a favorite with all who made her acquaintance. It was common gossip among her girl friends that she had many offers of marriage, but refused all her suitors.

Without Kith or Kin.

So far as was known, the death of her mother left her without relatives. She lived quietly in the house in Prince street and was seldom visited there by any but girl friends. Men sometimes called for her and took her out, but it was not until within a few days previous to her tragic death that she received any men callers in her apartment. There was one man who frequently called for her and took her out, and so intimate did they become that there was much talk of scandal and many of Annie Martin's friends forsook her because of it.

She always had plenty of money and dressed very stylishly and in costly garments.

On the night of the tragedy Bessie Schneider, a woman employed by Mrs. Smith, the owner of the house, admitted and showed to the room of Annie Martin a man answering the description of the frequent visitor to the Ryans had stopped in his place for a drink of whiskey at about half-past three o'clock. His eyes were stained red and he said that he had been in a fight and hit his man on the nose. He was greatly agitated and his hand shook so that he spilled whiskey on his overcoat. But there the trail ended.

It is supposed that the mysterious stranger was Mary Ryan's lover and that he had refused to marry her. It is probable that he was threatened with exposure and was a lawyer, and, fearing the result, had entered the Ryan room with the express intent to murder the girl. Nicholas must have wakened and attacked the man and been killed while pursuing him on the dark stairs. It is even probable that the murderer intended to despatch Nicholas as well as his sister, on the principle that dead men tell no tales.

She was a pretty girl and when young wore her hair short. This gained for her the name of "Curly Tom," by which she was known to her friends until the time of her death. Annie Martin was a slender girl with raven black hair, an intelligent, attractive face and frank, girlish manners, which made her a favorite with all who made her acquaintance. It was common gossip among her girl friends that she had many offers of marriage, but refused all her suitors.

Without Kith or Kin.

So far as was known, the death of her mother left her without relatives. She lived quietly in the house in Prince street and was seldom visited there by any but girl friends. Men sometimes called for her and took her out, but it was not until within a few days previous to her tragic death that she received any men callers in her apartment. There was one man who frequently called for her and took her out, and so intimate did they become that there was much talk of scandal and Annie's rooms at about half-past eight o'clock. At ten o'clock she returned with a pitcher of ice water and the visitor had departed. The servant was sure of this, for she remained in the room some minutes while Annie Martin gave orders for her breakfast, and she went into the other room on an errand for the young woman.

At ten o'clock Mr. Smieth locked the front door and put the key in his trousers pocket, as was his custom, but he did not bolt the rear door of the house, which could be opened only from the inside. While he and his wife were preparing to retire Annie called over the bannister to Mrs. Smieth, saying that she expected a gentleman to call for her before midnight. The visit was important, she said, and she wished Mrs. Smieth would be sure to call her as soon as the man arrived. She would go down stairs to the sitting room to talk with him.

This was unusual, and Mrs. Smieth did not like the idea of a woman lodger receiving male callers so late at night, and she worried a great deal about it. Besides, she was troubled with rheumatism, and between the pain and expecting a ring at the front door bell at any minute she was unable to go to sleep at all that night. Her room was directly under that of the Martin girl, and after the lodger had called to her about the midnight visitor she heard no one so much as walk across the floor of the room. No one in the house opened the door to admit any person that night, and the front door remained locked, the key in Mr. Smieth's pocket.

She Is Murdered.

Bessy Schneider was the first inmate of the house astir in the morning. She had to borrow Mr. Smieth's key to open the front door when she went out to wash the front steps. While she was engaged in this task Bertha Levy, a hairdresser, asked her if Miss Martin was in. Bessy knew the girl as a hairdresser who was often called into service by Miss Martin, and told her to go upstairs, the front door being open. A few minutes later Bertha Levy, white as a sheet and too frightened even to scream, rushed from the house, and, clutching Bessy by the arm, pointed toward Annie Martin's window. In a few seconds she managed to gasp:—

"She is murdered."

A policeman was called. In the hallway in front of the door to Annie Martin's room a chair had been placed. Bertha Levy explained that she had put it there and stood upon it to look through the transom into the room after repeated knockings had not elicited any response. The policeman climbed onto the chair and confirmed the hairdresser's story. The body of the murdered girl was on the bed, which had been pushed close against a door which led to a rear room. The hall door was locked, as was a door leading to a room at the left. The door against which the bed had been pushed was not locked.

Except the bed, everything in the room was in perfect order. A thin pillow slip from the bed was tied tightly about the girl's neck and had evidently caused her death by strangulation. Contusions, such as might be caused by blows from a fist were visible about her face, but it hardly seemed that there could have been a struggle without so much as the sound of a footfall to be heard by Mrs. Smieth in the room below. It was probable that the girl herself had placed the bed against the door because she feared something. The key to this door was missing.

All the valuable jewelry which Annie Martin owned was in the room, with the exception of a gold watch. In the back of the case of this watch had been a picture. Many of the dead girl's friends had caught glimpses of the picture, but none had examined it closely enough to know whether it was of a man or a woman. Most were of the opinion that it was a photograph of a man.

How the murderer had entered the house and perpetrated the crime without discovery was a mystery. It was evident that he had escaped by way of a rear door, which could be opened from the inside, but not from the outside. This led to an alley at the end of which was a gate opening onto a side street. A padlock and staple which had held the gate fast had been wrenched from the woodwork and lay twisted on the ground.

To find the watch and the man whose picture they believed to be inside the case became the problem which confronted the police. That, they believed, would solve the mystery. In tracing Annie Martin's history they found that before she rented the rooms in Prince street she had moved from one address to another at intervals of a very few weeks, as though she was trying to elude some one who persisted in following her. If this was the man whose picture she carried in her watch, why should she wish to hide from him? One answer seemed to be that she really cared for him, and that despite the stories linking her name with that of the man who was so often seen with her he wished to marry her. She possibly refused to consent to this because it would spoil his career and ostracize him from society. In a fit of passion brought on by her refusal to marry him when he had sought her out he might have killed her, but this seemed foreign to the nature of a man who was so faithful, even though he might have been mistaken in his faith.

Another theory was that Annie Martin had become despondent because she could not marry the man she loved and whose picture she carried in her watch, and had killed herself.

No Theories Proved.

Neither of these theories exterminated by the police was ever proved or disproved. A still more plausible explanation seemed to be that the murderer was a man whom Annie Martin had promised to marry in her younger days and who was crazed by the thought that she had betrayed and forsaken him. An alibi proved by the constant visitor showed that he could not have committed the crime.

The house in which the murder had occurred was in full view of the Eighth street police station, which added to the mystery of it all. About two years previous to the murder a band of mail robbers had been captured in the same room. "Shang" Quinn was the leader of the band, and it was rumored that he had been a lover of Annie Martin in the years when he was a respectable citizen.

Photographs of "Shang" Quinn were shown to many of Annie Martin's friends in the hope that he might be identified as the man whose picture she had carried in her watch. Quinn, who was in prison, was questioned closely in an attempt to fasten guilt on one of his band, it being supposed that the girl had been killed because it was thought she had given information leading to the arrest and breaking up of the band.

Quinn admitted that he knew her, but said that he bore no enmity toward her, and that she had never known enough about the workings of the mail robbers to have given any valuable information. As a matter of fact, Annie Martin did not play any part in the breaking up of the "Shang" Quinn band and this theory was short lived.

It was generally believed that Annie Martin feared some person from whom she tried to hide by moving continually from one address to another. Why she feared this person remained a matter of mystery, but it is probable that the man who sought her out and who so brutally murdered her was the man whose picture she carried in her watch. With this picture the police believed they could have solved the tragic puzzle, but the photograph had vanished.

There was no key to the door between the corridor and Annie Martin's rear room. There had been a key in the door between her two rooms, but this was missing. The bed had been pushed against the door as though to protect it against opening. The only explanation to be deduced from these bits of evidence seemed to be that the early morning visitor had taken the key to the third door while in the room. He must have known that the hall door of the rear room could not be locked. He must either have been concealed in one of the rooms when Bessie Schneider went there or must have secretly entered the house during the night. How he got in was a question, but it was plain how the murderer had left the premises.

But who was he? Why did he kill Annie Martin?

Catcher E. J. Kelly, a Rank-stop Well Known in Minor League Company Has Been Signed, While Terms Have Been Accepted With Dickenson College Pitcher.

BOTH ARE GOOD MEN

Manager Templin of the Peterborough Canadian League Club has been devoting his attention to building up his battery staff, and he now has a squad of heavers and receivers that will not take a back seat for any team in President Fitzgerald's circuit. Secretary Davidson to-day received the signed contract of Catcher E. J. Kelly, an experienced backstop, with a fine record, and Manager Templin remarks that he was very fortunate in securing him. Kelly commands a fancy figure and will be one of the highest paid men on the team, but he is evidently worth the price that appears on his contract, judging by what "Old Folks" has to say about him. Kelly is a hard worker and full of ginger. He is a splendid man to handle young pitchers, has a good whip and is a consistent hitter. He is 5 ft. 9 in. tall, weighs 165 pounds, and is 28 years of age.

The new Peterborough back-stop made his debut into professional baseball with Wilmington, in the Tri-State League, in 1905. The following year he was with Fall River in the New England League. In 1907, he jumped to Easton of the Outlaw Atlantic League. He was with Greenville in the North Carolina Association in 1908, and with Elizabeth of the Atlantic League in 1909. In 1910 he wore the uniform of the Burlington team of the Indiana-Illinois-Iowa League, but would not report last season, playing independent professional ball. One of the Southern League clubs was after him this year, but Kelly preferred to play ball in the North, and Manager Templin succeeded in corralling him. With Trout, Brode, and Kelly behind the bat, the Petes will be well off for catchers. Manager Templin also reports that he has accepted terms with a crack young college pitcher, Bryan Nork, who, for the past two seasons, has been on the rubber for the Dickenson College team of Carlisle, Pa. Nork pitched for his College the other day against Princeton University, and held the big College team down to four hits, a fine early-season performance. Nork will be in good shape when he reports to Manager Templin, as he will be playing with Dickenson College up to the end of this month.

Templin now has six pitchers signed, and is angling for a seventh, a young New Jersey phenom, who won twenty-nine out of thirty-one games in semi-pro company last season.

"After I get this man," reports the manager, "I am finished, unless I can pick up another first-class man and release one of the others which I am reluctant to do, as they are all good men. I must, however, have the best. The weather is very warm here and I have been getting into good shape. I saw some of my boys work out on Saturday and am very well pleased with the form they showed. Most of them will be in pretty good condition when they land, and it will not take long to pare the squad down to where I want it. I don't intend to have 25 or 30 men report, as other clubs are doing. I can save all this by getting good men, as I have done, and I am now only waiting for the time to come to get at real work."

Following is Peterborough's list, so far:

Catchers — Irwin Trout, Reading, Pa.; Frank Brode, Shenonadoah, Pa., E. J. Kelly, Reading, Pa.

First base—Levi Rothenberg, Boyertown, Pa.

Second base—Curtis H. Templin, manager.

Short-stop —Chas. Tully, Reading, Pa.; Jos. Ulmer, Philadelphia, Pa.

Third baseman — Earl Hartman, Reading, Pa.

Outfield — Jimmy Beard, Reading, Pa.; Willie Schwarts, Reading, Pa.; R. A. Connolly, Newburgh, N.Y.

Colds

Don't trifle with a cold; no one can tell what the end may be. Pneumonia, catarrh, chronic bronchitis and consumption invariably result from neglected colds. Nothing can be compared with as a quick cure for colds and grip, and by its use the more serious ills may be avoided.

READING SPORTING WRITERS LIKE PETERBOROUGH RECRUITS

Papers Speak in High Terms of Some of the Men Manager Templin Has Rounded Up to Wear the Blue and White of the Peterborough Team This Season.

Here is some Reading dope on some of Manager Templins' Peterborough players:

Curtis Templin has accepted an offer to be manager of the Peterborough team, in the Canadian League. Curt played with the Berlin team, in the organization, last season, which nine won the championship. He will give a number of local men a "try-out."

Catcher Irwin Trout who caught a few games for the Reading Tri-state team and who Bill Coughlin says is the makings of a good receiver, will go with Templin. Trout played with the Reading Professionals and other fast teams.

Charles (Babe) Tully, another Reading lad who is showing good form as an infielder, will be given a 'try-out' by Templin. Babe was in the Susquehanna League for a season, where he made good. He could have joined the Carolina Association this year, but preferred to go with the Reading manager.

Basket Ball Player Hartman to Be Given a Chance.

One of the players signed by Manager Templin is Earl Hartman, the Eastern Basket Ball League star, who is as fast on the diamond as he is in the cage. Hartman played sensational ball for the Reading High school team and for local amateur aggregations. He can play almost any position on a team, but is at home at the third base. As a guardian of the difficult corner of the diamond he has few equals among the players in this section. Templin saw him perform and predicts that he will make good.

Beard Playing Professional Ball 12 Years.

Jimmie Beard will start his 12th season on the diamond with Peterborough. Jimmie will pitch and alternate in the outfield. Beard has played in many of the leading minor leagues of the country. Last year for the first time in his 11 years' experience, he only played part of the season. He is in splendid shape and with his long experience should be of great assistance to the Canadian aggregation. Fifteen years ago Beard and Templin were team mates on the champion Reading Brown aggregation.

Willie Schwarts, who was in the Blue Grass League for a season, will cover left field for Peterborough, and is one of the handiest men with the willow ever turned out by this city. Last season he played with various teams of the country and received good money for his services. Schwarts is well built and can cover lots of ground in the outfield.

Harry Scull, who pitched for the Nursery Literary and Social Union aggregation for two seasons is another local youngster who has been gobbled up by Templin. Curt saw Scull pitch against the Reading Tri-state League team last season and knows his ability. While the professionals beat Scull they had to hustle to land on top. He kept them guessing durin gthe entire game.

Shiloh's Cure

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mr. and Mrs. Everson Ritchie have been called away to Montreal, owing to the serious illness of Mr. Ritchie's mother.

Mrs. R. Chown and Mrs. R. P. Bell will not receive to-morrow, but will receive on Wednesday, April 10, and not again this season.

Mr. James Dempsey of Port Arlington, King's County, Ireland, arrived yesterday, on his way to Port Hope to join his brother, William, who has resided in the neighbourhood of the Port for several years.

5 BOXES CURED DOBBIANS

Mrs. Kettie Massey, Cayuga, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as neuralgia, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the aching and pressure was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

EFFORT MADE TO INSPECT BAKERIES

Ottawa Member in Legislature Wanted to License Bread Vendors

—Trained Nurses Will Be Registered

NEW MINING REGULATIONS

TORONTO, April 3.—Trained nurses are to have the Provincial registration. This was brought up in the Committee of the Whole Legislature.

The clause added to the Act respecting hospitals reads: "Training schools for nurses may beconducted at hospitals receiving aid under this Act, and when such regulations in relation thereto as may be prescribed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council have been observed, graduate nurses of such training schools may be entitled to registration in a register kept for that purpose under the direction of the Provincial Secretary, and a person so registered may be designated a registered nurse."

As training schools are already established in connection with the public hospitals of the Province the important feature of this clause is the provision for registration.

"This is no close corporation," said Mr. Hanna in reply to Mr. Rowell's inquiry. "It will simply serve to distinguish them from the correspondence school nurses."

A Mining Bill.

Hon. Mr. Hearst's bill to amend the Mines Act was read the second time.

Employment of children under fourteen about a mine is prohibited, while no boy under seventeen is to be employed underground. No girls or women are to be employed about a mine except in office work. No person under twenty is to have charge of a hoist carrying passengers, and no person under eighteen is to have charge of any other hoist. The rules for operating mines have been changed and a number of changes made to provide for better ventilation, sanitation, and safety. No person under the influence of or carrying intoxicating liquor is to be permitted to enter any mine or be in the proximity of any working place on the surface or near any machinery in motion.

To Inspect Bakeries.

Mr. J. A. Ellis, of Ottawa, in the Municipal Committee, desired legislation to license and regulate bread vendors, and to inspect their bakeries.

"Would you license the butcher, too?" asked the Chairman.

"We do in Ottawa," was the reply.

The Committee, however, thought this too advanced a theory.

"We would have to license every corner grocery in time," thought Mr. G. W. Sulman, of West Kent, and the bill was thrown out.

Pool Room Permission.

The spirit of a bill introduced by Mr Sulman was satisfactory, but a bill now before the House on the same subject prevented the acceptance of this one.

The bill demanded that children under 18 years of age who had a desire to loiter about pool rooms should have a written consent from parents. Present legislation called for an oral consent, but such was too conducive to evasion.

MAY OPPOSE PEACE.

Majority of British Miners Voting to Keep Up Strike.

London, April 3.—The balloting of the miners on the question of terminating the coal strike has finished, but the official returns will not be available until to-day. Apparently there will be a majority against the resumption of work. Under the rules of the Miners' Federation a two-thirds majority is a necessity to authorize a national strike and it is a question of doubt whether a bare majority will suffice for the continuance of the strike. This point has not arisen heretofore and whichever way it is decided, it will likely cause dissension and delay and possibly a split in the federation.

Meanwhile more than 30,000 miners have already resumed, and if the decision is against returning to the mines it is certain that thousands of men who are desirous of working will disregard it.

King George, Queen Mary and the Queen Mother Alexandra have contributed $5,000 each for the relief of the widespread distress.

Both the president and the secretary of the federation express the opinion that the executive will decide that a two-thirds vote is necessary for a continuance of the strike and that at a meeting of the executive, to be held to-morrow, the men will be advised to resume, although there may be a majority against it.

British railway traffic for the current week shows still heavier losses than the previous week.

To Cross Ocean.

Atlantic City, N.J., April 3.—Melvin Vaniman has secretly filled his airship Akron with finest quality of hydrogen, and is prepared for a trial ocean flight this week.

Since Vaniman, on Nov. 4 last, landed helpless in the marshes of Grassy Bay, he has reconstructed the Akron. The gas bag now contains 400,000 cubic feet of gas, with a lifting power of 26,000 pounds, an increase of 100 per cent. A horizontal flat fin, with sixty square yards of surface, has been added to the steering equipment, to keep the airship from pitching.

The Akron now has three power systems, each made up of a motor and pair of propellers.

Grant To Toronto Harbor.

Toronto, April 3.—Alex. Lewis, secretary of the Toronto Harbor Commission, announced late last night that the Government had made a grant of $218,517 to the commission.

This expenditure is the largest in years on the Toronto harbor, and the commissioners say that the Government has granted them everything they have asked for. The only reason that there was not a larger expenditure is that the commissioners had not the necessary plans upon which to submit their estimates.

It was announced that tenders have been called for in connection with the usual spring dredging.

C.P.R. Invades Austria.

London, April 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is announced that the C.P.R. has concluded an agreement with the Austrian Government to operate observation cars on three main routes of the Austrian state railways. The news created considerable excitement in Austria, where an increase in tourist traffic of Canadians and Americans is naturally expected, and the Government is being besieged by cities not on the specified routes for the extension of the services, and interpellations have been made in the Hungarian Parliament that pressure be brought with a view to extending the service to Budapest.

Socialists Routed In Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, April 3.—Milwaukee voters yesterday swept from office the Socialist administration, installed a non-partisan mayor, board of aldermen and county board of supervisors, and probably eliminated every national political party from participation in future municipal elections in the State of Wisconsin.

Nearly complete returns from the 146 precincts in the city show that Dr. Gerhard A. Bading, non-partisan candidate for mayor, defeated Mayor Emil Seidel, Socialist incumbent.

Overrun With Unemployed.

Vancouver, April 3.—Cordova street yesterday was lined with men out of work. The majority of these have come off from the work on the Canadian Northern line between Vancouver and Kamloops.

About 4,000 men have thrown up their jobs and there seems to be no disposition on their part to organize into any particular demonstration. They say they will not return to work until their resources are exhausted. At the I. W. W. headquarters, many new members are being enrolled. Their complaints against the Canadian Northern are that the bunk houses are filthy, the food poor, the prices high and the hours of work long.

Infantry Association Organization.

Ottawa, April 3.—The Canadian Infantry Association was organized yesterday. The officers are: Patron, the Duke of Connaught; vice-patrons, the Premier of Canada and Lieutenant-Governors of the provinces; hon. presidents, members of the Militia Council and the inspector-general; president, Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, Toronto. Capt. Hunter Pellatt, of the 12th York Rangers, will act as secretary pro tem.

The association will make an effort to organize divisional or territorial branch associations.

The Minister of Militia announced that $5,000 had been provided in the estimates for the Infantry Association.

The Fighting Man's Well.

I've hiked for Uncle Samuel, and I've never shirked a bit.
I've trod the dusty highways and have never lagged or quit.
Nobody's heard me holler when an order came to flit,
But, uncle, please don't send me down to Texas.

I'm sick of fightin' shadders where the Rio Grande flows—
Of hamtin' for contentment where excitement never grows.
I'm sick of whitewash service in dustin' up my clothes,
So, uncle, please don't send me down to Texas.

They say they have cool summers in the land of Timbuctu,
But down along the border they never, never do,
And a stomp'ny after drillin' is just a human stew,
So, uncle, please don't send me down to Texas.

We'd welcome forest fires or the plagues of the east,
Even this tourists' thumbin and waitin' is the job that suits the least,
We've sent out pictures postals till our interest has ceased,
So, uncle, please don't send me down to Texas.

Qualified Generosity.

Wife—I saw the loveliest lace upstairs today, only $2.50, and I wanted them awfully, but I knew you wished to economize, and so I didn't get them.

Husband—That's too bad, my dear. You could have got them. Anything which adds to your happiness and brings gladness to your eyes, anything which lightens your domestic cares and gilds the lowering clouds, anything which borders with sweet flowers the thorny paths of duty and appeals pleasantly to your aesthetic nature, making life more worth living, home a paradise, you are welcome, doubly welcome to, my angel, if it doesn't cost more than $2.50.—New York Weekly.

An Agreeable Asssion.

Bill Bivvins doesn't tell the truth—
At least not all the time—
And yet we welcome him, in sooth,
With an affection prime.
He tells the ladies they are all
The fairest of their race,
Likewise he says their children small
Have wondrous wit and grace.

He tells each statesman that his speech
Ranks as a classic rare.
Whate'er the goal you fain would reach,
He strives to boost you there.
With friendly talk since early youth
Good cheer he's tried to bring.
Bill Bivvins doesn't tell the truth,
But he is comforting.

When the Armenian massacres were commanding the interest and sympathy of the civilized world a newspaper correspondent rushed excitedly one day into the office of Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Adee with the question:

"No ships will be sent there," replied Adee with great activity. "Navigation, I am informed, has not been good in the vicinity of Ararat since the time of [illegible]."

Must Recognize Union.

Philadelphia, April 3.—Sentiment among the workers in the anthracite region seems to be crystallizing in favor of prolonging the lay off until the operators grant recognition to the union. At a meeting held yesterday in Nanticoke, near Wilkesbarre, a thousand miners, mostly Poles, declared that they would not accept a ten per cent. increase unless it was accompanied by union recognition. When one of the speakers announced that President Baer had said that the miners were not strong enough to strike, a score of workers jumped to their feet exclaiming "Well, we'll show him."

Both operators and miners, however, seem content to await the result of the conference to hold in this city on April 10, and none of the large companies made any attempt to work their breakers yesterday.

More Nick-names

Nickname Editor:

I suggest "The Quakers" as a suitable name for the Peterborough ball team, the name which the Peterborough soccer team carried with success some few seasons back.

C. A. T.

Nickname Editor:

I would suggest on account of Peterborough's milling interests, that we call the local team the Peterborough "Millers." This name has been given to Minneapolis of the American Association (a great milling centre) and could no doubt be successfully adopted by our own doughty band of warriors.

NEMO.

Nickname Editor:

I would suggest as a nickname for the Peterborough Canadiain League team "Blue Sox." As manager Templin played a star game with Berlin Green Sox last year, I think he would play still better if he wore "Blue Sox" for Peterborough this year.

C. M. G.

Nickname Editor:

Suppose you call the ball team "Hungry Petes" because they will always be anxious to win the next game on the schedule.

NEWS FROM THE LEAGUE CIRCUIT

Berlin's Uniforms.

Berlin, April 2.—The uniforms of the Green Sox this summer will be among the prettiest around the circuit. While the team will be dubbed the Green Six right along, the breast of uniforms will be ornamented with a black and white bee and the boys will be commonly known as the "Busy Bees."

Here is the Berlin line-up:

Pitchers— West, Deneau, Bramble Gibson, Brown, Webb, Brandter, Jerge, Hendershot.

Catchers—Schroeder, Fulton, Miller, Tead, Ackerman, Henderson.

Infielders— McLaughlin, Richardson, Williams, Sharpe, Roth Bullock Hessberger.

Outfielders— Cambria, King, Dinsmore, Burns.

Hamilton Spectator: The only cloud that darkens the league horizon is the weather. The big league clubs have experienced such a frightful training season that it hardly seems possible that the minor leagues will be fortunate enough to escape. Even with the first exhibition game scheduled for Britannia park on April 27, there is a great deal of doubt as to advisability of calling the players together so early as April 24.

St. Thomas, Hamilton, Brantford and London are scheduled to open up the season with games on May 14. Ottawa will open up at home on May 16, while Peterborough's opening ceremonies will take place on May 22. Berlin will not open until June 6, owing to the fact that the new park will not be ready until that time.

A St. Thomas' Pitcher.

St. Thomas Times: The friends of Pitcher Harry Howick, the local lad who was the first to sign up this year, look for the former City Leaguer to show a big improvement over last year, when he was by no means below the average. Harry is in the best of shape this spring, and it won't cause any surprise to see him either sold or drafted before the close of the 1912 season. He's the kind of a ball player that won't stay down.

Ottawa Free Press.—While the other towns of the Canadian League have their eyes on Ottawa due to the fact that Shaughnessy has gathered together a remarkably fast bunch of men, whose records are in black and white in the baseball guides, there is no doubt each club is putting forth a terrific effort to place a winning team in its respective centre. With the pick of last year's players at their disposal, all the clubs, with the exception of Ottawa and Peterborough, have only been required to look up a few men to stop up the weaknesses of 1911. Some of them have purchased talent, while others are depending on what they can find after putting a bunch of recruits through the trial filter. Ottawa can therefore look for a hard fight in every city on the circuit. The Canadian League is expected to put up quite as fast an article of ball this year as the New York State League, a Class B. organization. The local management has been compelled to spend a large quantity of currency of the realm to get the team that is needed to make baseball a success in the Capital. Peterborough has also given Manager Templin a large bank roll to use carte blanche in the purchase of a team that will travel in the first division. Peterborough purchased Templin from the Berlin Club to manage their new club for $500. He was one of the best men on the Berlin team last season, hitting at a .306 clip and assisting greatly in aiding the peanant to the Dutch town.

Hamilton Herald: Johnny Benzie, the crack third baseman of the Erskines, is anxious to get a trial in professional company, and will try for a place on the Peterborough team. Benzie was one of the city league stars last year and many of his friends think that he is ready for professional company.

Brantford Expositor: A letter was received by the Expositor sporting editor from Manager Kane of the Brantford club, to-day. Amby asks if the fans have commenced talking baseball in Brantord yet. Almost needless to say, he reports that he has several players from whom he is expecting a great season's work. Slattery, the second baseman, will fill that position, Amby says, in a way that will please the fans. Ernest Coose, one of the new pitchers, is expected to be a phenom, and not an early season one. Coose attracted a lot of attention by his work last year. Casasni, the short-stop, and Brasal, a third baseman, are both considered classy men. Kane is convinced that the Canadian league will be very strong this year, but he has figured it out, and will have a team 75 per cent. stronger than last year.

Showcases Cheap.—The Peterborough Chair Co. has a large order for the West (Alberta). Toronto firms failed to secure these orders, on account of their prices being higher. We have not so much expense as the larger factories, therefore the people who need cases, get the advantage. There is no need of sending to Toronto or elsewhere, for Showcases, or Store Fixtures of any kind. Patronize the Peterborough Showcase Co., a well-equipped factory, for turning out first-class work, as well as small cases. The material and workmanship is of the best. Prices are right and terms to suit. Get our discounts for CASH. Send in your order now for the Spring trade. Factory, 709 Water street.—W. Theobald, Manager. 'Phone 1288.

RODGERS IS KILLED

Transcontinental Aviator Tempts Fate Too Often and Loses His Life at Long Beach, Cal.

HIS BI-PLANE FELL

Long Beach, Cal., April 4.—Calbraith P. Rodgers, the first man to cross the continent in an aeroplane, was killed almost instantly here yesterday afternoon, when his biplane, in which he had been soaring over the ocean, fell from a height of 200 feet and buried him in the wreck. His neck was broken and his body badly mashed by the engine of his machine. He lived but a few moments.

Rodgers for a week past had been making daily flights here and had taken up with him many passengers, both men and women.

Yesterday he started from his usual place and soared out over the ocean, crossing the pier and then turned and dipped close to a roller coaster in a Beach amusement park.

Making a short turn at a height of 200 feet, he started at full speed for the pier, and then suddenly dipped his planes and his machine began a frightful descent. Rodgers was seen by hundreds of persons on the pier to relax his hold on the levers and then, seemingly realizing that he was in danger, he made strenuous efforts to pull the nose of his machine into a level position.

Failing in this he managed to turn his craft further in shore and an instant later the craft crashed into the edge of the surf, not 500 feet from the spot where, on Dec. 10 last he had finished his ocean to ocean flight.

Examination showed that Rodgers' neck, jawbone and back had been broken. A telegram was sent to the aviator's widow, who lives in Pasadena, Cal., and a cablegram to his mother, Mrs. H. S. Schweitzer, who is now in London. The body was prepared for burial and was sent to Pasadena last night.

TELEGRAPHIC SNIPS.

Ice was out on Kingston harbor yesterday, the ice companies establishing a record. The ice bridge is still firm with no sign of breaking up.

The C.N.R. has notified the mayor of Fort William that the company will build a electing elevator this year, in time to deal with the fall crop, capacity 1,000,000 bushels.

John Keith, a farm laborer, while attempting to board a train near Wyoming, Ont., fell beneath the wheels, his head being completely severed from his body. He came from Niagara Falls.

A fall on the sidewalk caused the death of Patrick Gallivan, aged 61, for 30 years a resident of Kingston. He fell while on the way to work, and suffered from concussion of the brain.

The steamship Campanello arrived yesterday in Halifax from Rotterdam with the biggest crowd of steerage passengers ever brought into that port by one steamer. She had 2,140 immigrants on board.

Lt.-Gen. Sir George Mackworth Bullock has been appointed governor of Bermuda, to succeed the late Lt.-Gen. Sir Frederick Walter Kitchener, whose death occurred at Hamilton, Bermuda, on March 7.

Madero's Forces Victorious.

Jiminez, Mex., April 4.—The troops of President Madero gained their first victory in the northern campaign when they defeated the rebel general, Campa, at Parral and sent him scurrying back to the base at this city.

Instead of finding a handful of defenders at Parral under Gen. Pancho Villa, he was met by a deadly fire from a force which he estimated at 2,000.

Croatia Kicks Over Traces.

Vienna, April 4.—Telegrams from Agram, capital of Croatia, announces that owing to the landing elections, which resulted in an overwhelming majority in favor of the severance of Croatia from Hungary, absolute government has been proclaimed there. The constitution has been suspended and all authority is vested in a royal commissioner.

French Auto Bandit Caught.

Paris, April 4.—Caroux, one of the automobile bandits, who killed a chauffeur at Villeneuve-St. Georges, held up a bank at Chantilly, killing two of the employes, and stole $8,000, was arrested yesterday. He was taken to police headquarters, where he attempted unsuccessfully to kill himself.

Train Killed Horse Dealer.

Montreal, April 4—Emile Lamarche, a horse dealer of Pointe Claire, was struck and killed by a Canadian Pacific Railway train while walking on the tracks near Pointe Claire yesterday.

TALK NO. 5

Astigmatism of The Eye.

When the eye is said to be astigmatic, the meaning is that the eye has a double focus. This annoys the brain and the eye will strain unconsciously to bring about a clear focus; this strain usually causes headaches. Astigmatism is usually congenital or so at birth—it is remedied by wearing glasses ground from the segment of a cylinder. These glasses, if rightly made, bring images to a focus on the retina and thus relieve all strain. Children as well as adults suffer from astigmatism. We correct all common or complicated errors of sight by suitable lenses.

MARKET BUILDING

Bourassa to Stump.

Montreal, April 4.—Henri Bourassa's farewell speech at St. Hyacinthe was delivered in a very discouraged tone, he announcing that his newspaper duties would prevent him from again asking the mandate of the electors. He had at one time been influenced by party spirit, but would strive the rest of his life to drive this out of the minds of his compatriots.

He declared that he was no better off for having combatted Laurier by saying that he had no regrets in having combatted the Laurier regime, but his people must not forget that they had been going downhill for forty years, and it was impossible to get back in one day.

Babe Was Done to Death.

Barrie, April 4.—At the adjourned inquest into the death of the infant found on the track near Midhurst, the jury returned an open verdict.

The verdict found that the child had either been thrown from the train or been placed on the rails; and that it had been foully dealt with by some persons unknown, but that there was nothing to show by whom. The probability is that the secret will never be unfolded, as at least three weeks elapsed between the time the child was put on the tracks and the day it was found.

Reverse for New York Central.

Albany, N.Y., April 4.—The application of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Co. to acquire a majority of the stock of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad Co., was denied yesterday by the public service commission.

The majority stock is now owned by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co.

PREMIER BOURASSA'S PROGRAMME

Although the Orangemen Protest Manitoba Premier Makes Concessions to Roman Catholics in School Laws

NO SEPARATE BOARDS

Winnipeg, April 4.—The amendment to the school law to be made by the Government at this session of the Legislature provides for separate schools in the cities, but not for separate school boards.

Notice of the scope has been given in the law amendments committee by Hon. George R. Caldwell, Minister of Education. The amendment will contain three clauses, to the following effect:

1. A new definition of the word "school," to mean any school room, whether self-contained or whether one room in a school building composed of several rooms. In the latter case, each room in the building would become a "school" for the purposes of the act.

2. A provision that all school boards must furnish school accommodation for all school children of school age within their school districts.

3. A provision that in any school where there are forty children of Roman Catholic parents, they shall be separated from the remainder of the children, and shall have a teacher of their own faith.

The Minister stated that the object of the clauses was to make it easy for the Winnipeg School Board to take over the Roman Catholic schools of the city.

The effect will be that, while there will not be two school boards in Winnipeg, one Catholic and one Protestant, nor any division of ratepayers into two panels, there will be a segregation of the Roman Catholic school children in their own schools, under teachers of their own faith. These teachers will be employed by the Winnipeg School Board and will be subject to the same inspection as the other schools.

The present law provides for one Roman Catholic teacher being employed in every school in which forty Roman Catholic school children are in attendance. The change by which "school room" is made to read "school" will authorize the employment of a Roman Catholic teacher in every school room of a graded school.

The law will no doubt apply to all cities, and will meet the conditions in Brandon as well as in Winnipeg.

A large deputation of Orangemen appeared before the legislative law amendment committee yesterday to protest against a motion to change the School Act, so that any school in which there are forty Catholic pupils shall be designated as a separate school and have a Catholic teacher.

In spite of protests, the indications are that the separate school amendment will pass.

Peace With Honor.

London, April 4.—"It will be peace with honor and the men will return to work," said Thomas Ashton, secretary of the Miners' Federation, last night. But pending a scrutiny of the ballots to-day he was unable to give the figures. Other delegates who arrived in London last evening to attend the meeting of the federation today are agreed that there will be too small a majority against resumption of work to justify a prolongation of the conflict.

Work in the coal fields is rapidly extending. Large numbers have resumed in Staffordshire, and it is stated, that 15,000 men in this district are in the pits to-day.

Murdered by Farmer?

Berlin April 4.—A sensational communication comes from New Hamburg to Mayor Schmalz from a man who signs his name Carl Uttesch, private detective, and who claims to know all about the Lobinski murder, which was committed near Wellesley village in January, 1911.

His story is that Lobinski, the day he was murdered, was over to Baden and was given a ride by a farmer, who, learning of the old man's hoard, went home with him and robbed and murdered him.

To impart the full information, Uttesch says, is worth more than the $650 now offered, but he seems willing to unload himself of his story, and it looks circumstantial enough for the Attorney-General to investigate.

Lenses Must Be Changed

Lenses do not wear out, but eyes do. Every part of the body changes with advancing years, and our eyes, in common with the rest of our physical being show the effects of age. We make therefore meet the changed conditions of the eyes. The glasses that you bought too, or even three years ago, are not glasses you ought to possibly continue to use if you are wanting any real comfort. Your lenses should be made stronger or weaker to correspond to your failing vision.

I will be pleased to have you call and let me test your eyes, free of charge. The up to date methods I have at my command, the all style lens form, I can fit, and do guarantee satisfaction. FACTORY GIRL GIVES UP Too Sick to Work—Doctor Advised Operation. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—"I was a sewing machine in a large factory and got all run down. I had to give up work for I could not stand the pains in my back. The doctor said I needed an operation for female trouble but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me more than the doctors did. I hope that every one who is suffering will get the Compound. My pains, nervousness and backache are gone and I have gained five pounds. I owe my thanks to your medicine for it is the working girls friend, and all women who suffer should write to you for special advice."—Miss TILLIE FLEMING, 3 Jay St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

When a remedy has lived for over thirty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their very lives to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

We challenge anyone to show any other one remedy for a special class of disease which has attained such an enormous demand and maintained it for so many years as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

by ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"I am an unhappy man, Miss Scott. I see that my presence here is not welcome, yet am sure that it would be so if it were not for a prejudice which your generous nautre should be the first to cast aside, in face of the outspoken confidence of my brother Oswald. Doris, little Doris, I love you. I have loved you from the moment of our first meeting. Not to many men is it given to find his heart so late, and when he does, it is for his whole life; no second passion can follow it. I know that I am premature in saying this; that you are not prepared to hear such words from me and that it might be wiser for me to withhold them, but I must leave Derby soon, and I cannot go until I know whether there is the least hope that you will yet lend a light to my career or whether that career must burn itself to ashes at your feet. Oswald—nay, hear me out—Oswald lives in his memories; but I must have an active hope—a tangible expectation—if I am to be the man I was meant to be. Will you, then, coldly dismiss me, or will you let my whole future life prove to you the innocence of my past? I will not hasten anything; all I ask is some indulgence. Time will do the rest."

"Impossible," she murmured.

But that was a word for which he had no ear. He saw that she was moved, unexpectedly so; that while her eyes wandered restlessly at times towards the door, they ever came back in girlish wonder, if not fascination, to his face, emboldening him so that he ventured at last, to add:

"Doris, little Doris, I will teach you a marvellous lesson, if you will only turn your dainty ear my way. Love such as mine carries infinite treasure with it. Will you have that treasure heaped, piled before your feet? Your lips say no, but your eyes—the truest eyes I ever saw—whisper a different language. The day will come when you will find your joy in the breast of him you are now afraid to trust." And not waiting for disclaimer or even a glance of reproach from the eyes he had so wilfully misread, he withdrew with a movement as abrupt as that with which he had entered.

Why, then, with the memory of this exultant hour to fend off all shadows, did the midnight find him in his solitary hangar in the moonlit woods, a deeply desponding figure again? Beside him, swung the huge machine which represented a life of power and luxury; but he no longer saw it. It called to him with many a creak and quiet snap—sounds to start his blood and fire his eye a week—nay, a day ago. But he was deaf to this music now; the call went unheeded; the future had no further meaning for him, nor did he know or think whether he sat in light or in darkness; whether the woods were silent about him, or panting with life and sound. His demon had gripped him again, and the final battle was on. There would never be another. Mighty as he felt himself to be, there were limits even to his capacity for endurance. He could sustain no further conflict. How, then, would it end? He never had a doubt himself! Yet he sat there.

Around him in the forest, the night owls screeched and innumerable small things without a name, skurried from lair to lair.

eH heard them not.

Above, the moon rode, flecking the deepest shadows with the silver from her half-turned urn, but none of the soft and healing drops fell upon him. Nature was no longer a goddess, but an avenger ;light a revealer, not a solace. Darkness the only boon.

Nor had time a meaning. From early even to early morn he sat there and knew not if it were one hour or twelve. Earth was his no longer. He roused, when the sun made everything light about him, but he did not think about it. He rose, but was not conscious that he rose. He unlocked the door and stepped out into the forest; but he could never remember doing this. He only knew later that he had been in the woods and now was in his room at the hotel; all the rest was phantasmagoria, agony and defeat.

Hehad crossed the Rubicon of this world's hopes and fears, but he had been unconscious of the passage.

XXXIX.
THE AVENGER.

"Dear Mr. Challoner,

"With every apology for the intrusion, may I request a few minutes of private conversation with you this evening at seven o'clock? Let it be in your own room.

"Yours truly,

"Orlando Brotherson."

Mr. Challoner had been called upon to face many difficult and heartrending duties since the blow which had desolated his home fell upon him.

But from none of them had he shrunk as he did from the interview thus demanded. He had supposed himself rid of this man." He had dismissed hom from his life when he had dismissed Sweetwater. His face, accordingly, wore anything but a propitiatory look, when promptly at the hour of seven, Orlando Brotherson entered his apartments.

His pleasure or his displeasure was, however, a matter of small consequence to his self-invited visitor. He had come there with a set purpose, and nothing in heaven or earth could deter him from it now. Declining the offer of t seat, with the slightest of acknowledgements in the way of a bow, he took a careful survey of the room before saying:

"Are we alone, Mr. Challoner, or is that man Sweetwater lurking somewhere within hearing?"

"Mr. Sweetwater is gone, as I had the honour of telling you yesterday," was the somewhat stiff reply. "There are no witnesses to this conference, if hat is what you wish to know."

"Thank you, but you will pardon my insistence if I request the privilege of closing that door." He pointed to the one communicating wiht the bedroom. "The information I have to give you is not such as I am willing to have shared, at least for the present."

"You may close the door," said Mr. Challoner coldly. "But is it necessary for you to give me the information you mention, to-night? If it is of such a nature that you cannot accord me the privilege of sharing it, as yet, with others, why not spare me till you can? I have gone through much, Mr. Brotherson."

"You have," came in steady assent as the man thus addressed stepped to he door he had indicated and quietly closed it. "But," he continued, as he crossed back to his former position, "would it be easier for you to go through the night now in anticipation of what I have to reveal than to hear it at once from my lips while I am in the mood to speak?"

The answer was slow in coming. The courage which had upheld this rapidly aging man through so many trying interviews, seemed inadequate for the test put so cruelly upon it. He faltered and sank heavily into a chair, while the stern man watching him, gave no signs of responsive sympathy or even interest, only a patient and icy-tempered resolve.

"I cannot live in uncertainty;" such were finally Mr. Challoner's words. "What you have to say concerns Edith." The pause he made was infinitesimal in length, but it was long enough for a quick disclaimer. But no such disclaimer came. "I will hear it," came in reluctant finish.

Mr. Brotherson took a step forward. His manner was as cold as the heart which lay like a stone in his bosom.

"Will you pardon me if I ask you to rise?" said he. "I have my weaknesses too. (He gave no sign of them.) "I cannot speak down from such a height to the man I am bound to hurt."

As if answering to the econstraint of a will quite outside his own, Mr. Challoner rose. Their heads were now more nearly on a level and Mr. Brotherson's voice remained low, as he proceeded, wih quiet intensity:

"There has been a time—and it may exist yet, God knows—when you thought me in some unknown secret way the murderer of your daughter. I do not quarrel with the suspicion; it was justified, Mr. Challoner. I did kill your daughter, and with this hand! I can no longer deny it."

The wretched father swayed, following the gesture of the hand thus held out; but he did not fall, nor did a sound leave his lips.

Brotherson went coldl yon.

"I did it because I regarded her treatment of my suit as insolent. I have no mercy for any such display of intolerance on the part of the rich and thefortunate. I hated her for it; I hated her class, herself, and all she stood for. To strike the dealer of such a hurt I felt to be my right. Though a man of small beginnings and of a stock which such as you call common, I have a pride which few of your blood can equal. I could not work, or sleep, or eat with such a sting in my breast as she had planted there. To rid myself of it, I determined to kill her, and I did. How? Oh, that was easy, though it has proved a great stumbling-block to the detectives, as I knew it would! I shot her—but not with an ordinary bullet. My charge was a small icicle made deliberately for the purpose. It had sternath enough to penetrate, but it left no trace behind it. 'A bullet of ice for a heart of ice,' I had said in the torment of my rage. But the word was without knowledge, Mr. Challoner. I see it now; I have seen it for two whole weeks. I did not misjudge its cause. It was not to the comparatively poor ,the comparatively obscure man she sought to show contempt, but to the brother of Oswald whose claims she saw insulted. A woman I should have respected, not killed. A woman of no pride of station; a woman who loved a man not only of my own class but of my own blood—a woman, to avenge whose unmerited death I stand here before you a self-condemned criminal. That is but justice, Mr Challoner. That is the way I look at things. Though no sentimentalist, and dead to all beliefs save the eternal truths of science, I know that in me which will not let me quail, now that I know myself unworthy, by the great success I have earned. Hence this confession, Mr. Challoner. It has not come easily, nor do I shut my eyes in the least to the results which must follow. But I can not do differently. To-morrow, you may telegraph to New York. Till then I desire to be left undisturbed. I have many things to dispose of in the interim."

Mr. Challoner, very white by now, pointed to the door before he sank again into his chair. Brotherson took it for dismissal and stepped slowly back. Then their eyes met again and Mr. Challoner spoke his first word:

"There was another—a poor woman—she died suddenly—and her wound was not unlike that inflicted upon Edith. Did you—"

"I did." The answer came without a tremour. "You may say and so may others that I was less justified in this attack than in he other; but I do not see it that way. A theory does not always work in practice. I wished to test the unusual means I contemplated, and the woman I sa wbefore me across the court was hard-working and with nothing in life to look forward to, so——"

A cry of bitter execration from Mr. Challoner cut him short. Turning with a shrug he was about to lift his hand to the door, when he gave a violent start and fell hastily back before a quickly entering figure of such passion and fury as neither of these men had ever seen before.

It was Oswald! Oswald, the kindly! Oswald, the lover of men and the adorer of women! Oswald, with the words of the dastardly confession he had partly overheard searing hot within his brain! Oswald, raised in a moment from the despounding invalid to a terrifying ministrant of retributive justice.

Orlando could scarcely raise his hand before the other's was upon his throat.

"Murderer! Double-dyed murderer of innocent women!" was hissed in the strong man's ears. "Not with the law but with me you must reckon, and may God and the spirit of my mother nerev mya rm!"

XL.
DESOLATE.

The struggle was fierce but momentary. Oswald with his weakened powers could not long withstand the steady exertion of Orlando's giant strength, and ere long sank away from the contest into Mr. Challoner's arms.

"You should not have summoned the shade of your mother to your aid," observed the other with a smile, in which the irony was lost in terrible presage. "I was always her favourite."

Oswald shuddered. Orlando had spoken truly; she had always been blindly, arorgantly trustful of her eldest son. No fault could she see in him; and now——

Impetuously Oswald struggled with his weakness, raised himself in Mr. Challoner's arms and cried in loud revolt:

"But God is just. He will not let you escape. If He does, I will not. I will bound you to the ends of this earth, and, if necessary, into the eternities. Not with the threat of my arm—you are my master there, but with the curse of a brother who believed you innocent of his darling's blood and would have believed you so in face of everything but your own word."

"Peace!" adjured Orlando. "There is no account I am not ready to settle. I have robbed you of the woman you love, but I have despoiled myself. I stand desolate in the world, who but an hour ago could have chosen my seat among the best and greatest. What can your curses do after that?"

"Nothing." The word came slowly like a drop wrung from a nearly spent heart. "Nothing; nothing. Oh, Orlando, I wish we were both dead and buried and that there were no further life for either of us."

The softened tone, the wistful prayer which would blot out an immortality of joy for hte one, that it might save the other from an immortality of retribuion, touched some long unsounded chord in Orlando's extraordinary nature.

Advancing a step, he held out his hand—the left one. "We'll leave the future to itself, Oswald, and do what we can with the present," said he. "I've made a mess of my life and spoiled a career which might have made us both kings. Forgive me, Oswald. I ask for nothing else from God or man. I should like that. It would streng hen me for to-morrow."

But Oswald, ever kindly, generous and more ready to think of others than of himself, had yet some of Orlando's tenacity. He gazed at that hand and a flush swept up over his cheek which instantly became ghastly again.

"I cannot," said he—"not even the left one. May God forgive me!"

"I'm going for Tillson's, sir," she said

You see this little maid has learned to discriminate between rolled oats in general and Tillson's Rolled Oats in particular.

There is a big difference. But there is only one way you can find it out. By trying Tillson's.

Oatmeal Mush

Add one-half teaspoonful of salt to one-half cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats. Put the oats in the double boiler, add two cupfuls of boiling water and boil in the inner vessel on the stove for two minutes. Then place in the lower compartment and cook for two hours without stirring the oatmeal. The water in the under vessel should boil during this time, not merely simmer, therefore should be replenished.

Tillson's are the only rolled oats that can be cooked perfectly in 15 minutes. If you have been taking longer than that to make your porridge, you have been exhausting time and effort needlessly.

The reason Tillson's cook so quickly is the extreme thinness of flake — such thinness that the heat penetrates the flakes almost instantly. 15 minutes' cooking transforms them into tasty, easily digestible porridge.

Tillson's Oats

Your grocer has Tillson's. Two sizes—10c and 25c. Each 25c package contains a handsome piece of English Porcelain Tableware.

When a Man Marries

WHEN a man marries he quickly discovers his need of innumerable things he had never thought of before.

And the butcher, the baker and the cabinet maker have a new home to supply.

The new husband and wife must buy things to which they had previously given little thought.

A thousand marriages mean a thousand new homes.

Right here is a fact overlooked by many merchants.

They say, "How could it pay us to keep on repeating the story of our goods or service?"

If they could reach every possible customer with one advertisement—and if people didn't forget—there might be no object in "keeping everlastingly at it."

But because every possible customer does not read every advertisement, you must repeat.

And because these thousands of new homes are every day coming into existence, continuous advertising brings increased results.

Perhaps some people knew your goods or your store five or ten years ago. Since then new generations have come into existence.

The boy of to-day is the man who will sign the cheques to-morrow. To-day your advertisements are of small interest to him. To-morrow he is your customer, if you solicit his trade through advertising.

Every day thousands of people discover for the first time their need of your kind of goods.

Will you be there every day with your bid for their business?

Or will you leave the field to your competitors?

Advertising is the key that opens the door of these new homes to your goods.

Is Advertising on your key-ring?

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 808, Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

FELL FROM A HAY LOFT

Suffered Tortures With His Kidneys Until He Tried Gin Pills

A BAD FALL

You can't imagine, that Mr. Baker needed a surgical knife than GIN PILLS. But there were no broken bones. His back was strained, which was harder to cure because nothing seemed to do any good. It is the same with a sprained ankle and broken leg. You can set the fracture and it will be well in six weeks—but the sprain may take months to get well.

However, Mr. Baker found the quick way to get relief from the pain—here are his own words.

AULDWILLIE, Ont.

"I have been a great sufferer from Kidney Trouble from an injury to my back caused by falling from a hay loft about six years ago. This left my kidneys weak, so that every cold I got would settle in my kidneys and cause intense suffering. I was advised to try GIN PILLS. I found, to my surprise, after taking two boxes, that the pains were relieved and I began to feel better. I am still taking GIN PILLS and feel sure I will be completely cured. I recommend GIN PILLS to all who suffer from any Kidney Trouble". C. BAKER.

You see, the fall had strained the kidneys and they were affected by the slightest chill. GIN PILLS immediately strengthened the kidneys—soothed any irritation and thus enabled the kidneys to overcome the effects of the fall.

If you are having pain in the back—or trouble with kidneys or bladder through accident or overwork—do just as Mr. Baker did—take GIN PILLS. They will help you—cure you—or we will promptly refund your money. Buy six boxes at your dealer's. If, after taking them, you feel that Gin Pills have not helped you, return the empty boxes and get your money. We will take your word for it. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Sample box sent free if you write National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Dept. B Toronto.

Redistribution Bill Before Provincial House

Proposed New Constituency to be Formed With Biggar as Seat

The Provincial Parliament now have the new Distribution Bill framed up into working shape, and this will erect 25 new seats and make 54 seats for the whole province.

One of these new seats is allotted to our own town of Biggar, with a district extending thirty miles from east to west and from sixty to ninety miles from north to south, the deflection being caused by the North Saskatchewan River.

Starting from a point on the line between ranges 11 and 12 on the top of township 30, and proceeding straight north along this line to the North Saskatchewan river in township 40; then along the line of the river till reaching the line between ranges 17 and 18 in township 44, and proceeding south along this line to the N. E. corner of township 30 in range 18, and from there straight east to the starting point.

This gives the Biggar constituency an area of somewhere about 2,400 square miles, and includes the towns of Biggar, South Battleford, Naseby, Traynor, Harris, Zealandia, Hershel, Palo, Otan, Mead, Vance, Neola, and a large number of smaller towns in the area mentioned above.

SMITH COUNCIL HOLDS MEETING

Special to The Examiner.

The members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith, met in the County Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Monday, April 1st. All the ministers were present with Reeve J. H. Garbutt in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was received from Mr. J. T. Moore, asking that the Council pass a by-law prohibiting the posting up of indecent placards throughout the township. The matter was referred to the Township Solicitor for investigation.

The members of the Monaghan Council interviewed the local Council as regards the Boundary Road. An agreement was reached whereby Monaghan agreed to spend in the neighbourhood of two hundred dollars during the latter part of the coming season and after that the road was to be kept up jointly by the two Townships.

Moved by Mr. McKee, seconded by Mr. McConkey, that the Treasurer be instructed to pay the following accounts:

Francis McIlmoyle, drawing cement tile, $1.50; Thos. Armstrong, shovelling snow, $16.50; John Mallyon, shovelling snow, $4.00; Ernest Peterborough, shovelling snow, $4.00; John James Northey, shovelling snow, $16.50; T. J. Ball, shovelling snow, $14.45; Lewis McIlmoyl, shovelling snow, $22.50; Peter Nichols, shovelling snow, $8.35; Wm. G. Wright, shovelling snow, $1.50; Jno. Northey, Jr., shovelling snow, $12; P. J. Udy, goods to T. Cullen, $18.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned to meet again as a Court of Revision during the latter part of May.

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, APRIL 3.—Rev. C. Best of Port Hope, was in town on Monday.

Mr. Richard Cornwall was in Lindsay on Saturday.

Mrs. Wm. Earle was in Lindsay last Thursday.

Miss Grace Laidley and Miss Edith Fair are home from Peterborough Normal School.

On Sunday afternoon the service at the Methodist Sabbath School was largely attended. It being the review Sunday, the usual programme was not carried out, but very interesting papers and readings were given by Mrs. Shield, Miss Bushnell and Miss Jennie Smith. Messrs. Brown and Cornell sang solos, which were much enjoyed. Mr. Kennedy, teacher of the Young Men's Class, gave a very help ful talk and the Misses Ivory and Parsons sang a duett with much expression. Little Misses Rota and Phelma Johnson, from the Primary Department, sang "Jesus Bids us Shine," their sweet, childish voices being well suited to the selection.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham of Mt. Pleasant, were in town on Sunday.

On Thursday evening, March 28th, a very unique and enjoyable entertainment was held in the basement of the Presbyterian church, under the auspices of the Adult Bible Class. The affair took the form of an evening with England, Ireland and Scotland, three leaders being chosen to represent each country. The schoolroom was appropriately decorated, England, Ireland and Scotland being written in letters of rose, green and purple, over the platform. The programme was divided into three parts each leader taking the chair for her part of the programme, which was as follws:

England—Mrs. White, leader.
Address—Mr. F. G. Sandy.
Solo—Mr. Parsons.
Instrumental—Miss Ivory.
Reading—Miss Hunt.
Ireland—Mrs. Harry Lamb, leader.
Address—Rev. R. Burns.
Solo—Miss L. Parsons.
Instrumental—Miss Rutherford.
Reading—Miss Jennie Smith.
Solo (with violin accompaniment) Mr. J. Doyell.
Scotland—Miss Hunt, leader.
Address—Rev. D. H. Curtle.
Solo—Mrs. Hodgetts.
Instrumental—Miss Foast.
Reading—Mrs. White.
Solo—Master Willie McGhie.

We understand that Mr. Ted English has sold out his barber shop to Mr. Jas. Wilson of Windthorst, Sask.

Mrs. Henderson and Miss Gertrude left on Tuesday morning for Moosejaw, to visit her daughters in that city.

There will be a special song service in the Methodist church next Sunday evening, it being Easter Sunday.

WHEN the "Mountain Canary" Was Swept Away, with Their Stores, the Little Band of Prospectors Starved, Until Two of Them, Crazed by Hunger, Plotted to Slay the Third, Who Escaped and Wandered in Delirium Through the Colorado Mountains Until Rescued as If by a Miracle

HARLEY L. HALL, who figures in this adventure is dead, but the story was transcribed while he was still alive by a [illegible] the mining camps with whose he used to swap yarns. There is some divergence of testimony regarding the manner in which Mr. Hall was rescued. As described by the writer, the incident is impressively pictorial and rounds out the narrative with all artistic demands satisfied. On the other hand, Mr. Dennis Sullivan, capitalist and president of the Denver National Bank, to whom Mr. Hall had told the story, says that after two days of delirious wandering Mr. Hall was discovered by Benjamin Eaton, who was later elected Governor of Colorado. Mr. Eaton and his party took him to their camp, which was in the valley, near the present site of Silverton. There they weighed him with a pair of steelyards, and finding his soldier overcoat he scaled only forty-seven pounds. He said he had eaten the legs of his buckskin chaps. He expected to die, but there [illegible] aim back to health and he found his way to Fort Garland, in the St. Louis Valley, where he remained until he regained strength.

"CHARLEY" HALL was the victim of a weird adventure in the early seventies, when a miner in California Gulch, now the mining camp of Leadville. There he experienced a thrill, and the psychology of the cannibalism of hunger, equal to almost any true tale of adventure that has come out of the West when it was wild, when the wanderlust lured man in quest of the precious ore, and the ore lured men to a wanderlust. Then "Charley" Hall was a miner and a grubstaker. Later came wealth, comfort, success. But his experience in California Gulch clung indelibly in his mind and he told the story, and this is the way he told it:—

"It was over in the southwestern part of Colorado in the early seventies. While placer mining in California Gulch, where the town of Leadville stands now, in the spring of '72, when I cleaned up a comfortable fortune, I got acquainted with two 'busted' prospectors—a common breed in those parts—one Hinchman and his pal Summers. They had spent the summer before over in the San Juan country, a then unknown region about three hundred miles to the southwest. There wasn't as much as a cabin between the San Juan and Leadville—nothing but a dreary waste of mountain and desert and hungry Indians, over which it was unsafe to travel except in large numbers.

"Hinchman and Summers, however, filled me chock full of fairy tales of the fabulous wealth they had found in that unknown region, and swore that if I'd only grubstake them they would lead me to mines that would make the Comstock Lode look like a salted prospect. I was doing well where I was; but I had about as much sense as a cow—sure there's always better browsing just over the hill. I fell for the proposition. Worse for me, I findeth—as [illegible] along.

"We crossed the Great Divide late in the spring, just opposite Leadville, and, following down the Gunnison River a fortnight, came at last in sight of the great San Juan Mountains, standing on end away to the south. From here we first 'raised' them they looked rough enough, but when two weeks later we got into their high sierra we found matters a great deal worse than they seemed from afar. It was the wildest part of the Rockies between Canada and the Rio Grande.

"We prospected some time along their craggy tops, finding veins that, since the recent coming of the railroads, have developed into bonanzas. Then it dawned on me for the first time—what had never occurred to my partners at all—that these great ore deposits, hundreds of miles from civilization and smelters, over trackless deserts and snow capped mountains, were almost as worthless to us as Robinson Crusoe's chest of gold. There was no way to extract the gold and, if we had had such means, no way to transport it save by our one lone burro, which was already laden with all our grub and tools. That burro, in fact, like most of the 'mountain canaries,' carried everything, even two of the three rifles we had with us.

"Now, down through the western flank of the San Juan Mountains ran the San Miguel River, and as a venture we thought we would try the stream, if perchance we might find some rich placer diggings there. Slipping, sliding and rolling we went, men and burro, helter-skelter, down the deep flanks of the mountain thousands of feet, arriving at last, sore but safe, on the narrow brink of the rapid river. We saw on the other side a meadow, small, but large enough to furnish picking for the burro, which requires little food, and a good foothold for a camp. Everything we owned—even to the two extra rifles—was packed on that burro. Into the stream we plunged, swollen by melting snows into an icy torrent, and after much difficulty made our way safely to the other side—all except the burro.

"That unhappy beast, laden with his heavy panniers, lost his foothold in the midst of the swirling torrent, and before we could reach him was swept, tossing and tumbling, into the jaws of a box canyon through which the water roared—and burro and baggage were lost to sight forever!

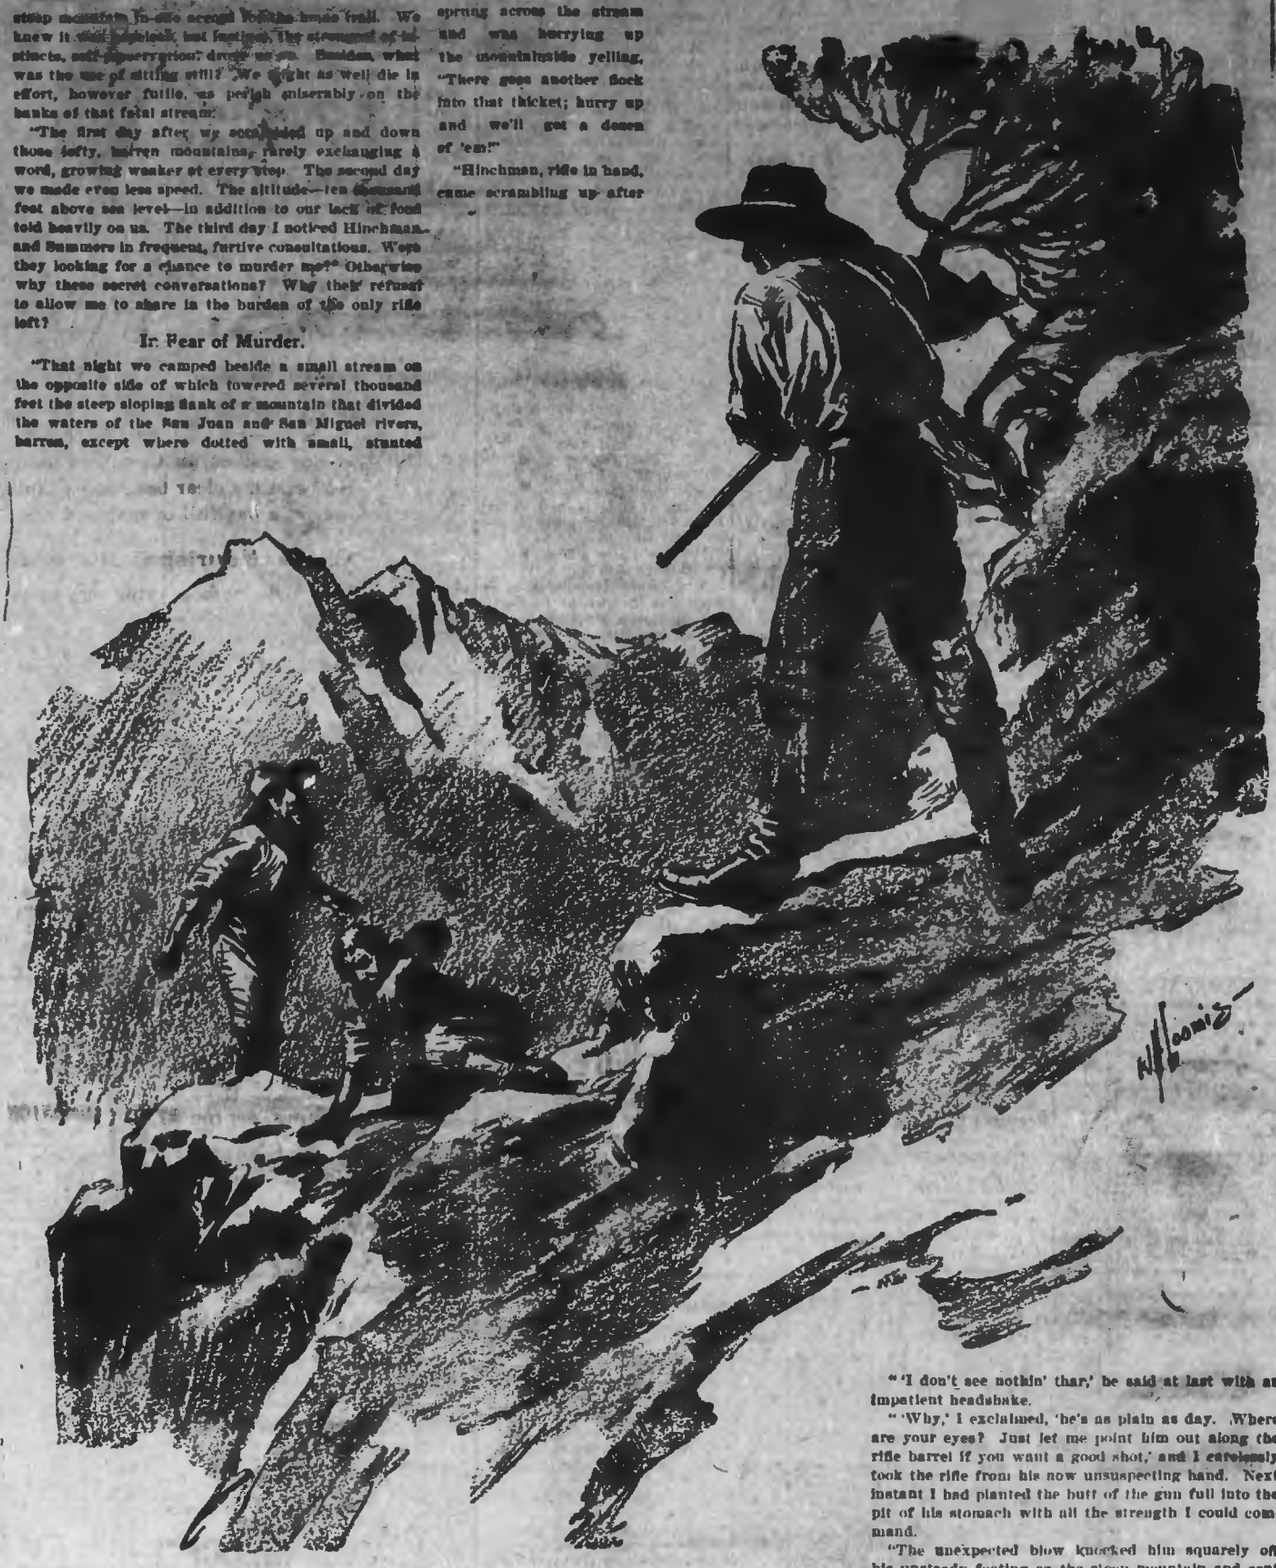
"In my dripping clothes I flopped down and swore. Then I gazed at Hinchman and Summers. They stood there gazing in the direction of the lost burro, with skin yellow-white beneath the tan, speechless, but with eyes that spoke the last word of hopelessness. Then the full realization of the disaster struck me full in the face like a blow and I went white myself. We were hundreds of miles from the least morsel of food. These hundreds were over a grisly waste of mountain and desert. I stopped swearing. A man swears in irritation; despair makes him dumb.

"We crossed the river in silence, striking up the steep mountain [illegible] side across to the main trail. We knew it was [illegible], but footless. The strongest of instincts, self-preservation, drove us on. Besides, what was the use of sitting still? We might as well die in effort, however futile, as perish miserably on the banks of that fatal stream.

"The first day after we scrambled up and down those lofty, barren mountains, rarely exchanging a word, growing weaker at every step. The second day we made even less speed. The altitude—ten thousand feet above sea level—in addition to our lack of food told heavily on us. The third day I noticed Hinchman and Summers in frequent, furtive consultations. Were they looking for a chance to murder me? Otherwise why these secret conversations? Why their refusal to allow me to share in the burden of the only rifle left?

In Fear of Murder.

"That night we camped beside a small stream on the opposite side of which towered several thousand feet the steep sloping flank of a mountain that divided the waters of the San Juan and San Miguel rivers, barren, except where dotted with small, stunted



"I Had Them Both Covered in a Second."

patches of mountain cedar. All night in the brilliant moon I kept moving to and fro. My suspicions grew into confirmation every hour as I saw the two tossing restless and wide awake upon the ground—that they only wanted a good chance to murder me in my sleep.

"At dawn I lay down a few minutes a short distance away, watching the two with half closed eyes. They soon arose and began to talk in whispers, occasionally pointing at me. At this I arose and went toward the stream as though for a drink. Hinchman stared me boldly and hungrily in the face as I returned. The Winchester lay in the hollow of his arm.

"Desperation brings inspiration. My case was no exception. 'I think I saw a flock of ptarmigan up in that clump,' I said in pleasant tone, pointing at a bunch of cedars several hundred yards up the opposite mountain.

"'Thar,' growled Hinchman with blood curdling emphasis on the 'thar,' 'ain't nothin' up thar to eat.'

"'Well, if I'm willing to climb up there to see it don't tax your strength any, does it?' I replied with assumed petulancy. 'Give me the gun.'

"Hinchman hesitated and simultaneously lowered the rifle to cover me. I thought the end had come. After a thought he sullenly said:—'You go on up ahead; ptarmigan ain't skeery o' man; we'll follow, with the gun if you see any.'

"Something in his tone, a mixture of command and cunning, made me catch my breath. Now there was no mistaking the wolfish leer in Hinchman's eyes or the approving nod of Summers. This ptarmigan idea had seized them for a moment, however, and it seemed they were willing to spare me if I could be the means of bringing them half a dozen of these luscious birds. But there was no mistaking their ultimate purpose. Half a dozen ptarmigan wouldn't last three men three hundred miles. Somebody had to die for food for the rest. Who should be shuffled off was plain to them and to me. I can laugh at it, sitting safely here years afterward, but I was never further removed from laughter than when I realized things and saw that hungry look in Hinchmen's eyes.

"But I still had my plan left. In a moment I had sprung across the stream and was hurrying up the mountainside yelling, 'There goes another flock into that thicket; hurry up and we'll get a dozen of 'em!'

"Hinchman, rifle in hand, came scrambling up after me. Summers, who was weaker, clambered behind. I didn't let Hinchman get close to me until I was almost at the thicket. I feared he might prefer a certain man to an uncertain bird. When I had nearly reached the edge of the clump of cedars I halted and beckoned to Hinchman to hurry.

"'There's a big cock right there,' I said, pointing into the cedars as he came puffing and scrambling up with the rifle.

"'What?' he asked, peering into the grove, but keeping a tight grip on the gun.

"'Right on that limb,' I said with affected impatience. 'My God, man, can't you see him?'

"'I don't see nothin' thar,' he said at last with an impatient headshake.

"'Why,' I exclaimed, 'he's as plain as day. Where are your eyes? Just let me point him out along the rifle barrel if you want a good shot,' and I carelessly took the rifle from his now unsuspecting hand. Next instant I had planted the butt of the gun full into the pit of his stomach with all the strength I could command.

"The unexpected blow knocked him squarely off his unsteady footing on the steep mountain and sent him rolling down ten feet into Summers, who was breathlessly lumbering up. I had them both covered in a second.

"'You ——!' I cried. 'So you thought you were going to kill and eat me, did you?'

"There did not seem to be the slightest surprise in the mind of either. Summers spoke first.

"'Hinchman first thought of it, but we can't do it now,' he whined in the disappointed tone of a schoolboy who has unexpectedly met a reverse. It never occurred to him to deny the charge or for me to feel surprised at his flat admission of it. Our minds had become morbid.

"'Some of us have got to die anyhow,' put in Hinchman. He looked dogged and balked, but not penitent. 'What are we going to do now?' Draw lots?'

"'I may die,' I exclaimed, 'but I'm not going to feed your worthless carcasses. I'm going over this mountain above me here and the one that follows me gets killed quick. You two go on down the gulch.'

"With that I turned and climbed. Behind me there rang out a wild 'Ha, ha, ha!' that almost froze my blood. I turned to see Hinchman, driven mad by his now almost hopeless situation, wildly waving his arms and laughing like a demon. I heard that laugh but once again outside a madhouse. He started a wild scramble up the mountain toward me, but Summers held him back.

"Then I saw them turn and move slowly down the gulch of the stream on which we had camped. I continued up the mountain. After three hours' hard climbing over rough boulders and snow fields I gained the top of the divide. Turning, I saw my late comrades just disappearing in a bend in the gulch thousands of feet below. They were never heard of afterward.

"I hurried down into the next gulch, careless whither I went, only anxious for [illegible] as much distance as possible between myself and my late companions. There was little likelihood of their following me up that steep, savage hill, but my morbid mind kept me in constant fear of them. [illegible] with judicial exactness after four or five days' climbing on an empty stomach.

"In the gulch I found a clear, swift torrent of water, from which I drank with refreshment. Then, until long after dark, I wandered down stream through the shaggy wilderness. Time and again I fell exhausted, but ever rose and staggered on, stumbling over roots and fallen branches, until about daybreak I fell and swooned. It was high noon when I woke. I was too cold and weak to move, but the sun finally revived me and I dragged my limbs to the stream, where a copious draught of water refreshed me. All through the afternoon I staggered, following the stream, which I could see by the sun ran southward. Things began to seem wavy before my eyes. The fear of Hinchman and Summers grew stronger upon me. I pictured them as hot wolves on my trail and looked fearfully around at snapping twigs and falling nuts.

Crawling Into the Wilderness.

"My rifle grew leaden weighted the second day, and for fear my enemies might overtake me and wrest it from me I took the gun apart and sank its pieces in different pools of water. At dusk my brain went out as one snuffs a candle. I remembered nothing until I found myself one afternoon—Heaven only knows what afternoon it was—still wandering aimlessly down the banks of this roaring stream, now grown by tributaries into a small river. I wobbled like a drunken man. When my legs ached I got down on my hands and knees and crawled—ever forward. Something within compelled me to keep moving, moving, though I had a dim idea that I was only going deeper into the heart of mountain and rocky wilderness. Still I must move, move until exhaustion brought unconsciousness.

"I fell into a torpid sleep that lasted I know not how long. I took no thought of my surroundings, but had a misty idea that I had wandered far from the heights of the lofty San Juan range, whence I had begun this wild journey into nowhere.

"I did not seek food. Hunger pangs had ceased to bother me. In their place came deadly lethargy, half waking, half sleeping, that would hold me in its grip for hours. In this mental fog I could hear the strangest voices and see the most fantastic sights that ever rioted through unbalanced brain. They would clear away sometimes like a summer shower, whereupon I would resume my aimless, staggering journey. And then at times they would weave themselves into the reality of my surroundings, making pictures weird and grotesque that changed in the most bewildering manner into others equally fantastic. Finally I grew so that I could not distinguish the real from the unreal.

"These images became daily more frequent until the whole of the visible world became a fantastic aberration. Branches of the trees seemed to beckon. The rocks laughed and leered at me. All kinds of voices spoke to me of things wholly irrelevant to anything on earth or in heaven. Still I staggered on, falling now and then into a lethargic sleep of unknown duration and waking to live again amid the world of phantasms.

"Through it all I retained a single spark of conscious reason, running through my chaotic brain like a silver thread through a fabric of blackest velvet. Somehow I realized that to stay where I was meant death; that to wander down the stream, now grown to a river, led to nowhere but to life, and that within the roar of that water I might quench my thirst. Thus I trudged down the Valley of the Shadow.

"One sunny morning, when phantoms swam around on earth and in sky, I seemed to come where the mountain river I had followed—it seemed for ages—joined its waters with another river. I crawled out upon the little headland crag that jutted out into the mingling waters with a hazy idea of getting my bearings. So many shadowy landscapes had spread themselves before my distorted vision that I half doubted the waters confluent at my feet. I felt an eagerness to fling myself into their swirling midst.

"As I gazed about the entire landscape seemed a quivering unreality, and when I looked across to the bank of this new river, some two hundred feet away, I felt that the last spark of reason was gone and I was in the grasp of absolute lunacy; for there along its grassy banks, within a stone's throw of me, came such a weird, fantastic procession as I had never conceived in my wildest illusions.

"There were fully two hundred of these new phantoms, dressed mostly in white. At the head walked a tall leader in a dazzling robe, bearing a purple banner splashed with the golden rays of the rising sun. Behind him, on a mule led by a white robed phantom, sat the phantom of a venerable man, his garments of purple and gold flowing about him. In his phantom fingers he bore a golden vessel that glittered in the cloudless noon and his white and uncovered head was bent before it. Behind him, two by two, robed in ghostly white, came the rest of these strange visions, slowly winding along the trail like a great ivory snake with crimson head—all wavering before my unsteady and bewildered sight like a painted canvas swayed by the wind. As I looked on in amazement these rose the swell of chanting voices, swelling and lifting, until its harmony filled the air and bounded back from the cliffs beyond.

"Breathless at this last and most marvellous of all my visions I rose and stretched out my hands. At that moment I heard a wild laugh—the laugh of Hinchman when he had cried out 'Ha! ha! ha!' I started in terror, for I thought he was by my side with his vengeance. Then I recognized the voice as my own. The weird procession seemed to sway back and forth. Things grew dark and I knew no more, my last thought being, 'This is death.'

"Ages, it seemed, after I heard a soft voice say, 'Take this, my child.' I opened my eyes to find bending over me with solicitous gaze one of the very white robed phantoms that I had seen in my last illusion. He held in his hand a cup of fragrant liquid and put it gently to my lips.

"'Where am I?' I asked, but before I could say more a gentle finger was laid on my lips.

"'You must not talk now,' said this gentle voice of the phantom in white. 'Drink; it will give you nourishment and rest.'

"I drained the cup, and as I fell back into the sleep of exhaustion the white phantom beat his hands in blessing over me.

"What I had mistaken for the most grotesque of my illusions, that fairy procession of ermine beings bearing golden vessels through the heart of that ragged wilderness, was but a procession of monks from the San Miguel Mission, at Durango, then a Mexican hamlet a mile or so down the Animas River from where I had struck it—one of the old Spanish missions planted centuries ago beyond the fringe of civilization. They had been on their way to administer the last sacrament to a ranchman who was lying sick unto death up the river, when my wild laugh from the jutting crag attracted their attention and they had hastened to my assistance.

"It was weeks before those good men would let me go. Nor would they take a cent from me.

"'Give it to the Orphans' Mission at Santa Fé,' they said. 'They need help; we don't.'

"Soon afterward the Orphans' Mission had a new home.

"'It was a miracle,' said the padre when, after my restoration through his ministration to vigorous health, I told him my adventures.

"And, while I don't believe in miracles, I believe in that one."

THE MENTAL VAMPIRE.

IF you value your own ideas, if you have use, or even respect, for the casual products of your own brain, beware the vampire! He is, perchance, at your elbow as you sit in friendly and bibulous intercourse. He lurks, mayhap, in the adjoining barber chair, or lies in wait next to you in the street car. No poet has sung him. But he is close at hand, and ready, with fiendish smile and suave speech, to lure you into an expansive or an eloquent moment.

Frequently he is the paragrapher on some daily or weekly publication. Beneath his deceptive exterior of respectability may even lie the hardened heart of a jokester for a comic. Often he is a writer of fugitive—which means seldom seen—verse, stories, sketches, plays, even novels. Always he has his note books handy—if not in actual evidence, at least behind those eager, listening ears of his.

All is sustenance to the mental vampire. The eulogy of the conductor on a bad nickel, the compliments of the chauffeur who carelessly misses his pedestrian, the chaffering of the housewife, the small talk of the bars, the repartee of the newsboys, the latest exploit of the draper's clerk. But best he likes to draw his prey into some corner and drain him dry of anecdote and suggestions. If he is clever at his trade you will not even know your loss until you see some distorted image of a pet story, expression, opinion or fantasy in print. By that time the vampire has taken his ghoulish appetite to other quarters beyond reach of your righteous wrath. Ware him!

Waiter (calling):—"Two cackles and a grunt."

OF COURSE NOT

The little boy was carrying home the empty pail that had contained his father's dinner, when the big bully appeared.

"Do you mind if I kick that pail?" inquired the bully.

"Not a bit," said the small boy.

"You mean that? Do you mind if I kick that pail?"

"Not a bit."

"For the last time. Do you mind if I kick that pail?"

"No, I should like you to."

"Oh, would you! Then watch me!" exclaimed the bully, as he battered it in. "Do you mind now?"

"Not a bit!" retorted the small boy, edging away. "My mother borrowed the pail from your mother this morning. You'll hear all about it when you get home!"

When Your Throat is Sore

It may be only a slight cold now—just a tickling in the throat.

But little colds soon grow large and dangerous. Often they become chronic, develop catarrh and end in consumption.

Catarrhozone is the remedy. It draws inflammation and soreness out of the throat. Relieves the cough, puts out the phlegm, makes breathing easy, kills any germs lodged in the mucous lining of the throat or lungs.

Nothing in the Annals of Medicine so Effective for Bronchitis and Throat Troubles as

CATARRHOZONE

Father, Mother, Sister, Brother, All Should Use Parisian Sage

Prevents Baldness—Banishes Dandruff—Stops Falling Hair and Itching Scalp.

PARISIAN SAGE is a family hair tonic and dressing that will do much good in every home.

The man who uses PARISIAN SAGE if only occasionally will never grow bald. Baldness is caused by dandruff germs which dig down into the roots of the hair, devour its nourishment and cause the root to die and the hair to fall and thin out.

PARISIAN SAGE is a scientific hair remedy that not only kills the dandruff germs, but gives the hair root just the same nourishment that nature gives it.

PARISIAN SAGE first kills the germs; then nourishes the weakened hair root and causes a growth of healthy hair.

This same nourishment (PARISIAN SAGE) makes the hair grow vigorous, which means that the hair becomes full of life and lustre, and grows radiant and beautiful.

Thousands are wasting time, losing hair and growing bald because they are using superficial tonics. While they may clean the scalp and make it feel refreshed, they do not get to the root of the hair where the real destroyer of hair, the pernicious dandruff germs, thrives and multiplies.

MONEY BACK DANDRUFF REMOVER

Try PARISIAN SAGE for all hair trouble; it means death to the germs; life to the hair. It is pleasant to use and so harmless that it can be used by every member of the family from the oldest to the little tot.

Get a 50 cent bottle to-day, and if you are not satisfied that it is just as good as claimed, your money back without any squibbling. Sold by Wm. Madill and druggists everywhere. Girl with Auburn hair on every carton and bottle.

MAKES HAIR GROW

McDermid and Jury, druggists, have an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps the life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by McDermid and Jury under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

Some Girls I Know.

Though Ann, indeed, is not magnetic
Who talks until I fall asleep.
A sort of gentle Ann esthetic.

Of fair Louise I sing, for she's
A dream in bathing suit of blue.
She seemed today a mermaid gay,
And thus I met my water Lou.

There's Anna; she was quite morose
To melancholia she seemed fated.
She married. Now she's quite verose.
The wedding made her Anna mated.

Sweet Alice spoons me to sigh.
She melts my heart that's far from ca-

Surprise For Rip.

Some Advice.

Given a man with eyes so blind
That no distinction he can find
'Twixt mushrooms and the stools of toads
That grow along our country roads?
If such there be he ought to go
Hustle his chest or bungalow
And buy some fine, expensive brand
Of mushrooms only used sparingly canned.

English Etchings.

In the year 1650, only 226 years ago, all England had a population of only 5,000,000.

There are over 6,700 members of the Royal Automobile club, a record among London clubs.

After thirty-three years amid the London atmosphere the famous Cleopatra's Needle is being cleaned and washed.

Householders in England whose houses are burned to the ground or otherwise rendered uninhabitable remain liable for the rent.

Flippant Flings.

All this talk of a great war over Morocco is foolish. Neither France nor Germany has purchased a solitary Missouri mule.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The progress of civilization has been interrupted. The attempt to introduce Boston baked beans into India proved a failure.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Town Topics.

New York is to spend $33,000,000 on education next year. It needs every cent of it.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Cincinnati is now considering the organization of a society to pension spinsters. Cincinnati is the town that started that anti-kissing club.—Washington Star.

Chicago may not be the literary center of America (loud laughter from Indiana and Boston), but it has more letters, according to the postage stamps bought, than even New York.—Chicago News.

Laundry Lines.

Wheat bran put in the water in which you wash black goods greatly improves them.

Flatirons that have become spotted or slightly rusted may be cleaned with a piece of pumice stone.

To whiten handkerchiefs that have grown grimy or yellow from washing soak them overnight in a solution of pipe clay and warm water. Wash and boil next day in the usual way and they will come from the laundry beautifully white.

Trust Thrusts.

The trusts dissolve, but they do not disappear.—New York World.

The invitation is open to every trust in the land to reform of its own accord. Smart trusts will come early and avoid the rush.—St. Louis Republic.

Aviation.

Aeroplanes were used Aug. 15 for the first time in Russia in the army maneuvers.

A modified form of camera obscura has been patented by a French inventor to enable an aviator to tell when he deviates from a given course.

Aviation has taken hold of the Chinese, and a school for man birds is being opened at Peking by Fuz Yu, who lived a number of years in this country and became an enthusiastic aviator.

Easily Guessed.

CASCARETS CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

No Biliousness, Headache, Sick, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Coated Tongue or Constipation

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give you a thorough cleansing inside and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good cleansing, too.

FEEDING JOLLY JACK

HOW BRITAIN'S NAVAL FORCES ARE PROVISIONED.

The Victualling Yard at Deptford Has Thousands of Tons of Food Supplies Passing Through It Every Day of the Year—Rice, Sugar, Etc., Are Handled in Big Bins From Which They Are Let Down Into Canisters.

There is no place in the world where anything like so large a quantity of food is stored and handled as at the Royal Naval Victualling Yard, at Deptford, through which is passed practically all the food supplied to the seamen in the royal navy. Every day thousands of tons of food supplies enter the yard, and thousands of tons leave it.

Take the sugar store, for example. About eight million pounds of sugar are passed in and out of the yard every year, and, as a rule, about a million pounds are held in stock. The sugar is stored in a huge loft, and every day for a certain number of hours it comes pouring down a "shoot" in a great yellow cascade into a gigantic receiver holding 220 pounds. By the receiver are ranged a battalion of sugar-cans, each can holding 220 pounds. Directly the receiver is full, it empties itself into one of the cans; the filled can is then passed on to be sealed up, and another "empty" is placed underneath the receiver.

When the whole battalion of cans is filled, they are despatched to be made up for transhipment, and in a few months' time, or perhaps in a few weeks, the contents of the cans will be sweetening Jack's tea, cocoa, or pudding in some part of the world.

The rice store is but a few steps from the sugar loft. The rice is handled in much the same way as the sugar. It comes down from [illegible] tubes it is stored through a shoot, from which it flows into bags containing 200 pounds each, or more. It flows down the shoot every day, but sometimes it flows in greater volume than at others. For example, when the Home Fleet came recently to Portland to be provisioned, the rice came down the shoot in a perfect avalanche, and thousands of bags were filled in a couple of days, which, with thousands of tons of other foodstuffs, were despatched to fill the store-rooms on board the different ships of the fleet.

From the rice store you pass into a gloomy-looking storehouse, the immense floor of which is occupied by battalions of barrels of pickled beef, known to Jack Tar by the more familiar name of "Fanny Adams." There is not a daily delivery or despatch of these barrels of beef, but the demands for this article of food from our foreign naval supply yards, or from some ship sent suddenly home, to take in provisions, is constant, and sometimes very urgent.

A request, for example, may come in suddenly from one of the five foreign yards at Hong Kong, Malta, Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope, or Gibraltar, for a couple of thousands of barrels of beef, and the beef must be on its way out, if need be, within twenty-four hours from the receipt of the order.

Indeed, whatever may be the character of the demand, the authorities at the Victualling Yard are always able to meet it. It may be for a thousand pounds of candles, a hundred thousand pounds of beans, tons of chocolate nibs, ten thousand pounds of various jams, or just a few thousand tins of unsweetened milk. Whatever the demand may be for, the order causes no flutter of excitement at the Victualling Yard. It is simply passed to the warehouse where the particular commodity required is stored, and the stuff, whatever it may be, made up for transhipment and despatched probably within a few hours.

The real emergency for which the Victualling Yard has to be prepared is a sudden outbreak of war between Great Britain and some other great Power.

The demand on the yard's resources in normal times would be little or nothing compared to what it would be in such an event. Probably then as much food would have to be passed out of the yard in a week as is now usually despatched from it in several months.

All the foodstuffs passing through the yard are of the highest quality, and are thoroughly tested by expert analysts. The quantity of food rejected is enormous. The book in which the "rejects" are entered shows that every day large deliveries of foodstuffs are sent back to the contractors as not being up to the sample or to the standard required by the authorities. Ten per cent. of a delivery is examined, in most cases, and if three per cent. of the quantity of foodstuff tested, whatever it may be, is not up to sample, the whole delivery is sent back to the contractors. For example, presuming that, out of a delivery of 5,000 barrels of meat, 300 were examined, and out of the 300 12 barrels contained bad pieces, or a little, the whole delivery would be rejected and sent back to the contractors.

During the past few years many changes have been made in the victualling of the navy. Jack Tar's oft-raised complaint used to be that his food was always the same, and that it was vilely cooked. He has now no cause for complaint on either of these points.

A vastly more varied list of articles of food is now supplied to the ships of the navy, and Jack Tar's meals are different every day, and, in addition to this improvement, the meals are prepared by a skilled cook, who is trained at the Victualling Yard, at Plymouth, where a first-rate school of cooking has been established.

It would, of course, be impossible to go into all the details of the work carried on at the chief Victualling Yard of the royal navy.

There are over 300 men employed in the yard, and numerous [illegible] by-five acres [illegible] a [illegible] railway, eight miles [illegible] mine through the yard for the [illegible] of stores from and steamers [illegible], and for picking [illegible] 600 shipments from the yard.

A MAN WITH PILES CANNOT WORK

The depressing, undermining influence of piles seems to affect mind as well as body until the sufferer from this annoying ailment feels miserable and utterly cast down.

The itching, stinging sensations which accompany piles are bad enough. The scratch for cure and [illegible] of a surgical operation do not tend to cheer one up. Many get discouraged and allow their futures to be ruined by this wretched ailment.

It is so easy to relieve piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment that it seems strange that anyone should neglect to give this treatment a thorough trial. If you could only read some of the letters from cured ones who had suffered ten, twenty or thirty years you would no longer doubt the effectiveness of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the relief and cure of piles.

CONTRACTED HEAVY COLD

Was in Bed Two Months.

DOCTORS DID NOT SEEM TO DO HER ANY GOOD.

A cold, however slight, should never be neglected, for if it is not treated in time it will, in all possibility, lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma, or some other serious throat or lung troubles.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains the lung healing virtues of the Norway Pine tree, which, combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines, makes it without a doubt the best remedy for all coughs and colds.

Miss N. McCumber, St. Martin's N.B., writes:—"In January last I contracted a heavy cold which kept me in bed nearly two months, and the doctors didn't seem to be able to do me any good. I tried several proprietary medicines, but all in vain. One day a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and when I had taken three bottles I was completely cured, and I feel as well to-day as I ever did, and I am sure my lungs are once more sound, thanks to that wonderful remedy."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Morocco Leather.

The dyeing of native leather, for which Morocco has long been famous on account of the softness of its tone, its texture and its flexibility, continues to be practiced in Tadlet, Sbu, Morocco City, Fez, Tetuan and Rabat, but artificial dyes are also being substituted in the modern process, supplementing the use of the secret vegetable ingredients formerly used to produce the inimitable tones of earlier times.

"A friend of mine," said Driscoll, "noticed one morning that his grocer looked very sad.

"'What's the matter, old man?' my friend asked jokingly. 'The weights and measures man hasn't been dropping in on you, I hope?'

"'Yes, he has,' snapped the grocer.

"'But you don't really mean to say,' exclaimed my friend, 'that he caught you giving only fifteen ounces to the pound?'

"'Worse than that!' groaned the grocer. 'I've been giving seventeen!'"—Washington Star.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the extra cost the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Kills the Dandruff Germs and Makes the Hair Grow

Restores Gray Hair to Natural Color

FEW people are aware of the number of Dandruff Germs that infest the human hair and scalp. The germs which locate themselves in the follicle or sack which envelopes the root of the hair, spread a loop existence in sucking up the juices which should go to keep life and strength in the hair. These germs cannot be seen by the naked eye, but with a magnifying glass of from 300 to 400 diameters the specie of this hair destroyer may be seen in masses, clinging to the hair.

DANDRUFF, ITCHING OF THE SCALP AND FALLING HAIR ARE A SURE SIGN OF DESTRUCTIVE GERMS.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy not only kills the dandruff germs and prevents baldness, but it also restores faded and gray hair to natural color.

Says Women Run Congress.

Washington, April 4.—In the face of a bitter attack by Senator Bailey, the Senate yesterday passed the Esch-Hughes House bill to put a prohibitive tax upon the manufacture or importation of white phosphorus matches. Mr. Bailey called the measure a monstrosity and spoke pointedly of the fact that many women had demanded its passage.

"When the labor agitators and the women get through running this Congress there will not be a shred of the constitution left," he said. The Senator quoted a little Shakespeare and declared that Portia was a suffragette who had palmed off a subterfuge in her argument before the court which tried Shylock's claim.

Thames Flood Diverted.

Chatham, April 4.—An ice blockade, two miles long and over 25 feet above low water mark, formed yesterday afternoon at Prairie Siding and has diverted the Thames freshet out over the low-lying farms of Raleigh and Dover.

Water is now rushing across country several feet deep, and the river continues to rise. Farmers three miles below Chatham are marooned and most of the country roads west are impassable.

The river is now almost 20 feet above normal level in the city and some of the north side streets are under several feet of water.

HEMMENS FREED.

Musician Exonerated of All Blame For Shooting.

Montreal, April 4.—"Honorably discharged," said Judge Lanctot to Carl R. Hemmen, in the impeviased court room at the Royal Victoria Hospital yesterday afternoon, and the last words of the fateful sentence which made a free man of Hemmen were lost in a long and fond embrace with his wife, who had thrown her arms about his neck as soon as it became evident that the court would acquit her husband for the shooting affray at the Savoy Hotel last Sunday.

One of the Chipman brothers, Herbert, was too weak to give his ante-mortem statement, and the doctors state that he will not last long. Edgar and Harry, lying in the same room, were strong enough to be examined.

It was a pitiful scene which was enacted in the hospital yesterday afternoon, when justice journey to a dying man's bedside, and from his own lips in broken words and choking sobs, heard the story of the shooting affair.

The mother of the dying boys, and the wife of the man who was held to be responsible for their deaths, condoled with each other.

Judge Lanctot, Crown Prosecutor Walsh, Morris Alexander, acting for the defence, Official Stenographer Kenehan, journeyed to the Royal Victoria Hospital yesterday afternoon and were advised that Herbert was too weak to give his deposition. Harry is convalescent and will be out of the hospital in a week or two.

"Did the doctors tell you that you were dying?" asked Mr. Walsh of Edgar.

"No, they will not tell me anything, but I know that I am done," replied the wounded boy in a broken voice.

"Will you tell us what happened at the Savoy Hotel Sunday morning?"

Edgar then told how his brother Harry had called for him early Sunday morning and with his brother Herbert they had gone to the Savoy Hotel to help their brother Harry against a man who, Harry said, had been abusing him. He told how they got into Hemmen's room and attacked him, thinking him to be Sandford, who had offended Harry, and how Hemmem began to shoot on being attacked. The shooting began as soon as he opened the door, said the witness. Herbert and Edgar were then inside.

After taking the evidence of Sandford and others concerned, Judge Lanctot rendered his decision.

Miners Stay Out.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 4.—Union miners throughout western Pennsylvania, numbering 50,000, will remain idle until Monday, April 29. This decision was reached yesterday at the annual convention of district No. 5 (Pittsburg district), United Mine Workers of America. At the suggestion of District President Feehan, the poorly organized Marrer-Butler-Armstrong county field will be excepted, the men there continuing at work with the companies paying the increased wages.

A proposition to have the miners resume work next Monday, pending the result of the referendum vote on the Cleveland wage scale compromise agreement, was voted down unanimously. Tabulation of the vote of all the bituminous miners will not be completed until April 29, according to word received here yesterday from International President J. P. White.

John Mitchell addressed the delegates yesterday. The report of the tellers on the election of officers will be made public to-day.

Woollen Industry for Ayr.

Ayr, April 4.—This bylaw submitted to the voters of Ayr yesterday for granting aid to a new industry establishing a factory in the Ninth Vale property adjoining the corporation, was almost unanimously carried, only 6 out of 176 voting against it.

PROPOSES SUBSTITUTE

"Half Treating" is the Limit of Sir James Whitney's Improvement Idea.

Views—Mr. Rowell Makes Splendid Speech

HIS RESOLUTION LOST

Toronto, April 4.—"That in the opinion of this House legislation to prevent and put a stop to the treating habit should be enacted, and, if necessary, supplemented by regulations, under which retail licenses are granted and held."

In substance this was the purport of an amendment introduced by Sir James Whitney yesterday afternoon, when Mr. N. W. Rowell moved his resolution in the Legislature to abolish the bar. Mr. Rowell's original motion on which the debate occurred was:

"That in the opinion of this House the public interests demand, (1) The immediate abolition of the bar; (2) Such other restrictions upon the residue of the liquor traffic as experience may show to be necessary to limit its operations and effective to remedy its evils; (3). The strict enforcement of the law by officials in sympathy with law enforcement, and the elimination of political influence from the administration of the law; (4) Regulation and inspection of all houses of public entertainment so as to ensure reasonable accommodation for the traveling public."

F. C. Macdiarmid, West Elgin, introduced an amendment to the amendment, as follows: "And this House desires to put on record its appreciation of the good work done by the present Government of the province during the last seven years, by their earnest and faithful administration of the liquor license law, and by the desirable improvements which have been added thereto."

By a vote of 82 to 15, with Allan Studholme lined up with the Government, the amended amendment to Mr. Rowell's motion was carried early this morning. Four members on the Liberal side and three on the Conservative side were absent. The absent Liberals were McKay, Evanturel and Racine and Kohler. Three of them were paired with the absentee Conservatives, viz., Col. Matheson, A. M. Mahaffey and Gamey.

Not since the present session commenced has the public shown such interest in the deliberations of the Legislature as was evinced yesterday. Scores of clergymen were present, some of them even making their way into the press gallery to get a better vantage point. The ladies' gallery had not a vacant seat, and special chairs had to be provided beside the Speaker's dais to accommodate the friends of the members and others who were unable to find seats in the galleries.

Mr. Rowell said one of the significant signs of the times was the growing recognition on the part of the people of the great evil of the liquor traffic. He quoted statistics and opinions from authorities showing that the three great evils confronting society were—the opium trade, the liquor traffic and the white slave traffic.

"The open bar is a nuisance and a social pest," he said. "It is prejudicial alike to church and state, and therefore it is time for its abolition." There were 1,530 bar licenses in Ontario, 220 shop licenses and 53 club licenses. The bar represented an overwhelming percentage of the traffic. There was about $61,000,000 invested in the business generally. The Government's receipts amounted to nearly $300,000 yearly.

In explaining the meaning of his resolution, he said it would wipe out in one stroke the great retail traffic. Local option would continue to work on any residue of the traffic not wiped out. Such legislation would strike a vulnerable point and accomplish great good. Once the bar was abolished, it would never be restored. No political party would ever think of restoring it. The word "prohibition" was a misnomer, because the Government must work within the limits of its power. The Privy Council had decided that the province had no control over the manufacture or importation of liquors. He did not consider that abolition of the bar meant wiping out the traffic completely, but the existing evils would be reduced as far as practicable. He fully realized that there should be no discrimination between the club and bar.

Regarding law enforcement, he said that officials should be in sympathy with the law. A great difficulty was the interference of the liquor people in politics, and the only solution was the removal of the enforcement of law from politics entirely.

The cause of dissatisfaction among the traveling public with respect to poor hotel accommodation was on account of the bar in most cases being the main source of revenue. Hotels, therefore, did not provide the required accommodation. If the liquor traffic was cut out entirely the people would learn that hotels were devoted entirely to giving satisfactory accommodation. Hotelkeepers wondered why they were ostracized, but the blame could be laid to the fact that they could not keep up an honorable business with a saloon attached.

"My hon. friend has announced his position," said Sir James Whitney in reply, "and we on this side of the House may be allowed to congratulate him at having reached a decision after long consideration. He has expressed himself with strong feelings and fervid utterances. I congratulate him in good faith for breaking his bonds.

Sir James stated that for over a year the Government had been considering the proposition of putting the license department into the hands of a commercial commission. However, nothing as yet had been decided on in that regard.

"Under the Scott act," said Sir James, "the evils of the liquor traffic were infinitely worse than under the ordinary hotel license system. I do not wish to speak of the things that occurred under the Scott act, nor even think of them. They were so revolting."

"What has determined me to favor legislation abolishing the treating system—and I ask members on both sides of the House to sympathize with my position," said Sir James, "is that it would kill the desire for treating—even if it didn't become enforced right away." The Prime Minister thought that holding over the head of the hotelkeeper the threat that he would lose his license if the treating system was persisted in, would be of great effect. Even the hotelkeepers had declared that they were in favor of the treating system being abolished.

"The question of treating," continued Sir James, "is the root of the whole matter, and if the two proposals were put to a vote of the people, I firmly believe that infinitely more would be in favor of abolishing the treating system than abolishing the bar."

Hon. W. J. Hanna ridiculed the idea of the Government being stampeded into the action they had taken with regard to the abolition of the treating system.

"It would look," said he, "by the remarks of the Opposition, that this was the first useful thing that had been done since February, 1905. "Who was behind the stampedes every year since?" enquired the Provincial Secretary.

Mr. Hanna showed conclusively that by the three-fifths vote, everything including bar, club houses and shop licenses would go if the local option bylaw is carried.

Nearly every member of the House spoke on the question before the vote was taken.

U. S. Banks Under Scrutiny.

Washington, April 4.—National and state banks to the number of 3,000 or more will be interrogated by the House "money trust" investigating committee. This action was decided upon yesterday. The banks will be asked to furnish lists of their directors, information concerning deposits, trust and stockholders, and numerous other details of their business.

It is the purpose of the committee to determine the extent of the control of banks over industrial corporations, trust companies and like concerns.

Saves a Million.

Ottawa, April 4.—It was officially announced last night that the Government will be unable to use the million dollars which was placed in the estimates to carry out the policy of the Government for a system of better highways throughout Canada, since the Senate has killed the act. The million dollars was divided amongst the various provinces, according to population.

Acquitted of Murder Charge.

Dalhousie, N.B., April 4.—Dr. W. W. Dougherty of Campbellton, was acquitted yesterday of murdering D. J. Bruce, a merchant of the town, on the night of Sept. 21 last. During an altercation over the election Dr. Dougherty's umbrella entered Bruce's eye, piercing the brain and he died the next day. Witnesses swore that the doctor jabbed his victim, but the prisoner swore that he lifted his umbrella to defend himself after he had been struck and he had no intention of striking back.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, April 4.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the offerings were 400 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1,200 hogs and 1,200 calves. The trade in cattle was slow, owing to the fact that buyers in most cases filled their wants earlier in the week, consequently the demand was limited and principally for small lots.

There were no extra choice heaves on the market and the top price paid for choice steers was $7.25 and the lower grades sold from that down to $5.50 per cwt. The best cows and bulls offered brought $6.50 and the commoner ones ranged from that down to $3.50 per cwt.

A fairly active trade was done in small meats, there being a good demand for all lines, but the supplies of same were light and especially of lambs. The tone of the market was firm and sales of yearlings were made at $7.50 per cwt. and old sheep at $4.50. The supply of calves was large at prices ranging from $3 to $8 each, as to size and quality.

Hogs were firm and in good demand at $8 to $8.15 per cwt. for selected lots weighed off the cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, April 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 150; market steady.

Veal—Receipts, 600; active and 50c higher, $3 to $8.50.

INVESTIGATORS CHOSEN.

British Imperial Trade Commissioners Are Named.

London, April 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the House of Commons yesterday Rt. Hon. Lewis Harcourt announced the completion of the Imperial Trade Commission.

The representatives will be: Lord Inchcape, chairman; Sir Rider Haggard, Sir Edgar Vincent, Sir Charles Owens, T. Garnett, cotton manufacturer of Manchester, and William Lorrimer, Glasgow. Members of Parliament have been deliberately excluded in order to avoid the question of party politics.

Completing the commission are: Hon. George E. Foster, Canada; Donald Campbell, Australia; Hon. Mr. Bowring, Newfoundland; Sir David Graaf, South Africa, and Sir J. Ward, New Zealand. W. Robinson Coloff is secretary of the commission.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt, defending the Government against the charge of dilatoriness with respect to the resolutions of the imperial conference, enumerated a dozen matters which had been given effect to, including the modification of the Japanese treaty, Copyright Act, strengthening the appeal court, and naturalization.

The Government succeeded in releasing the dominions from treaties with Mexico and Sweden, and he hoped the labors of the trade commissioners would be concluded before the next imperial conference was held.

The Opposition is greatly disappointed over the personnel of the trade commission and regard it as entirely partial. Lord Grey and Lord Burleigh should have been asked, they say, and not men who are known to be extreme partisans on the fiscal question.

Sir Gilbert Parker will ask the Commons if Inchcape will be allowed to hold his position as Suez Canal director while serving on the commission.

Destroying Childish Confidence.

"Alexander was a great man, wasn't he, pa?"

"Yes, Willie."

"And so was Hannibal?"

"Yes."

"And Cæsar and Napoleon and Washington?"

"Yes."

"They was great fighters, wasn't they?"

"Yes."

"But you could lick 'em all, couldn't you, pa?"

Pa looked around nervously.

A feminine voice is heard from an inner room.

Ax and Hammer.

The man with the ax to grind is a man
Who makes the woods go round,
For he'll probably do the best he can
With the ax which he gets it ground.
He will swing with a keen and sturdy stroke
To make a pathway clear
Or to give the chimney a crown of smoke
While beneath are warmth and cheer.

But the man with the hammer will ask no aid,
Though the rust may thickly show.
He has no need of a polished blade
Nor lets for the dull and slow.
His strokes would thoughtlessly break and spoil
The work that has been designed
By the man who gathered to help or toil
And who each had an ax to grind.

MAXWELL'S

JEWEL FOOD-CUTTER

is a daily necessity in every home. You are always cutting up meats and vegetables for stews, etc.

A knife is awkward and dangerous—a chopping bowl is cumbersome. "MAXWELL'S JEWEL" cuts everything as you wish—fine, medium or coarse because it has five cutting plates.

Easily cleaned—easily worked—very strong, durable and handsomely finished.

Insist on your dealer supplying the "Jewel" because this is the only food cutter made in Canada—and is superior to anything imported.

DOCKET FOR SPRING ASSIZES PROMISES TO BE UNUSUALLY LIGHT

Will be Confined to Two Cases, One Civil Action for Libel and One Criminal Case—Judge Latchford Will Preside.

UNDERTAKERS GO TO LAW

The Peterborough spring assizes will open on Tuesday, April 9th, with Judge Latchford presiding. As yet there are only two cases to be disposed of, one criminal and one civil case.

The criminal case is that of Samuel Newall of Dummer, who is charged with criminal assault. This case was put off at the last assizes owing to the indisposition of the defendant, who was confined in the hospital at that time.

Undertakers Go to Law.

James Irwin and Lewis H. Stephens both undertakers of Campbellford, are respectively plaintiff and defendant in a libel action which was transferred here from Cobourg. The defendant was successful in having the case reverted here on the grounds that the son of the dead man, who it is alleged is a material witness, resided in Calgary.

The action is based on a letter to the Campbellford Herald in which it is alleged that the defendant stated that he had arrived at the Campbellford station with his best funeral equipage to receive a corpse that was coming from Kingston. That he waited there quietly and with dignity. That the plaintiff with a casket wagon came galloping at full speed over the hard roads, and in a loud, rough, noisy angry manner, asked what authority the defendant had to be there. The defendant had said that he was there under instructions from Father Casey, whereupon the plaintiff had demanded what Father Casey had to do with it. The altercation was stopped by the son of the dead man requesting the defendant to withdraw, and that he would make it all right with him. A quotation from the letter reads:

"The loud, rude words must have fallen on the hearts of sorrowing friends like coals of fire on an open wound."

A Good Thing To Remember

That the Best Place to Buy Farm Implements is W. Y. Scollard's, 184 Hunter Street—Commodious Warerooms Just Opened

Spring time is not only seed time, but machine time, for the man who tills the soil. It is the time when the farmer casts a retrospective eye over his stock of implements, only to find that the full complement of machinery which he requires, and must have in order to enable him to accrue the best possible results from his labours, is lacking in a great many respects. The wear and tear to which farm machinery is usually subjected, and the loss occasioned by exposure to the elements quickly depreciate their value, with the result that the farmer finds it necessary to replace them from time to time. As the spring is usually the season which the farmer selects for replenishing his stock of implements, it behooves hi mto visit the extensive warerooms of W. Y. Scollard, Hunter street. Here he will find a large stock of the celebrated Deering farm machinery from the easily operated, durably constructed "Blue Bell" cream separator, to the large combination disk and hoe drills. The latter are made of heavy steel and are built to stand up to heavy work. Lightness of draft is an essential feature of these machines and it would pay the prospective farmer to investigate. The well-known Deering cultivators are also kept in stock. These machines are not only built to cultivate thoroughly, but equipped with wide points are sure weed exterminators. Hay carriers, built to last a life time, which cannot possibly wedge or fail to work and which are accoded by experts to be the best fork on the market, find a conspicuous place in the show rooms. Clover Leaf manure spreaders, which for durability and lightness of draft cam ot be equalled, are here shown.

In addition to this a full line of buggies and waggons, the product of the Dominion Carriage Company, Toronto, is kept on hand, and intending purchasers of goods of this nature will find it to their advantage to look over the stock.

Mr. W. Scollard has also taken over the agency of the Champion Road Making Machinery Co., and is prepared to fill orders on short notice.

THE SERVICE TO-MORROW

Full arrangements have been completed for the service in the Armouries to-morrow afternoon, under the auspices of the Peterborough Ministerial Association. It has been arranged that addresses will be given by Rev. Robt. Pogue, of St. Paul's; Rev. Jas. Rollins, of St. Andrew's; and Rev. F. J. Sawers of St. Luke's. Mr. G. W. Mulligan will sing "There is a Green Hill Far Away." The Salvation Army Band will lead in the singing of three well-known hymns: "Tell Me the Old, Old, Story," "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," and "Jesus, Keep Me Near the Cross." It is expected that the service will not last more than three quarters of an hour. There will undoubtedly be a large attendance.

JUDGE HARDING WILL HEAR IT

Suit in Division Court Against the City Not Dealt With by Judge Huycke

REGISTRATION CLAIM

In the Division Court to-day, the suit of Magistrate Dumble against the city for registration fees was brought up but the hearing was postponed. Judge Huycke is indirectly interested and decided not to hear it. Judge Harding of Lindsay will likely hear it at a date to be decided upon. This case has been referred to before and is a claim in connection with the registration for manhood suffrage in the last election. The disposal of this case will likely determine the action of Judge Huyoke and Mr. Morrow, who presented similar claims to the city in connection with this work.

SHORTAGE OF HELP

Still Prevails in Peterboro' County—Large Party Expected to Arrive in the City To-night

DEMAND FOR MARRIED MEN

Applications for farm help are still pouring into the local immigration office, and Immigration Officer Howson has anything but an easy job on his hands. To supply everyone who applies, with the necessary help, is a hopeless task, but he is doing just about everything that human energy can do with the means to hand.

Eight new arrivals were disposed of in about as many minutes yesterday, while three more joined the agricultural ranks of labour this morning. About twenty more are expected to-night or to-morrow morning. They sailed in two sections, one on the Empress of Britain and the other on the S. S. Canada. Both liners are due to dock some time to-day.

Married Men in Demand.

One of the features this spring has been the demand for married men, by the farmers. Realizing apparently that the single man would rather take his chance in the West, the farmers of Ontario have made provision for the handling of farm hands who are accompanied by a family. They have in a great many cases built small houses, adjoining their own homesteads for the housing of their help, and are ready to take husband, wife, and child.

Mr. Howson received a communication from a prominent farmer in Saskatchewan this morning in which the writer expresses his desire to secure a married couple. $30 a month would be paid to the man, as a farm labourer, and a remuneration of $15 a month for the man's wife. The latter would be expected to do housework, such as baking, etc., and a good comfortable home, with steady employment for one year was assured the right party.

This is a fair sample of the daily applications for help received by Mr. Howson, from all parts of the country. He believes that a couple, with one year's experience in this country, would meet the requirements of the above application to advantage. The writer also spoke of the excellent opportunities which the party securing the above position, would have, of taking up a homestead, nearby.

Record Week for Montreal.

They think it is great, in Winnipeg when they have 7,000 immigrants through that rushing western metropolis in a week, but they got to hand it to the Windsor street station as the real, alive, centre of that sort of thing.

By the time St. George's tolls midnight, to-day, there will have been 4,000 immigrants handled at the Windsor Street station, Montreal, in the space of 22 hours.

They started coming at two o'clock yesterday morning. The Empress of Britain emptied in all 1,419 between that and four o'clock, by way of five special trains.

The Tunisian crowd, 1,427 in number, began arriving at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There are three train loads of them. At 11 o'clock last evening the Royal George's passengers arrived. There were 1,088 of them, including a British naval party bound for the Pacific Coast, which will be here transferred into a special train of seven cars.

This is the biggest 22 hours on record. There are ten special cars in all.

Returned From England

Messrs. Coleman Bros. Say Strike Has Caused Much Suffering

Messrs. Henry, James and Jesse Coleman of Coleman Bros., have returned to the city after a five months' trip to the old country. Their many friends will be pleased to know that they have improved in both health and knowledge, having gained many pointers which will be used for the benefit of the firm's multitude of patrons. They state that the strike in England has caused an enormous rise in prices and much misery and suffering, and that they are glad to be back in the peaceful atmosphere of Peterborough.

STRIKE IS OFF

Miners' Federation Committee After a Stormy Session Advise the Discontinuance of the Movement

TROUBLE NOT OVER

Examiner Special:

LONDON, APRIL 4.—After a stormy session, the Miners' Confederation, this evening, declared the strike off. While the Executive Committee of the Miners' Federation has advised the discontinuance of a strike the trouble is by no means over. This recommendation has to go before the General Conference of Representatives here, on Saturday. The result of the balloting was against acceptance of the minimum wage bill conditions, the vote being 210,000 for acceptance and 244,000 against it. The Executive thought that notwithstanding the vote, it would be better to recommend the acceptance. Fully 50,000 strikers resumed work to-day with out definite instructions from the strike leaders.

HOSPITAL FOR INSANE

Toronto Bodies Will Ask the Legislature Assist in the Programme—Laboratory for Insanity Study

A DEPUTATION

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, APRIL 4.—"When a man is sent to jail, in Ontario, to be examined as to his sanity, the surgeon who examines him gets a $5.00 fee; if he pronounces the man sane he gets nothing." This was the statement made by Controller McCarthy to a deputation representing the Associated Charities, the Ministerial Association and other organizations, to-day. The deputation wanted a laboratory established for the study of insanity and a hospital for the insane of Ontario, established in or near the city. They suggested that the city provide the site and the Government build and equip and maintain a hospital and on Controller McCarthy's motion they decided to get up a big deputation and wait on Hon. W. J. Hanna this afternoon, asking for definite action on the part of the Government.

REV. H. D. ROBERTSON'S WORK APPRECIATED

Rev. H. D. Robertson, B.A., returned missionary from China, occupied the pulpit of the Wesley Methodist church, Hamilton, on Sunday. Mr. Robertson conducted the services both morning and evening, confining his remarks to the subject in which he is deeply interested, mission work in China.

His address was so highly appreciated and his work in China by the church which maintains him in the Mission field, that he was made the object of a complimentary welcome on Monday evening. This took the form of a reception, given by the church members, who showed their appreciation of Mr. Robertson's services by presenting him with a beautiful, illuminated address. During the evening the recipient of this honour addressed a large gathering of people on "Present Conditions in China." Rev. Mr. Sawers, General Secretary of Foreign Missions, was present and took an active part in the service.

This is Mr. Robertson's first visit in five years to the church which supports him in the Mission field. Wesley church, has for its pastor, Rev. E. A. Pearson, formerly pastor of George street Methodist church.

The First Good Friday
And they crucified Him, and parted His garments casting lots. And sitting down they watched Him there and set up over His head His accusation: THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.
There were two thieves crucified with Him; one on His right and one on the left. Jesus, when he had cried with a loud voice, yielded up the Ghost, and behold the veil of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom and the earth did quake and the rocks rent, and the graves were opened and many bodies of the saints which slept arose and came out of their graves after His resurrection, and went into the holy city and appeared unto many.

THE PRIVATE BILLS COMMITTEE APPROVES PETERBOROUGH'S BILL

Sub-Committee Appointed by the Legislature to Go Into the Details of Expropriation of Light and Power Company's Plant.

INTERESTING PASSAGES

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, ONT., APRIL 4.—When Peterborough's Bill was before the Private Bills committee of the Legislature this morning, it was stated that the Peterborough Light and Power Company's distributing plant in the City of Peterborough is valued at three hundred thousand dollars. It has been distributing power supplied by subsidiary companies, including the Auburn, Otonabee and Quaker Oats Companies.

Hon. Adam Beck charged that exorbitant rates were now being asked for power in Peterborough.

A mild sensation was caused by Mr. J. E. Carey, of Smith, Carey and Chase, the consulting engineers of the Trent Valley Electric Merger, who said: "Mr. Beck, you have been making absolute mis-statements with regard to our rates all along before this committee."

"Indeed, that is interesting," replied Mr. Beck. "You have charged me with making mis-statements. Prove your point. Do you not charge a seven cent rate in Peterborough."

Mr. Carey replied that such a rate was charged, but that it was not universal, that there were certain exceptions. If the committee gave him time he would furnish figures.

Mr. Beck replied that that was all he wanted to know. It was quite correct as he had stated, that the householders of Peterborough, the working classes, were being charged a seven cent rate for power and this was exorbitant.

A sub-committee of five, Messrs. Ellis, Brewster, Ferguson, McDermott and Anderson was appointed to go into details of expropriation, after the general principle of the bill had been approved practically by unanimous vote.

When you go shopping don't simply say "A pound of tea," because you can secure better tea, more delicious tea, if you only ask for "Salada."

Two Officers Were Given Pipes

Col. Geo. Syer and Sergt.-Major Thos. Syer Remembered by the Dragoons

ARE GOING WEST

The Council Chamber, Millbrook, was the scene of a very pleasant and interesting little event Saturday evening, when a number of the boys connected with B. Squadron 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, assembled to say good-bye to Col. George and Sergt.-Major L. Syer.

The chair was occupied by Lieut. J. N. McGill, who, after a few introductory remarks, called on Reg. Sergt.-Major Paul to read an address, after which Sergts. Armstrong and Peabody presented their two departing comrades with a beautiful case of meerschaum pipes each.

The address referred to the friendship that had been formed as neighbors and in the training camps. The heartiest of good wishes for the future of the departing officers were extended, and also the hope that the old relations might be renewed. The address was signed on behalf of the company by Major Jas. E. Paul, Sergts. W. Armstrong and Sergt.-Major G. H. Hooton.

Very fitting and suitable replies were made by the Colonel and Sergt.-Major, expressing their very deep regrets at leaving their old friends and neighbors, and thanking them very heartily for their kind remembrance. Short speeches were also made by Capt. Leach, Chief Miller and Reg. Sergt.-Major Paul.

The evening was brought to a close by singing "For they are jolly good fellows"; a hearty [illegible] God-speed and every [illegible] future prosperity.

OPINIONS ON THE DEBATE

TORONTO, APRIL 4.—Editorial opinion on the results of the division yesterday in the Ontario Legislature on the Temperance Bills, is generally partisan, the newspapers backing up their parties according to their politics. Interviews with independent temperance advocates, this morning, however, indicate that there is some disappointment because there were no bolters among Whitney's following among whom there are several prominent advocates of prohibition and advanced temperance legislation. "Its just another evidence of domination of Sir James Whitney and his own personal views in the Legislature and party," said one of the temperance Conservatives, who is not a member of the House.

MARCH FIRES COST BUT $35

Department Had Sixteen Runs But There Was Nothing Serious

COMPARED WITH 1911

The Fire Department had 16 calls during the month of March with a total of $35 damages. This is just a fraction more than $2.00 a fire. Practically all of them were chimney fires and none was serious. During the same month last year there were only 6 fires, representing a damage cost or loss of $162. The showing is a satisfactory one, not only from the fact that there were no serious fires, but from the impression that the prompt responses of the brigade have been most successful in keeping down the work of the fire fiend.

MISS CONSTANCE CRAWLEY AT GRAND

Gowns Worn Among the Most Beautiful Ever Seen on the Stage

—Boston Herald

The appearance of Miss Constance Crawley, at the Grand, on Monday, should be looked upon by the local theatre-going public as a special Easter treat. To quote the Montreal Gazette: "The play is one of strong dramatic interest and clever in language. Miss Constance Crawley, in the leading role of Mrs. Daventry, was vigorous, impassioned and eccetive. Graceful of form and manner, and with expressive countenances, and well modulated voice, Miss Crawley is perhaps the most finished English actress Montreal has seen, and when thinking of the play one can only recall the acting of the leading lady as an artistic exhibition, such as is not often seen. Mrs. Daventry's hats and gowns would alone repay a visit, particularly in the third act. The play should certainly not be missed by those desirous of an artistic treat.

Mr. Arthur Maude, the leading man, who has won favour with the late Sir Henry Irving, and Mr. Martin Harvey, as Mr. Daventry, gives a masterly interpretation of the part. His acting, especially in the second Act, proves him to be possessed of great stage skill, which proclaim him in the foremost rank as an actor.

The support is uniformly good and the stage-mounting excellent.

A special matinee has been arranged for, when the delightful farce comedy "What Kitty Did" will be played. This play has proved itself by running for two years in London, and twelve months in New York. Those wishing a real good laugh—lasting two hours—should be early at the box office on Monday afternoon.

Seats are now on sale for both performances at the Box Office.

All Union Barber Shops will be open until 11 O'clock to-night and close all day to-morrow Good Friday.

"Peterborough Possesses Possibilities Unparalleled."

THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1912.

THE CITY'S BILL.

The City's bill that was brought before the Legislature in Toronto, has been mutilated beyond recognition, and unless our City Solicitor has put a private mark upon it for purposes of identification, he would not know it. Without discussing the merits of the mutilating amendments and rejections, or the abstract merits of the bill, which is not without its weak points, it is evident that the municipalities cannot, as both Peterborough and Toronto can attest, expect much aid or comfort from the Legislature, as it is led and constituted. The head of the Government, the leader who gives out the general policy and suggests the expected attitude towards legislation, gives the cue to "turning down" municipalities by the committee, by his attitude towards tax reform. In this he takes the position that municipalities are not fit to take care of themselves. They have asked for permission to decide for themselves whether or not they would like to differentiate in assessment of land values and improvements. They did not ask for fixed compulsory legislation in this regard—they only asked permission to act on their own judgment, and this little right is denied—Sir James Whitney is able to do their thinking for them; all they have to do is to pay taxes without grumbling. Another palpable instance of the Whitney Government's disregard for municipal rights arises in connection with the Hydro-Electric Commission. Hon. Mr. Beck, the Chairman, was given an honorarium of $6,000 per year for his services, something which neither municipalities nor the public generally will find fault with. He has given good service in connection with the work of the Hydro-Electric Commission. But there is decided objection to the form and mode of payment. This salary of $6,000 a year, or a part of it, is to be paid by the municipalities; and the municipalities have no representative upon the commission. To tax municipalities for this or the other purposes involved in the working out of the commission, without representation, is contrary to the most elemental idea of right and justice. Taxation, without representation is an old, and in these advanced days, should be, an obsolete form of tyranny. Taxation without representation lost the American colonies to Great Britain. It is a survival of the days when autocratic power had its way. In a modified form it is existent in Ontario to-day; and in this regard we are not beyond the A.B.C. stage of constitutional government, and enjoyment of constitutional rights.

HOME EVIDENCE.

In defending the government's refusal to entertain Mr. Rowell's proposal for the reform of the civil service, Hon. Mr. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, declared that the rule of his Department was promotions, not dismissals. He said that in his department there had not, in six years, been one dismissal for political reasons. If this statement is no more truly applied to the rest of the province than it is to Peterborough, and probably is not, it must be taken with a grain of salt. Mr. R. J. Kidd and Mr. Robert Mahood are local living examples of its untruthfulness. The Whitney government is no more inclined to place the civil service upon the basis of permanency and merit with efficiency of service and qualification as the test of retention or appointment, than is Mr. Borden to implement the promises of his Halifax platform in this regard. It is worth while to repeat his declaration on this point. He said:

"To use the piwer of filling positions as a reward for party services without regard to the character and capacity of the individual selected is a gross breach of a soleman public trust. The character of the government may be judged by its appointments."

Peterborough may be again quoted to show how the principles of Mr. Borden's statement have not only been disregarded, but even decency outraged in the work of decapitating office holders to facilitate the application of the spoils system. And even worse conditions of things have obtained in other parts of the Dominion. Along with many other promises, Mr. Borden's promise of civil service reform have been pigeon-holed. The legitimate function of the public service is to aid the promotion of the public good not to advance the interests of a political party. We have heard evidence that neither the Borden nor the Whitney government takes this view of that irresponsibility.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If Great Britain looks sharp it may some time overtake Canada. Yesterday, Lilloyd George announced a surplus of 32 million dollars. This is something like seven millions short of the last—or latest—Dominion surplus.

The time has expired for the filing of a protest against the return of Hon. G. P. Graham, in South Renfrew. The Conservatives—that is the machine operating Conservatives, who forced this election—do not apparently relish the post-mortem revelations that a protest investigation would bring out.

WINNING ARGUMENTS IN B. C.

A glance at the issue of the Victoria Colonist on the eve of the Provincial election, throws some light on the results of the following day. Here are a few of the "arguments" addressed to the electors of the city:

Do you approve of the policy which has secured the construction of a new transcontinental railway of which Victoria is one of the termini?

Do you approve of the $3,000,000 Government block in Victoria?

Do you approve of the establishment of a provincial university?

Do you approve of the establishment of a Normal School at Victoria?

Do you approve of the dedication of Strathcona Park to public uses as a pleasure resort?

Do you approve of the construction of highways to make Vancouver Island one of the greatest pleasure grounds in the world?

Do you approve of the continued pressure upon the Dominion Government of the claims of the province for Better Terms?

Do you approve of the establishment of great railway terminal facilities at Victoria?

Victoria voted overwhelmingly for the railways, the Government block, the university, the normal school, the park, and the pleasure ground. From the housetops the Government cried to the people to gather at the public trough. This must be the swill-pail era of politics in British Columbia as in Manitoba.—London Advertiser.

Rowell's Remedy And Counterblast

Whitney Government's Answer to Mr. N. W. Rowell's "Banish the Bar" Resolution

The motion to abolish the bar, moved in the Legislature yesterday by Mr. N. W. Rowall, K.C., and seconded by Mr. William Proudfoot (Centre Huron), was as follows:

That in the opinion of this House the public interests demand:

(1) The immediate abolition of the bar;

(2) Such other restrictions upon the residue of the liquor traffic as experience may show to be necessary to limit its operations and effective to remedy its evils;

(3) The strict enforcement of the law by officials in sympathy with law enforcement, and the elimination of political influence from the administration of the law;

(4) Regulation and inspection of all houses of public entertainment so as to insure reasonable accommodation for the travelling public.

SIR JAMES' AMENDMENT.

Amendment moved by Sir James Whitney, and seconded by Hon. J. J. Foy:

That all the words in the motion after the first word "that" be struck out, and the following be substituted therefor:

This House recognizes the duty cast upon it to minimise as far as possible the evil effect of the drink habit by wise restrictions upon the traffic in intoxicating liquors. This House also recognizes that, having regard to the decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as to the respective jurisdiction of the Dominion and of the Provinces, it is impossible for the people of the Province through its Legislature to abolish or control the manufacture within, or the importation into, the Province of intoxicating liquors; that the treating habit is now almost universally recognized as the most powerful factor in the evil results of the said traffic and habit, and no good object would be served by simply diverting the habit from the bar to some other place. That in the opinion of this House legislation to prevent and put a stop to the said treating habit should be enacted, and, if necessary, supplemented by regulations under which retail licences are granted and held.

Carried—80 to 18.

MACDIARMID'S RIDER.

Mr. Finlay G. Macdiarmid moved as amendment to the amendment, seconded by Mr. H. Bilker, that the following words be added to the amendment:

And this House desires to put on record its appreciation of the good work done by the present Government of the Province during the past seven years, and of their earnest and faithful administration of the liquor licence law, and by the desirable improvements which have been added thereto.

Carried—79 to 19.

THE SENATE'S OBJECTIONS TO POLITICAL ROAD-ROLLING

Why did the Senate amend the Highways Aid Bill? Why did the Government kill its own political offspring rather than accept the amendments of the Senate? These are questions that demand an answer in the most explicit terms. When Parliament opened in November the speech from the throne contained this paragraph:

"The importance of providing our country with better highways is manifest. A bill will be introduced for the purpose of enabling the Dominion to co-operate with the Province in the accomplishment of this desirable object."

It was understood that the Government would make an addition on a per capita basis to the subsidies of the various Provinces which have controlled the construction and mending of the highways since Confederation, and that the additional subsidy would be earmarked as a grant toward road-building—the Dominion providing for the independent inspection of the work done. When Mr. Cochrane's bill came down, however, it was discovered that it provided for a wholesale invasion of the rights of the Provinces. Clause six gave the Minister of Railways power, subject to the consent of the Provinces, to "undertake the construction and improvement of highways." No provision was made in the measure itself for the apportionment of the Dominion grant for good roads among the Provices on a per capita basis.

The Opposition in the Commons fought the measure from the outset, taking the ground that Mr. Cochrane, under pretence of aiding in the improvement of highways, was intent upon building up a political machine that would be utilized in every doubtful constituency to bribe the electors with their own money, and to that end was taking from the Provinces a function that had been theirs since Confederation. In Provinces where the local Government was in alliance with the Dominion the road grants would be spent to the advantage of the Conservative party, while Provinces having Liberal Administrations would be forced to accept Mr. Cochrane's political road-builders or do without their share of the road grant.

The Government protested that the crushing of its opponents beneath the Cochrane road roller was far from its thoughts. It brought down an estimate of aid for highways during the current year, appropriating a million on a per capita basis among the Provinces. This was pointed to as proving that there was no desire to use the road grats for political purposes. But the Opposition was not deceived. The Government stubbornly refused to amend the bill along the line of its own declared financial policy. It insisted on the retention also of the power to build highways. The Liberals in the Commons having failed to prevent the bill from passing—although their protests were backed up by the advocates of Provincial rights all over the country—the Senate amended the bill to provide that the aid for road-building should be handed over to the Provinces and should be given on a per capita basis. It is well that the Senate's reasons for this amendment should accompany it publicly. They were as follows:

"Because the method of distribution provided for by the amendment is that suggested by members of the Administration in the Senate and House of Commons as contemplated, and has been actually adopted in the supplementary estimates for the ensuing year.

"Because the bill undertake to make certain permanent provisions as to the aid to be given to the construction and improvement of highways in the several Provinces; and it is only reasonable that the principle of equal distribution in proportion to population, recognized by the present Administration, should be permanently secured by enactment in the bill, as otherwise, if this principle were abandoned in future, the Senate would have no other recourse than to reject the supply bill.

"Because, if the principle upon which the apportionement of such grant is to be made is fixed by a permanent enactment, the task of deciding upon the items to be inserted in the supply bill will be simplified.

"Because section 6 of the bill empowers the Minister to undertake the construction or improvement of highways in any Province, which would be a contravention of the letter ad spirit of the British North America Act, 1867, and of the uniform practice under that Act, for which contravention no sufficient cause has been shown.

"Because the amendment affirms in effect that it is undesirable that a Minister of the Dominion Government should usurp the rights and functions of the Provicial Administration in the building and maintenance of highways and bridges.

"Because the amendment will not unduly hamper the Administration in carrying out its policy and in applying the funds placed in the estimates for that object, sufficient provision being made in earlier clauses of the bill for co-operation between the Federal and Provincial Governments."

The refusal of the Government to accept this amendment is the strongest possible evidence that it was "political road-building" that Mr. Cochrane had in view when he introduced his Highways Aid Bill. His persistent attempt to invade the rights of the Provinces which have controlled built, and mended the roads of Canada ever since Confederation has failed as it deserved to fail. That it will be renewed next session is entirely probable. For that struggle Liberals must prepare now by putting the facts before the electors. The facts speak for themselves. They prove that Liberalism stands for the independence of the Provinces within their own sphere as firmly as it stands for the rights of the Federal Government in the National arena.—Globe.

Some Would Oppose Annexation

Any proposal to annex Byerswille will find opposition from quite a number of the residents of that section. This is proposed in connection with the annexation of a strip of North Monaghan on the south and west sides of the city. And not only does this refer to the residents in Byerswille, but to many in the rest of the territory which it is planned to add to the city. The annexation of this strip is bound to come, but several residents of Byerswille state that it will not be this year, nor for some time. They say that most of those who built outside of the city were aiming to escape the city tax rate. They have succeeded in that and at the same time they enjoy practically all the privileges and benefits afforded those residing on the outskirts of the city.

From enquiries, it is believed that the present extent of the movement is but very light and that it will not materialise at this stage.

A Little Talk on Slate Roofs

1. A slate roof adds greatly to the appearance and thereby to the value of the house.
2. The first cost is the only cost.
3. A slate roof lessens rate of insurance.
4. Wood attracts lightning, slate does not.
5. Slate roof will not collect ice and snow as does a shingle roof.
6. Rafters do not require to be any heavier for a slate roof than for a shingle roof.
7. Slate roof cannot rot or corrode and therefore is to positively the only roof which will last for ever.
8. Slate ro[illegible] may be delayed with water, but is dry in a few minutes, while a wooden roof gets waterlogged, grows warm and drives the dampness into your house.

CANADIAN CLUB PRIZES

Presented by the President, Mr. E. L. Goodwill, To-day

The presentation of the Canadian Club's prizes offered to the students at the Public schools for essays on Canadian History, was held this morning at the Central school. Inspector Mowat addressed the pupils and was followed by Mr. E. L. Goodwill, president of the Canadian Club, who made the presentations. He congratulated the prize winners, emphasizing the value of a knowledge of the history of the country and the importance of giving their best attentions to the studies. Mr. Goodwill also spoke briefly on patriotism.

The prizes presented should be highly prized by the winners. In each case they are books and their careful selection and what they represent should make them of special value to the winners. The successful pupils were:

Form Four—1st Harold Couche, 2 Gretchen Gladman, 3 Ada Norris, 4 Marjory Evans.

Form III—1 Bernard Park, 2 Laura Adamson, 3 Claire Mason, 4 Rosamond Huycke.

The presentation to the Separate school pupils will be made after the Easter vacations.

PAYMENT FOR GARBAGE COLLECTION

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In reading the report of the proceedings of the Council on Mnday night last I noticed that they decided that the charges for the removal of garbage be collected with the taxes or in other words that the property owners pay the full amount for the collection of garbage. Now I am not a lawyer, and perhaps don't understand law very well, but it strikes me that the Council has no power to levy these charges on the property owners; at least it don't look to me to be either reasonable or just. Suppose a man owns ten or twenty houses occupied by tenants, would it be fair that he should have to pay for the removal of all garbage from those houses. I think that this garbage business would come under the same head as personal property which, of course, the property owner is not responsible for. I don't know just what the Act calls for, but if it is law it don't seem to be justice. Don't you think it would be wise to have the City Solicitor's opinion on this question?

Yours, etc.,
J. J. HARTLEY.

HO! HAVE A LOOK AT THE BIG CALF

And See Alex. Gordon's Fine Display of Easter Meats

Unusual interest is being taken in the fine display of Easter Meats at Alex. Gordon's Arcade Meat Market, 326 1-2 George street. One of the principal attractions is a mammoth calf, which dresses nearly 400 lbs, although only four months old. You never saw nicer, richer dressed veal. Mr. Gordon also shows some excellent spring lambs, prime Easter beef, delicious mutton, pork, etc., all specially fed for Mr. Gordan's trade, by local feeder Mr. Gordon's trade, by local feed prompt delivery. The shop will be open this evening until 9 o'clock. Both phones 253. Alex. Gordon, Arcade Meat Market.

MAKING TIRES LAST.

Many Motorists are puzzled as to why neighbours of theirs are able to get many hundreds of miles more out of their tires than they can, and are often inclined to blame the make of tire they use for the difference instead of stopping to think that perhaps it is their own carelessness.

The one thing which ruins tires more quickly, and which is accountable for perhaps 75 per cent. of the tire trouble of the average Motorist is the fact that he will persist in running his car on tires that have not been sufficiently inflated. The Goodyear people say that all tires should be inflated up to their full capacity at all times. The proper riding capacity is 28 pounds per inch of tire diameter. Thus a 4-inch tire should be kept at 80 pounds pressure.

Some Motorists seem to think that if they keep their tires properly inflated that they are liable to burst. As a matter fo fact, a tire that has been properly inflated will last almost twice as long as an under-inflated, the side fabric is weakened by being bent and strained which causes blowouts in the sides of the tire where 90 per cent. of the blowouts occur.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

All the world over, Easter is a season of great rejoicing, as everything begins to cast off the dinginess of winter and nature herself exhibits the spirit of resurrection.

* * * *

The Easter festival of our forefathers covers a period of fifteen days. The week beginning with Easter Sunday was almost entirely given over to sport and games and general merry making.

* * * *

Easter is a moveable festival. It is always the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after the twenty-first day of March; and if the full moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter Day is the Sunday following.

* * * *

The sacred festival of Easter has been appropriately termed "the queen of festivals." It has been observed from the foundation of the Christian religion, and is celebrated in every part of the Christian world with great solemnity and devotion.

* * * *

Easter in Athens.

The story of the resurrection is told at Athens amid a blaze of silver and gold. For some time before Easter, Athens wears a picturesque aspect. This is due in great part to the number of shepherds who, with their flocks, have come down from the mountains and are camped in every available open space, engaged in selling their lambs. There is no family so poor as not to break the long lenten fast with an Easter lamb, the value of which is about a dollar, and a veritable massacre of the innocents is going on. It is late on Saturday night that the real Easter celebration takes place.

An immense crowd fills all the approaches to the cathedral and such parts of the church as are not kept clear. Without, a raised platform has been erected and decorated with evergreens.

In the cathedral the royal princess, the ministers of state, and the high functionaries of the kingdom assemble to attend the midnight service. As the hour of midnight approaches, the metropolitan with his assistants, preceded by the cross and banners, advance with lighted tapers. The various notabilities light their tapers from that of the archbishop, and so the sacred fire is communicated to the crowd.

As the midnight hour sounds and Easter succeeds the last day of Lent, the metropolitan, a blaze of silver and gold, with his tiara, the silver gospel, and the episcopal crosier, ascends the platform outside the church and proclaims to the assembled people the tidings: "Christ is risen!"

* * * *

There are many superstitions connected with Easter Sunday which are significant of the season, and are almost as imperative as laws. One of these is the necessity of having something new to wear on this day in order to ensure happiness for the coming year. Hence the Easter bonnet.

* * * *

Palestine, the spot where the resurrection we commemorate took place, is supremely emblematic of the season, because there the spring suddenly bursts forth and all the verdures and flowers spring up as though a magic wand had been waved over the land, for the excessive dreariness of winter is broken in the orient when it is still winter in western lands.

Of all the holidays of the year, Christmas and Easter stand more prominently on the page of history than any others. Throughout all the initiations and vicissitudes that have entered into the world's history during the past two thousand years, the two festivals that commemorate respectively the birth and the resurrection of the Man of Nazareth still shine with a lustre that remains unfaded after a lapse of twenty centuries.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE CROSS

A most interesting service, entitled "The Tragedy of the Cross," will be held in the S. A. Temple, Simcoe street, on Good Friday evening. The story of the Crucifixion, as narrated in the Gospels, will be further supplemented with a number of appropriate solos and duets, and illustrated with several striking scenic representations, making a most impressive service. A cordial invitation is extended to the public and an offering will be taken at the door.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS

The demands of the St. Thomas Board of Education for 1912 totals $80,998.00.

By considerable pruning of the estimates, St. Thomas' Council made their tax rate 21 1-2 mills.

The tax rate in Galt for the year is 23 1-2 mills, the same as last year.

Belleville's Council went one better than Peterborough, or one worse. They sat until one o'clock on Tuesday morning.

Brantford will buy 500 feet of Paragon hose for its fire department this year, and the Council will go to the people on a proposal to light the streets with cluster lights like those of Toronto.

Brantford granted $1600 to its Industrial Commission. Two factories have been secured by the Industrial Commission plan.

Ingersoll has a shortage in its debenture fund amounting to $3,773,000. The shortage in the sinking fund is due to the change in the rate of interest made by the bank from 4 to 3 per cent.

Mayor Price of St. Thomas thinks there is something wrong with the school system, when they have to pay five times as much for high school purposes as for public schools, when, as a matter of fact, about four-fifths of the pupils went through the public schools only.

Dr. Lumley—"You'll have to impress the authoritie at Toronto with that fact."

Brantford's Sanitary Inspector receives $900 a year. He combines relief work with his regular position.

Guelph's tax rate for the year has been placed at 23 mills.

Belleville Council and Board of Trade are sending a deputation to Cincinnati to inspect the works of the Ohio Motor Car Company, with a view to securing a branch of the industry for the city. They have discussed the question with a representative of the company.

The proposed factory would be 400 x 60 feet and at the commencement from 40 to 60 hands would be employed. The proposition means that a certain amount of stock would have to be subscribed, here. The company would require that $50,000 be raised in Belleville in stock of the proposed $150,000, a free site from the city and a fixed assessment for some time. The company would like a site of about 3 acres.

L. O. L. MEET.

New Candidate Initiated Into Mysteries of the Order.

Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 1175 met last night in their Simcoe street quarters. One new candidate was initiated, and two members were given the Royal Arch degree. Mr. George McCartney addressed the members upon the subject of the "benefits to be derived from insurance."

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

There are many people in Peterborough, who would like to take advantage of the options given to members of the Horticultural Scisty, and who have been careless about joining that body. In order to give such people a chance applications will be received until next week. They are advised to look after the matter at once.

HOW NERVE CELLS ARE BROKEN DOWN

Every man or woman who works with the brain uses up daily an enormous amount of nerve force. Millions of tiny nerve cells are broken down and must be replaced if mental and bodily efficiency is to be maintained.

If brain fag, headaches, sleeplessness or irritability set in, the evidence is plain that nature is not rebuilding as fast as work is breaking down. You cannot allow this depleting process to continue long if nervous prostration or paralysis is to be warded off.

Dr Chase's Nerve Food will help you to get the balance on the other side of the account, so that each day will add a little to your stock of health and vitality. A man whose work is largely mechanical may keep going with health below par, but the brain worker mus thave a clear head or fall behind in the race. Restore the wasted nerve cells with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and know the joys of good health and success.

The Sacred Oratorio "THE CRUCIFIXION" will be solemnly sung in St. John's Church, Good Friday Night, at 8. Combined Choir of All Saints' and St. John's of 70 voices. Richard J. Dovey, Conductor.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day he is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hasbourgay, 20 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

RAILWAY NOTES

Mr. Howard G. Kelly, Vice President of the Grand Trunk System, has returned to Montreal after several days' absence in New England, where he has been in connection with the G.T.R. extensions through the States of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New Hampshire.

The Chief Engineer of McArthur Bros., the big contractors of New York city, who have had much experience in new railroad construction, reports after his forces have spent several days in going over the plans for the New England extensions of the Grand Trunk, that the manner in which the locating engineers have taken advantage of every point of the situation to obtain a low grade line with economy of construction, and the manner in which they have placed the line in the congested manufacturing district through which it will be constructed, so as to enjoy central locations with the least possible damage to property, was a marvel of ingenuity and forethought and redounded greatly to the credit of the engineers in charge of the work; and further that the plans and information submitted to the contractors were the most complete and reliable that they had met with in their experience. This only indicates the care and thoroughness with which the Grand Trunk has prepared all of its plans for its extensions into this important industrial section.

SMALL BLAZE

A fire broke out, between twelve and one o'clock to-day, in the home of Mr. H. Garrish, of 135 Murray St., caused by an overheated stove-pipe. Some carpets and curtains were burnt but with the assistance of neighbours the blaze was extinguished, without having to summon the Fire Brigade. The damage will amount to $25 or $30.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron.

THERE is a certain type of woman, for whom all her sisters will work their fingers to the bone. Because they love her so well, you ask? Ah, no, my friend, quite to the contrary. Because they are afraid of her, afraid of her roving eye, in awe of her critical mind, frightened to death of her pitiless tongue.

A friend of mine was about to open her home for a week-end house-party. The day before the guests were to arrive, she and her maid spent at least eight solid hours scrubbing and polishing and generally putting in order what seemed to me in the first place, a thoroughly well-scrubbed and polished and orderly home.

"Why am I so absurdly particular about half a dozen old friends?" she answered my query. "It isn't for half a dozen old friends. It's for one of them. Do you know Mrs. M.? Well, if you did you'd understand. My dear, I believe that woman could see a grain of dust behind a picture in an unlighted room at midnight. If a single picture in the house isn't hung exactly straight, if there's a worn place in one of my chairs or carpets, or a single finger mark anywhere on the paint—and you know how hard it is to keep all that white paint clean—that woman will know it and talk about it for months. She can tell at a glance just what every article in the house cost from the napkins to the piano. If a gown doesn't fit just right she knows it in a minute and can hardly keep her eyes off of it. I once wore a waist to her house that was too big in the collar and I could see that she ached to speak about it. Just wait until she comes and you'll see why I'm so 'absurdly particular' as you call it."

I waited and I saw. After the first five minutes of our acquaintance, during which Mrs. M.'s roving eye took me in from head to foot, set down my style of hair-dressing as antiquated, reckoned the price per yard of my gown, decided that the collar was real Irish, sighted a little wrinkle in the yoke, and made me uncomfortably conscious of every inch of myself, I understood.

I think we all know one or more women of this type. We have all worked ourselves weary before opening our homes to them. A visit from such a one is not a visit. It is a tour of inspection.

And yet, after all, who shall say but that we need them. Mrs. M.'s tours of inspection are sometimes unpleasant, but they are apt to be healthful. My friend says that in anticipation of Mrs. H.'s visit, she cleared out a closet which had been needing attention for at least two years. And for my part I had that wrinkle in my yoke attended to the very next day.

Although we may not love the critics who lash us towards perfection, let us still give them "honour due."

But I certainly wouldn't want to be one of them. Would you?

Ruth Cameron

HAY IS UP $3.00

Conditions of the Roads Responsible for Temporary Advance

Hay has been selling at $18 a load on the market during the week owing to the difficult conditions under which it is brought to Peterborough. The city roads are bare of snow and sleighing is impossible, but in the country the snow is still deep and ruts are numerous. Wheels have had to be used in bringing in hay and on this account the farmers have boosted their prices about three dollars a load. Those living near the city have been taking advantage of the present conditions and are thereby receiving a little larger profit.

ELECTRIC POWER COMPANY TO INSTALL NEW PLANT AT OSHAWA

Mr. W. H. Munro, the Local Manager, Gives Reason for the Project to the Examiner To-day—Work Will Commence This Summer.

The Electric Power Company, in order to spare no pains in furnishing to the residents in the Trent River district, electric power of maximum efficiency and minimum expense has arranged for the construction in Oshawa of a large auxiliary plant during the coming season.

The plant will have a generating capacity equal to the entire requirements of Oshawa and district. It will be built on the lands owned by the Company immediately adjacent to the sub-station, and opposite the gas plant. A plant of 5000 h.p. capacity and an expenditure of about six hundred thousand dollars, is proposed, but it will not be necessary to make the full installation this summer. The design will provide for installation of additional units from time to time, as the demand for electric power in Oshawa factories increases.

The Company propose to use for this auxiliary service the Diesel oil engines, which have been so favourably commented upon by the press in all quarters during the last few months. It will be recalled that the use of these engines in naval service has been investigated by both the British and the German admiralties, and results which are little short of revolutionary are expected from them.

The President of the Power Company has recently been in England inspecting the operation of the Diesel plants used for power service in that country, and a representative of the Company is now on his way to Europe to make the purchase of the engines required for the Oshawa plant.

This type of engine has been developed by European makers during the last ten years, but has only been manufactured successfully in large size in the last two or three years. The manufacture of such engine appears to offer an attractive field of enterprise to the Canadian engine builder, as the demand for electric power in field and is, as yet, untouched by any Canadian firm.

No information is obtainable from the company with regard to the cost of power as generated by these engines, but it may be safely assumed that the heavy expenditure involved would not be made if the cost of this power per h.p. is materially higher than the cost of power now transmitted to Oshawa from Peterborough or Trenton.

In conversation with an Examiner reporter this morning Mr. W. H. Munro, the manager of the local branch, explained the reason for this installation.

"Oshawa," he said, "is at the end of the west transmission line, and in order to safeguard the customers at the end of the line there should be a source of power there. There is no water power there, so they are putting in an auxiliary oil engine plant, probably the largest oil engine plant in Ontario. The company anticipates that all its water power will be used at the points where the water power is generated as power can be sold more cheaply at these points than it can be exported. Therefore to provide for the market, this plant is being installed at Oshawa."

Oshawa will have a further advantage owing to the fact that the installation of this auxiliary plant will set at rest any fears of power or lighting interruption in their supply of electric current, no matter how adverse the weather or other conditions may be.

CLIMATE HURTS WEAK LUNGS

In this climate there are always numbers of people whose lungs are weak and who either have a chronic cough or else catch cold easily and are very likely to take pneumonia.

A New York girl, Miss Louise Jesel, has written a letter on this subject, saying "In the past year I have been troubled with weak lungs and palpitation of the heart. Having heard that Vinol was a great strength ener I began taking it and it has done me a world of good.

"I have no cough now, my heart is all right and I have gained greatly in strength and energy."

Naturally, as soon as her strength had been built up to the right point by Vinol, all symptoms of her former trouble vanished.

This delicious cod liver and iron remedy, without oil, not only creates strength and enriches the blood, but always agrees with the stomach.

Get a bottle of Vinol to-day and begin receiving its curative power. We guarantee it to please you.

St. John's Harbor Project.

Excitement is tense just now in St. John, N.B. The great harbor project on which depends so much the future of the city is moving. Tenders for the immense drydock and ship repair plant closed on August 10. English capitalists are making a strong bid for the contracts, which involve millions. Admiral Kingsmill, of the Canadian navy, in St. John expressed himself very optimistically about the possibilities of St. John Harbor East. There is some talk that a Canadian firm will build a shipyard at St. John, and construct ships for the Canadian navy.

Interesting Old Cemetery Is To Be Found in Halifax.

To the lover of the antique and the seeker after historical relics but few places in Canada hold more records of her early history than the old St. Paul's Cemetery, situated on Pleasant street, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Facing the Government House and within a minute's walk from the busy commercial centre of the city, the ancient graveyard impresses one with a sense of almost ghostly retirement, and the mighty trees which overspread the irregular lines of tombstones have the effect of creating a funereal shade which no sunlight can pierce.

Flanking the entrance to the cemetery is a huge arch of red sandstone crowned by a lion and erected to the memory of the men of two English regiments who fell in the Crimean War. Other records there are to the dead of the Indian Mutiny and the first Cabul campaign, but the most interesting records relate to the sailors and soldiers who died for the flag in the North American wars.

Near the Crimean arch is a simple slab of red sandstone upon which is engraved: "Sacred to the Memory of Mr. John Samwell, midshipman of His Majesty's Ship Shannon, who died at the Naval Hospital on 12th June, 1813, aged 18 years. Also to Mr. William Stevens, boatswain of the same ship, who died there on the 19th June, 1813, aged 54 years. Those brave officers closed their careers in consequence of desperate wounds received in the gallant action between their own ship and the American frigate Chesapeake on the 1st of June, 1813, which ended in the capture of the enemy's ship in 16 minutes."

The story of the duel between Captain Broke and Commodore Lawrence of Boston in the frigates Shannon and Chesapeake is a well-known story in connection with the war of 1812, and it was to Halifax that the victorious Shannon sailed after the engagement, with the defeated Chesapeake in tow.

A reminiscence of the days when the West Indies were the dreaded stations for soldiers and sailors, owing to the prevalence of "Yellow Jack," is to be found in a stone erected by the officers and crew of Her Majesty's Ship Volage, to the memory of Mr. W. B. De Courcy, Volunteer, First Class, who died at sea of yellow fever on June 2nd, 1862, while the days when Halifax was an important naval station for the old wooden walls is found in a host of others erected to Master Gunners, Boatswains, Captain's Stewards, Lieutenants, etc., who have died or were killed while on the North American station. One of the latter is memorized in the case of "William Howell, who fell from the foretop of H.M.S. Illustrious in June, 1849."

The old-time West India merchantmen have also a few records to show, one of the tablets erected being to the memory of James Alexander, "who was unfortunately drowned on the night of 20th September, 1836, from on board the brig Michael Wallace in the Crooked Island Passage on her voyage from Kingston, Jamaica, to Halifax," while the stone to the memory of "Mr. Richard Dunstone, who died on the 20th day of April, 1819, on his passage to New York in command of His Majesty's Packet Queensberry," recalls the days of the first naval packet ships which carried supplies and despatches to the fleets on their stations and the various colonial settlements.—Canadian Century.

He Didn't.

John Joseph Ward, a controller of the city of Toronto, is an adept in the gentle art of jesting. He loves a joke, and he becomes almost ecstatic when he pulls off some practical joke on one of his colleagues.

His latest was at the expense of Controller F. S. Spence. As almost everybody knows, Mr. Spence is a prominent prohibitionist, and is always interested in temperance matters.

The other day Mr. Ward came to a Board of Control meeting with a neat little pamphlet in his hand. It was labelled on the cover "The Drink Question."

"Here's something you'll be interested in, Frank," he remarked quite casually to his temperance colleague.

Controller Spence glanced at the title, was interested, took the pamphlet in his hand, sat down, took his glasses out, wiped them, put them on his nose and prepared to read. He opened the booklet and saw printed there in large type, "Are You Going to Buy?"

Folding it up, he smiled a sickly smile, and handed it back to the joker.—Courier.

Getting It Right.

The motto above the great editor's desk read, "Accuracy, Accuracy, Accuracy."

Therefore the story turned in by the cub reporter contained this statement: "Three thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine eyes were fixed upon the speaker."

"What means this fool statement?" asked the great editor, as he prepared to edit the gem.

"One man was blind in one eye," explained the cub.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A FRENCH CALENDAR.

The One That Was Adopted During the Revolution.

In the French revolution the national convention adopted a new calendar containing twelve months of thirty days each. The five days in the year then left were disposed of by making them "festivals." The months were named not January, February, etc., but Vendemiaire, Brumaire, Frimaire, Nivose, Pluviose, Ventose, Germinal, Floreal, Prairial, Messidor, Thermidor and Fructidor.

Each of these names had a meaning. Instead of naming a month meaningfully after a heathen god, as we have January after Janus and March after Mars, the names represented the special characteristics of the fourth, Vendemiaire, its vintages, which immediate part of what we call September, comprise "the fruity month." Germinal, the first of the spring months, running from the 21st of March to the middle of April, means "the month of buds," and Floreal, which follows it, the "flowery" or "flowers" month.

Thermidor, which means the "hot month," is the month which under the republican calendar included part of July and part of August. The political significance of the word arises from the fact that the revolution which overthrew Robespierre and ended the reign of terror occurred on the 9th of the month of Thermidor, or, as we should say, July 27, 1794. It was called "the revolution of Thermidor," as we speak of "the September massacres," and the revolutionists were nicknamed "Thermidorians." The inventor of the calendar was Romme.—New York Times.

Record Police Chase.

Inspector of Detectives Thomas Ryan has completed a great feat in the annals of rounding up criminals. On July 31, Ryan packed his grip and got on a transcontinental for New Westminster, B.C., where the police department were holding a cheap called Alexander Dick, wanted in Ottawa for tricking a lumber company out of $1,034. In ten days Ryan was back in Ottawa with his prisoner. In that time he had traveled 5,000 miles. To cover that amount of ground alone in the time would have been not little accomplishment. But Ryan on his return journey, from the Coast had to attend to special duties — eat with, sleep with, and watch like a hawk a daring criminal.

Right Handed Parrots.

Past the parrot cages walked the bird fancier, poking an inquisitive finger at the birds.

"I am looking for a right handed parrot, he said, "but there doesn't seem to be one in this lot. Most parrots are left handed. Training, not nature, made them so.

"Their owners are right handed and when putting out a finger for the bird to stand on it is most convenient for him to step up with the left foot. In a little while that left handed action becomes second nature and he doesn't know how to use his right foot first.

"The only right handed parrots have belonged to left handed persons. In their training the order was reversed. The left finger was extended for a perch and the bird naturally grasped it with his right foot."—New York Sun.

The Sign on the Bottle.

Maggie is a willing but rather stupid domestic in a Chicago family. She suffered from toothache for some time, and the creosote that had been prescribed proving ineffectual, her mistress procured another remedy at the drug store. Thinking to impress the girl with the necessity of being careful in the use of it, she said: "Now, Maggie, do you see the skull and crossbones on this label? Do you know what they mean?"

"Yes, ma'am," Maggie promptly replied; "they mean that the medicine is good for the teeth."

They Had Bird's Nest Soup.

Some visitors in China write of their experiences:

After a program of visits during the day, punctuated with refreshments, we would go bravely to an evening banquet of many courses and more speeches at tables brilliant with flags and flowers, with gifts set beside plates and menu cards bearing designs of interwoven flags, clasped hands and a list of viands like a page from the big geography in the little red schoolhouse. Bird's nest soup became a reality after years of imagining it. Pigeon eggs floated whole in the distinguished liquid to complete the imagery. Bird's nest soup is the sign of a royal welcome, for it has grown rare and costly. A lady missionary sat opposite me at a viceroy's dinner.

"I have been in China eighteen years," said she, "and this is my first bird's nest soup."

"I have been in China ten days," said I, "and this is my fourth plate."

"They are treating you like kings," said she.—Christian Science Monitor.

Panama Canal Pageant.

What vessel shall lead the grand pageant of the navies of the world through the Panama canal when it is formally opened? The event is some distance in the future, but the question is already being discussed. Some urge the Oregon, in recognition of its famous trip round the continent at the outbreak of the war with Spain. Others suggest the old sailing man-of-war Portsmouth, which was the defender of the Pacific coast during the Mexican war and which ran up the American flag at Yerba Buena, now San Francisco. The Portsmouth is now at Norfolk as a quarantine ship.—Youth's Companion.

Their Last Hour.

The lovely maiden shuddered involuntarily and drew closer to her lover. A look of unutterable sadness stole over her face, and a tear-drop welling from her azure eye stole down her nose and made a blister on the young man's clean white [illegible].

"Why are you crying, darling?" he murmured, sneezing, as her wig, which tickled his left nostril.

"I was thinking," she said, gulping down a sob and a marshmallow simultaneously, "that this will be our last evening together until tomorrow."

AN ANGEL ELEPHANT

He Heard Some Very Plain Talk, and It Pleased Him.

By GRETCHEN GRAYDON.

"I wonder if you dream how adorable you are in that blue gown," Hetherton said, trying to postpone himself of Philomena's hand.

She drew it away, pursed her lips daintily and flung back at him: "Oh, it's the gown, is it? Thank you for telling me. I shall be sure to wear it the next time the MacCarty comes to see us."

"Confound the MacCarty!" Hetherton ejaculated. "I'd like to break his head for him, the presumptuous cad. What business has he even to admire you?"

"Mayn't a cat look at a king?" Philomena interrupted demurely, her eyes dancing in the screen of their long lashes.

She had the charm of infinite variety. Some days she was positively ugly, others ravishingly beautiful. This was one of the beautiful days. She knew it and acted upon the knowledge. She eyed Hetherton for several things, chiefly Miss Mannering. He should be paid in full. He had never proposed to her outright, but all along assumed gayly that she would marry him, speaking openly, in a light comedy manner that might mean everything or nothing. She had got recently the light comedy manner, being by no means sure of her own mind.

Still, it had been distinctly aggravating to have him run off after the Mannering girl the same as the other men. For two whole days he had kept in the new beauty's train. Worse still, he had come back to Philomena not merely repentant, but with the air of one who feels that he has discharged the duty of a proper man.

"A cat may look at a king. The proverb is silent as to queens," Hetherton retorted. "Moreover, you can scarcely stretch it to fit an elephant, which is the MacCarty's animal prototype."

"Now I know how I came to promise him two dances—I adore elephants—always did," Philomena murmured reflectively, as if aside.

Hetherton caught both her hands and drew her to her feet. "Do you mean to keep the promise?" he asked, his face darkening. She smiled up at him audaciously as she answered:

"Who knows? He may prefer to sit them out. But if he should you needn't mind. We will take care to keep out of earshot of you and Miss Mannering"—

"Oh, I see," Hetherton laughed, not quite easily, but with a magical lightening of countenance. "I must say that will be handsome of you," he went on; then, his hands slipping up to her shoulders, "Sweetheart, let's run away from everything—the grand ball, the elephant, the Mannering—run away and get married. Listen! It will be so easy—only a spin across country to that dear little stone church we saw last week. We'll take along witnesses—and telegraph for our traps to follow us. If 'twere done, when 'twere done then 'twere well 'twere done quickly. Think how much we shall escape, all the fuss and frills and fussiments of a big wedding! And this is the only way to escape them. I know your aunt has her heart set on St. Thomas', with twelve bridesmaids and all the rest of it. Say yes; there's a darling. I will live just to keep you from being sorry for it, even one time."

"It sounds exciting," Philomena said, then with a reflective sigh: "But it can't be done. You see, if I ran off with you the Mannering would inevitably get the MacCarty and his millions. That's what she is here for, and that's what I'm bound not to let her do."

"Have your joke," Hetherton grumbled, trying to draw her to his breast.

She put him away with gentle dignity, saying: "But it is not a joke. That's why I am so provoked with you. You let yourself be one of her bait gudgeons. Oh, she's a shrewd piece! She knows a man like the MacCarty means to pick a wife as he has picked a racing stable—from among those other men want very much."

"How do you know?" Hetherton demanded.

Philomena opened her eyes very wide. "Why, he told me so," she said. "You know we are great friends and talk of many things. And he is really vastly entertaining—such a big bulk of raw human nature, with streaks of wit and other streaks of understanding through its honest ignorance."

"H-m! You are somewhat a belle. How many times has he proposed to you?" Hetherton asked.

"Only once, the first day," Philomena said, smiling wickedly. "I asked time for consideration, but he wouldn't give it. He wanted a straight yes or no, but consoled me by telling me that if after awhile he was not engaged he would give me another chance. So I must be sure to make up my mind. I know he is not engaged, not unless Miss Mannering has landed him since morning."

"Is your mind made up?" Hetherton asked teasingly.

Philomena shook her head, but said brightly: "Not yet. Still, there's no telling what may happen between dances."

"Then you refuse—my case—anything?" Hetherton said, paling visibly.

Philomena shot a glance at him and shivered faintly, but said with an accent of gentle surprise, "Why, I did that some time ago."

"You will fight the Mannering woman for the MacCarty. You would not even raise a finger for me," Hetherton began bitterly.

Philomena laughed a soft, malicious laugh. "One saves a novice from drowning. A swimmer who knows the waters is apt to regard help as an impertinence," she said.

Hetherton set his teeth. "Goodby," he said, hardly above his breath, holding out his hand. Philomena looked at him doubtfully and asked, "Where are you going?"

"I don't know—to the devil most likely," he answered recklessly.

"Beg pardon, telegram for you, sir," a footman said, coming to the pair with a yellow envelope on his tray.

Hetherton tore it open, glanced at its contents, then stood twirling it between his fingers and smiling an odd, dazed smile. After a long breath he took Philomena in his arms and kissed her, saying in her ear:

"Luck has stood your friend. I'm a beggar, or shall be in two hours more. That was a call for margins I can no more put up than I can fly. I've been speculating wildly. I wanted you so badly I thought I must offer you millions no less than myself. Until today they seemed in my grasp. That was why I dared. But I'm losing everything at once."

"Not quite," she said, clinging to him, her eyes shining up at him through a mist of tears. "You may have me if you lose everything else. I'm not afraid of poverty if I may have love."

"Seems like it's time I took a hand in this game," a throaty voice said behind them, and there stood the MacCarty, very red and all over perspiration. He had been ambushed all the while in the summer house outside which the lovers stood. "You fellys think Het'rin' ain't the right thing," he went on. "No more it ain't, but I waited from a nap as you were in the midst o' talkin', and it didn't take ten words to show me the lay o' the land. I like the lay of it. The little lady there," nodding toward Philomena, "has got me doped out fine and pat, but she didn't make sport of the old galoot. She said it in good, but she has looked out for me. She's more'n that, she's made me ashamed that she at least cud [illegible] couldn't buy. You ain't half good enough for her," this to Hetherton, with a chuckle, "but since it appears she likes the looks o' ye, be hanged if you're a-goin' to take her that-a-way. Live in a cottage, at least not unless the cottage's got all the fixin's. You need to tell me how you stand. I ain't quite out o' the market. I can go there in the mountains, courtin' and rusticatin'. If you need margins I know the names who. He, right straight to the telephone. I'll be along o' ye. Together we'll get the straight o' things down to a dot over my private wire. I'm goin' to see you through if it takes one million or even two. But when you are through you git married and keep out of such messes."

"I will," Hetherton said, holding out his hand.

Before the MacCarty could take it Philomena flung herself between them, threw her arms about his thick neck and kissed him on both cheeks. "You're an angel elephant," she murmured. "I shall love you always, no matter what he says," with a nod toward Hetherton.

"He says, 'Amendment accepted,'" Hetherton said, wringing the MacCarty's hand.

That gentleman laughed apologetically, then returned the grip heartily and said as he puffed away with Hetherton at his elbow:

"Ye takes just an angel elephant to steer the bulls and bears good and hard."

WIFE OF THE P.M. TALKS TO WOMEN

Tells What Dodd's Kidney Pills Did For Her.

She Suffered For Two Years and Found a Cure For All Her Troubles in a Single Box.

Lower Caraquet, Gloucester, N.B., April 3.—(Special).—Mrs. Jos. O. Chiasson, wife of the police magistrate here, who for two years has been practically an invalid, is again in the best of health and she is telling her friends how quick and complete was her cure when she took Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My illness," Mrs. Chiasson says, "was caused by a strain and for two years I was a sufferer. My back ached, I was always tired and nervous, there were dark circles under my eyes and after sleeping I had a bitter taste in my mouth.

"I had a pressure and sharp pains on the top of my head, I was always thirsty and my skin had a harsh, dry feeling. I was often dizzy, I perspired readily and my perspiration had an unpleasant odour.

"Almost from the first dose Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me and by the time I had finished the first box I was a well woman."

Mrs. Chiasson's symptoms showed that the trouble was her kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her so quickly.

WILL HAVE A PITCHING STAFF THAT NOBODY IN THE LEAGUE CAN DUPLICATE

Manager Templin is Enthusiastic Over His Team—Has 7 Pitchers Now and Will Get a Couple More Before Wedding Down.

SOME DOPE ON TEAM

Manager Templin has his team practically complete now and for the first time has ventured to prophesy as to how his squad will shape up. In a letter received by Secretary Davidson this morning, Templin waxes enthusiastic over the men he has rounded up and coming from a man who has a record of sixteen years in professional ball, and who knows the game inside and out, this communication sounds mighty good to the local management.

"I have three deals on with players, all three pitchers, and all first-class men," writes Old Folks. "If I land one of these men I will be doing well. At present I have seven pitchers whose records are good, but of course I can't use them all. However I will have a pitching staff that nobody in the league can duplicate. I won't have a bad one in the whole lot, and when I get done weeding them down to the four pitchers that I will carry, they will make the other clubs look mighty sick. I have three first-class catchers, all of them good. Two I will use behind the bat and the other I can play in right field or change them about as I see fit in order that their hitting may benefit the team. I have two first basemen, both good, one a left-hand hitter, the other a right-hand batter. The best hitter will stay and the other, if I can't use him somewhere else, will have to go. I have one extra infielder who can play either third or short and if things do not break right I have this man to fill in with. As to my other two outfielders, there is no question about them. Speaking of myself, I will be there better than I was last year as I am feeling fine and working out splendidly."

How Would "Paddlers" Do?

New Names Suggested for the Peterborough Baseball Team

I would suggest as a name for the Peterborough team, "The Vultures." You know everything is "meat" to this kind of poultry.

J. M. D.

As a suitable name for the Baseball club I would suggest "The Paddlers."

W. J. A.

Nick-name Editor:

I would suggest as a good name for the Peterborough baseball team this year, the "Electric Giants," as I am told there will be a number of big men on the team.

P. A.

Nick-name Editor:

A good name for our professional baseball would be "Electric Petes."

D. W.

Nick-name Editor:

I would suggest the "Hustlers" or "Giants" as I have been noticing the size of the men. "Hustlers" would correspond with the team very well.

V. S.

Nick-name Editor:

As a name for the Peterborough ball club, I would suggest "The Navigators" as this city has great facilities for navigation.

E. D.

Nick-name Editor:

Peterborough is known all over the world as being the home of the famous Peterborough canoe. Why not recognize the fact in naming the ball team and call the Templin squad 'The Canoeists' or some other similar cognomen.

JUST IN JEST

Jo Jo Keenan's hat is in the ring.

Hamilton has an outfielder by the name of Corns. He will probably be at the foot of the batting order.

Earl Hartman, Peterborough's third baseman is a stenographer in the closed season. He should be able to take the Umpire's dictation.

Elmer Beaver, one of Templin's pitching staff, is a school teacher. Elmer should be a handy man with the pad.

No, Matilda, no, Levi Rothenberger the Petes' first baseman, is not an Irishman, in spite of his name.

The Guelph Maple Leafs have a catcher named Hemlock. He'll be right there with the wood.

Peterborough fans are calling their team names now. There will be others later on if the Templin squad happens to be in the cellar after the first few weeks.

Ottawa Free Press: Peterborough has a pitcher by the name of Trout. He will probably get hooked when he works against those Ottawa fence demolishers.

H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught will require a baseball lexicon to decipher a few of the following which will come to his ears at Lansdowne park this summer: "'at a boy," "all 'a time, ole kid," "only takes one, ole boyah," "get a lead, old pal," "'at's one for you, Larry, ole kid.'

Hamilton Spectator: Peterborough is right after the players. Manager Templin claims to have landed a twirler who possesses a great spit ball. His name is Davis and he played last season with the Manayienk team in Philadelphia and comes to Canada with the best of recommendations from big leaguers.

Peterborough has also a first baseman named Connolly from the Bluffton Indiana League team. The team blew up, which is just about what anyone would expect with that name. The league also exploded, and Connolly was out of a job. He is a good man on first, and can also be used as utility catcher.

Guelph, April 3.—Al. Orth of Liverpool, N.Y., the last of the hold-outs of the Guelph Maple Leafs has come into the fold, Manager Needham having informed President W. A. Mahoney that he has received Orth's contract. He was the highest-paid man on the Guelph team last year, and when he asked for a further increase he was promptly turned down. He has signified his intention of taking the same as offered last year.

The club has also signed up Jack Shea, of Palmerston, for the Leafs. Shea is no stranger in Guelph, having been given a try-out by Manager Murray of the International League, of regretted memory. He says that he is in fine shape this year, and he will be given a chance to make good, thought he will have plenty of opposition.

WEDDING BELLS

McGREGOR—FROST.

A pretty wedding was solemnized last night at the home of Mr. George Frost, of Otonabee, when his daughter, Miss Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward McGregor, of North Monaghan. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. G. Brown, of St. James church in the presence of immediate relatives and friends. After the wedding ceremony, a delightful supper was partaken of and the happy couple left on the 7.40 train for a trip to Toronto.

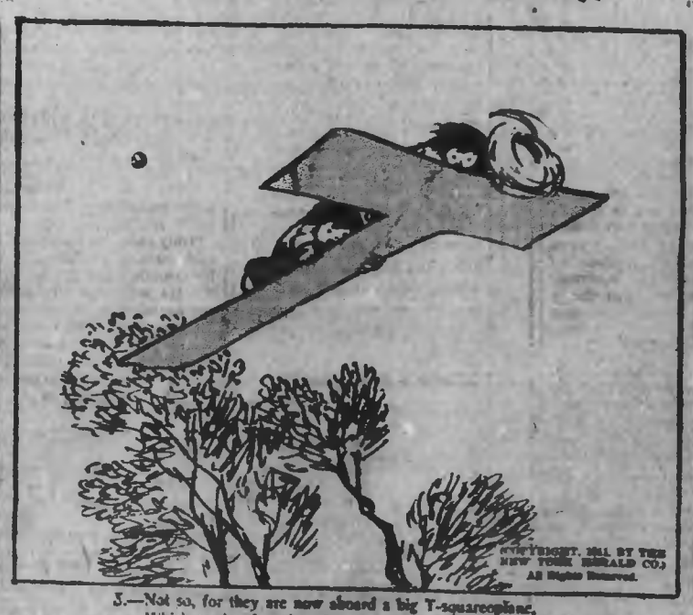
THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

1.—Oh, here's a funny Jackdawgur; [illegible] looking all around;
And that's her little Jackdawgister that's boring in the ground.

2.—These Tiny Tads have come to see these carpentering things;
They want to see some Hammermaids and Cockatools with wings.

3.—But when a wild Chisselephant comes charging into view,
"Let's go away from here," they say, "and seek for pastures new."

4.—And then some Animalleks come; a Sawk also appears;
He'll surely get those Tiny Tads and cut them up, poor dears!



5.—Not so, for they are now aboard a big T-squareoplane,
Which carries them in safety to rejoin their mates again.

6.—"I'd like to see a Monkey-wrench," you hear one of them say,
"And cunning little Chiltreaches that climb around and play."

H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught will require a baseball lexicon to decipher a few of the following which will come to his ears at Lansdowne park this summer: "'at a boy," "all 'a time, ole kid," "only takes one, ole boyah," "get a lead, old pal," "'at's one for you, Larry, ole kid.'

Hamilton Spectator: Peterborough is right after the players. Manager Templin claims to have landed a twirler who possesses a great spit ball. His name is Davis and he played last season with the Manayienk team in Philadelphia and comes to Canada with the best of recommendations from big leaguers.

Peterborough has also a first baseman named Connolly from the Bluffton Indiana League team. The team blew up, which is just about what anyone would expect with that name. The league also exploded, and Connolly was out of a job. He is a good man on first, and can also be used as utility catcher.

Guelph, April 3.—Al. Orth of Liverpool, N.Y., the last of the hold-outs of the Guelph Maple Leafs has come into the fold, Manager Needham having informed President W. A. Mahoney that he has received Orth's contract. He was the highest-paid man on the Guelph team last year, and when he asked for a further increase he was promptly turned down. He has signified his intention of taking the same as offered last year.

The club has also signed up Jack Shea, of Palmerston, for the Leafs. Shea is no stranger in Guelph, having been given a try-out by Manager Murray of the International League, of regretted memory. He says that he is in fine shape this year, and he will be given a chance to make good, thought he will have plenty of opposition.

WEDDING BELLS

McGREGOR—FROST.

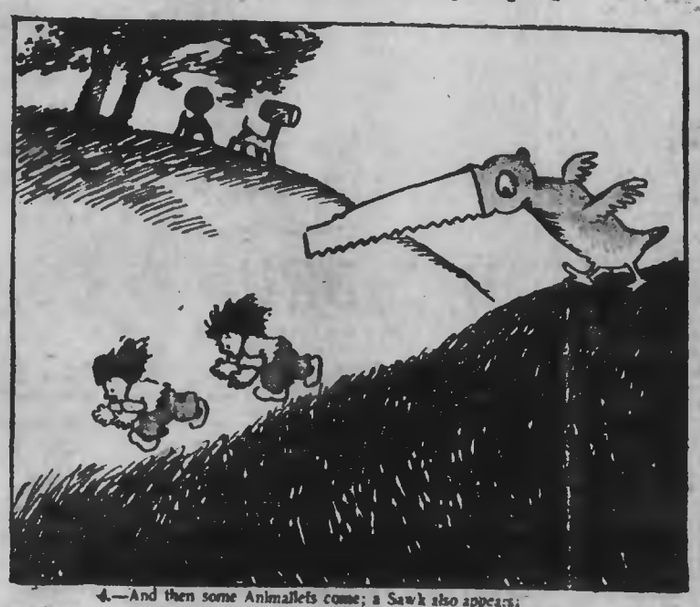
A pretty wedding was solemnized last night at the home of Mr. George Frost, of Otonabee, when his daughter, Miss Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward McGregor, of North Monaghan. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. G. Brown, of St. James church in the presence of immediate relatives and friends. After the wedding ceremony, a delightful supper was partaken of and the happy couple left on the 7.42 train for a trip to Toronto.

THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

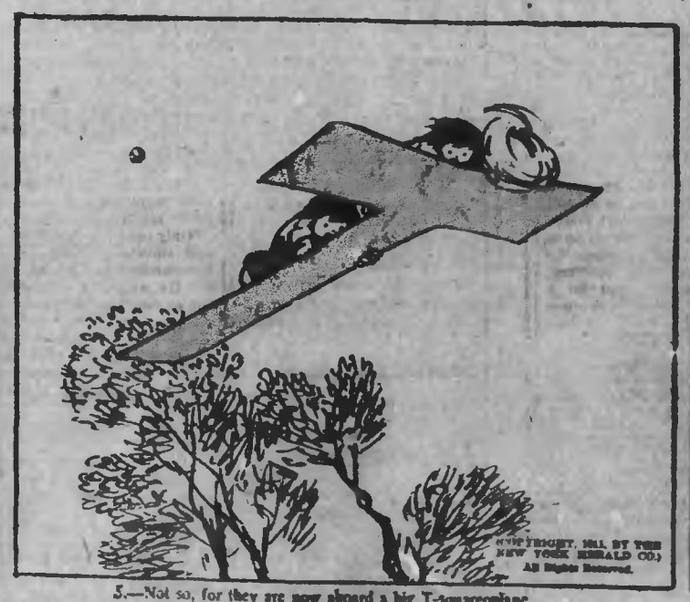
1.—Oh, here's a funny Jackdawgur; . . looking all around;
And that's her little Jackdawghter that's boring in the ground.

2.—These Tiny Tads have come to see these carpentering things;
They want to see some Hammermaids and Cockstools with wings.

3.—But when a wild Chiselephant comes charging into view,
"Let's go away from here," they say, "and seek for pastures new."



4.—And then some Animallets come; a Sawk also appears;
He'll surely get those Tiny Tads and cut them up, poor dears!



5.—Not so, for they are now aboard a big T-squareoplane,
Which carries them in safety to rejoi: their mates again.

6.—"I'd like to see a Monkey-wrench," you hear one of them say,
"And cunning little Childrenches that climb around and play."

LABOUR CONDITIONS IN PETERBOROUGH

Following is the report of the labor conditions in Peterborough for February as given in the Labour Gazette

The general condition of the labour market for February was active. Branches of industry were well employed except the building trades, cold and stormy weather being largely responsible for this. Building operations were suspended much of the time. Heavy snowfalls gave temporary employment at removing snow to a large number of men. The various ice houses have secured an abundance of ice of a quality unsurpassed in recent years. The Waterworks Department shows a surplus of $2,200.24 on the year's operations. The total revenue was $49,196.25. The expense account include $15,197.70, paid to the city in meeting the interest on debentures, $9,370.23 for sinking fund, and an amount for depreciation of tools and plant, and totalled $4,290.41. The annual meeting of the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company was held this month and the report showed that the company was in a flourishing condition and had expended $40,000 in the past two years remodelling new buildings and installing new plant. The International Harvester Company have started the manufacture of binder twine. About one hundred and twenty five are at present employed in this industry, the only difficulty experienced by the new manager being his inability to secure sufficient female help. The Canadian General Electric Company is advertising for tenders for the erection of another large building, the dimension for which are to be 325 by 80 feet.

The city will pave George street and Charlotte street this year, and work in this connection will be commenced as soon as the weather permits. The city council has passed a bylaw by which all sewers will be paid for on the frontage tax system. A rate of 58c per foot straight on all frontage will be the assessment on land on both sides of the street on which sewers are constructed and the remainder of the cost for such sewers will be borne by the corporation. The street watering will also be paid for by frontage tax. The city council has appointed a permanent assessor at a salary of $1400 per year. Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, tent manufacturers, have received a contract from the Dominion government for two hundred military tents.

The markets for agricultural products were well attended during the first part of the month but the attendance has lately fallen off on account of the heaviness of the roads. Prices are the highest ever known.

HONEST TEA IS THE BEST POLICY

In order to find out to what extent the different food products are used by its millions of readers, the "Woman's World" (circulation over 2,000,000 copies monthly) recently inaugurated a most interesting coupon canvass.

One of the questions propounded was, "What tea do you use?" and the replies received demonstrate that Lipton's Tea is the most popular of all package teas, showing its sale to be double that of its nearest competitor and considerably over one hundred per cent. more than the next two mentioned brands taken together. Surely Honest Tea is the Best Policy.

CONCLUDING HOLY WEEK

To-morrow, Good Friday, will be solemnly celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral, and at the Church of the Sacred Heart. In the morning, the mass of the presanctified will be celebrated, at 9 o'clock; in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, there will be the Stations of the Cross, and at St. Peter's, at 7 p.m., there will be a special sermon by Rev. Father Fergus O'Brien. There will be the Stations of the Cross and sermon at the Church of the Sacred Heart at 7.30 p.m. Rev. Father Kelly of Norwood, will preach a special sermon on the Passion of Christ. Masses will be held at the usual hours on Sunday. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor will celebrate Pontifical High Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral at 10.30 a.m., on Easter Sunday. Rev. Father McColl will preach the sermon and at Pontifical vespers in the evening, Rev. Fr. McCarthy will preach. The Saturday morning services begin at 7 o'clock.

Daring Burglary at Dundas.

Dundas, April 6.—A daring attempt to burglarize Grafton & Co.'s store and head office was made about 1.40 yesterday morning by three men, who were interrupted by Night Officer J. F. Lumsden.

The officer hearing a noise, went to the rear of the big building to investigate. One of the men gave the alarm. Lumsden chased one man for five blocks and fired three shots, wounding the man slightly, but he made his escape towards the city.

Iron bars to assist in the work were stolen by the gang from R. J. Johnston's shop.

Trying to Release Fuchs.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 6.—An effort is being made by friends of William R. Fuchs, Toronto, held on the American side to answer to the grand jury for alleged issuing of worthless checks for $32, and passing it on Walter J. Colby, Niagara Hotel, to obtain his release by settling the account.

John Wicks, Toronto, promised Colby to make good the amount if he would refuse to prosecute Fuchs. Wicks was referred to District Attorney Ackerson of the grand jury, whom he will interview in Lockport to-day.

RECOMMEND A COMMISSION FOR ADMINISTRATION OF INSTITUTIONS

Canada's Institutions are Suffering from "Pull" says Dr. C. K. Clarke during the Course of an Address

Hospital Men Convene

Toronto, April 6.—Some straight-from-the-elbow remarks about the administration of provincial institutions, coupled with words of commendation for Hon. W. J. Hanna, were made by Dr. C. K. Clarke, superintendent of the General Hospital, at yesterday's meeting of the Canadian Hospital Association at the Parliament Buildings.

"Asylums must be emancipated from politics," he declared, in the course of a short address, reminiscent of some of his experience with regard to the management of institutions for the insane.

"I recognize political influence as the curse of the whole service," he continued. "I'm not afraid to say it, but I suppose you are."

Dr. Clarke said that the public don't understand institutions for the insane or the insane people themselves.

"We can't deny the fact," said he, "that the public regard them with horror. But I left the work reluctantly, because my whole heart was in it. However, I saw I couldn't institute the reform I had in view.

"Larger staffs are needed," he declared, "and the physicians in charge should be freed from clerical work." Dr. Clarke also referred to the salaries paid to attendants, etc.

"For $20 a month," said he, "the right kind of men can't be got. They are transients. The salaries are not at all commensurate with the service given. Now that I am out of the work, I can't see why I was such an idiot to stay there so long."

In contrasting the state of affairs that existed prior to the regime of the present Provincial Secretary, Dr. Clarke paid a tribute to Hon. Mr. Hanna.

"I am fully convinced," said he "that Mr. Hanna sees further than his nose, and that he has in view the placing of all these institutions on a high plane."

A broad-minded commission, unhampered by political influence was what Dr. Clarke recommended for the administration of provincial institutions.

"Superintendents should be appointed by reason of merit," he said, "rather that because they have been faithful to a political party."

Dr. Clarke, in conclusion, urged the establishment of psychiatric clinics in university centres.

"The Government would find it money well spent," he said.

One of these clinics has already been established in Boston and another in Baltimore. He hoped the next one would be in Toronto and it would be in connection with the Hospital and the university.

"We must have proper equipment and proper men to carry out the work," he continued. "We must not be hampered in institutions as we are. The time has come when we must have psychiatric clinics. It is a public right."

He thought the establishment of one or two of these clinics in connection with the new general hospital should be effected without delay.

Dr. R. H. Young of the Rockwood Hospital for the Insane, Kingston, said that the work of these institutions was not made public sufficiently. He startled the audience by telling that in the Rockwood Asylum four nurses and two orderlies attend to forty crazy men and there hasn't been an accident. Dr. Young maintained that the public didn't know what good work was being done in these institutions.

"Why, oftentimes," said he, "a man with incipient insanity is sent around the world to look at cathedrals, and if you would treat a case of incipient typhoid that way, you'd be laughed at, or charged with malpractice. The patient should be put on his back in bed." (Laughter.)

Tried to Murder Manchurian Viceroy.

Tientsin, April 6.—An attempt was made at noon yesterday to assassinate General Chao Erh-Hsuan, the viceroy of Manchuria, in Mukden, according to a message from there.

Two shots were fired at the viceroy as he was entering his yamen. No arrests were made.

The authorities believe that a conspiracy was instigated by Manchus because of General Chao's activity in behalf of the association for the preservation of peace, a Republican organization.

"Crazy Snake" Passes Over.

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 6.—"Crazy Snake," the Indian responsible for the last uprising in Oklahoma, died yesterday, according to a report received from Vinita. The old chief's end came near Old Hickory, the stamping ground of the Creeks in 1908.

The Indian had always contended that his tribe was robbed of its land by the whites.

Lenses Must Be Changed

Lenses do not wear out, but eyes do. Every part of the body changes with advancing years, and our eyes in common with the rest of our physical being show this effects of age. We must therefore meet the changed conditions of the eyes. The glasses that you bought ten, or even three years ago, are not giving your eyes the proper assistance. As the eyes are wearing out year by year, your lenses should be made stronger or weaker to correspond to your failing vision.

I will be pleased to have you call and let me explain the advantages of Toric or curved lenses over the old sight flat form. I can suit all prescription combinations, because I have every modern appliance for accurate Eyesight Testing. I have the largest and most up-to-date Optical Stock in the city to choose from.

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Tells How She Keeps Her Health — Happiness For Those Who Take Her Advice.

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strength that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My oldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to your wonderful medicine." —Mrs. J. G. Johnson, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for women's ills known.

"INITIALS ONLY"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Orlando, struck silent for a moment, dropped his hand and slowly turned away. Mr. Challoner felt Oswald stiffen in his arms, and break suddenly away, only to stop short before he had taken one of the half-dozen steps between himself and his departing brother.

"Where are you going?" he demanded in tones which made Orlando turn.

"I might say, To the Devil," was the sarcastic reply. "But I doubt if he would receive me. No," he added, in more ordinary tones as the other shivered and again started forward, "you will have no trouble in finding me in my own room to-night. I have letters to write and—other things. A man like me cannot drop out without a ripple. You may go to bed and sleep. I will keep awake for two."

"Orlando!" Visions were passing before Oswald's eyes, soul-crushing visions such as in his blameless life he never thought could enter into his consciousness or blast his tranquil outlook upon life. "Orlando!" he again appealed, covering his eyes in a frenzied attempt to shut out these horrors, "I cannot, let you go like this. To-morrow——"

"To-morrow, in every niche and corner of this world, wherever Edith Challoner's name has gone, wherever my name has gone, it will be known that the discoverer of a practical airship is a man whom they can with longer honour. Do you think that is not hell enough for me; or that I'm not all demon? I would gladly have spared you this additional anguish; but that was impossible. You are my brother and must suffer from the connection whether we would have it so or not. If it promises too much misery—and I know no misery like that of shame—come with me where I go to-morrow. There will be room for two."

Oswald, swaying with weakness, but maddened by the sight of an overthrow which carried with it the stifled affections and the admiration of his whole life, gave a bound forward, opened his arms ,and—fell.

Orlando stopped short. Gazing down on his prostrate brother, he stood for a moment with a gleam of something like human tenderness showing through the flare of dying passions and perishing hopes; then he swung open the door and passed quietly out, and Mr. Challoner could hear the laughing remark with which he met and dismissed the half-dozen men and women who had been drawn to this end of the hall by what had sounded to them like a fracas between angry men.

XLI.

FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING

The clock in the hotel office struck three. Orlando Brotherson counted the strokes; then went on writing. His transom was partly open and he had just heard a step go by his door. This was nothing new. He had already heard it several times before that night. It was Mr. Challoner's step, and every time it passed, he had rustled his papers or scratched vigorously with his pen. "He is keeping watch for Oswald," was his thought. "They fear a sudden end to this. No one, not the son of my mother, knows me. Do I know myself?"

Four o'clock! The light was still burning the pile of letters he was writing increasing.

Five o'clock! A rattling shade betrays an open window. No other sound isturbs the quiet of the room. It is empty now ;but Mr. Challoner, long since satisfied that all was well, goes by no more. Silence has settled upon the hotel—that heavy silence which precedes the dawn.

There was silence in the streets also. The few who were abroad, crept quietly along. An electric storm was in the air and the surcharged clouds hung heavy and low, biding the moment of outbreak. A man who had left a place of many shadows for the more open road, paused and looked up at these clouds; then went calmly on.

Suddenly the shriek of an approaching train tears through the valley. Has it a call for this man? No. Yet he pauses in the midst of the street he is crossing and watches, as a child might watch, for the flash of its lights at the end of the darkened vista. It comes—filling the empty space at which he stares with moving life—engine, baggage car, and a long string of Pullmans. Then all is dark again and only the noise of its slackening wheels comes to him through the night. It has stopped at the station. A minute longer and it has started again, and the quickly lessening rumble of its departure is all that remains of the vision of man's activity and ceaseless expectancy. When it is quite gone and all is quiet, a sigh falls from the man's lips and he moves on, but this time, for some unexplainable reason, in the direction of the station. With lowered head he passes along, noting little till he arrives within sight of the depot where some freight is being handled, and a trunk or two wheeled down the platform. No sight could be more ordinary or unsuggestive, but it has its attraction for him, for he hastens as he goes by and follows the progress of that truck down the platform till it has reached the corner and disappeared. Then he sighs again and again moves on.

A cluster of houses, one of them open and lighted, was all which lay between him now and the country road. He was hurrying past, for his step had unconsciously quickened as he turned his back upon the station, when he was seized again by that mood of curiosity and stepped up to the door from which a light issued, and looked in. A common eating-room lay before him, with rudely spread tables and one very sleepy waiter taking orders from a new arrival who sat with his back to the door. Why did the lonely man on the sidewalk start as his eye fell on the latter's commonplace figure, a hungry man demanding breakfast in a cheap, country restaurant? His own physique was powerful, while that of the other looked slim and frail. But fear has its air, and the brooding of a suspect affects some temperaments in a totally unexpected manner. As the man inside turns slightly and looks up, the master figure on the sidewalk vanishes, and his step, if any one had been interested enough to listen, rings with a new note as it turns into the country road it has at last reached.

But no one heeded. The new arrival munches his roll and waits patiently for his coffee, while without, the clouds pile soundlessly in the sky, one of them taking the form of a huge hand with clutching fingers reaching down to the hollow void beneath.

XLI.

AT SIX.

Mr. Challoner had been honest in his statement regarding the departure of Sweetwater. He had not only paid and dismissed our young detective, but he had seen him take the train for New York. And Sweetwater had gone away in good faith, too, possibly with his convictions undisturbed, but acknowledging at last that he had reached the end of his resources. But the brain does not lose its hold upon its work as readily as the hand does. He was halfway to New York and had consciously bidden farewell to the whole subject, when he suddenly startled those about him by rising impetuously to his feet. He sat again immediately, but with a light in his small grey eye which Mr. Gryce would have understood and revelled in. The idea for which he had searched industriously for months had come at last, unbidden; thrown up from some remote recess of the mind which had seemingly closed upon the subject for ever.

"I have it. I have it," he murmured in ceaseless reiteration to himself. "I will go back to Mr. Challoner and let him decide if the idea is worth pursuing. Perhaps an experiment may be necessary. It was bitter cold that night; I wish it were icy weather now. But a chemist can help us out. Good God! if this should be the explanation of the mystery, alas for Orlando and alas for Oswald!"

But his sympathies did not deter him. He returned to Derby at once, and as soon as he dared, presented himself at the hotel and asked for Mr. Challoner.

He was amazed to find that gentleman already up and in a state of agitation that was very disquieting. But he brightened wonderfully at sight of his visitor, and drawing him inside the room, observed with trembling eagerness:

"I do not know why you have come back, but never was man more welcome. Mr. Brotherson has confessed——"

"Confessed!"

"Yes, he killed both women; my daughter and his neighbour, the washerwoman, with a——"

"Wait," broke in Sweetwater, eagerly, "let me tell you." And stooping, he whispered something in the other's ear.

Mr. Challoner stared at him amazed, then slowly nodded his head.

"How came you to think—" he began; but Sweetwater in his great anxiety interrupted him with a quick:

"Explanations will keep, Mr. Challoner. What of the man himself? Where is he? That's the important thing now."

"He was in his room till early this morning writing letters, but he is not there now. The door is unlocked and I went in. From appearances I fear the worst. That is why your presence relieves me so. Where do you think he is?"

"In his hangar in the woods. Where else would he go to—"

"I have thought of that. Shall we start out alone or take witnesses with us?"

"We will go alone. Does Oswald anticipate—"

"He is sure. But he lacks strength to move. He lies on my bed in there. Doris and her father are with him."

"We will not wait a minute. How the storm holds off. I hope it will hold off for another hour."

Mr. Challoner made no reply. He had spoken because he felt compelled to speak, but it had not been easy for him, nor could any trifles move him now.

The town was up by this time, and, though they chose the least frequented streets, they had to suffer from some encounters. It was a good half-hour before they found themselves in the forest and in sight of the hangar. One look that way, and Sweetwater turned to see what the effect was upon Mr. Challoner.

A murmur of dismay greeted him. The oval of that great lid stood up against the forest background.

"He has escaped," cried Mr. Challoner.

But Sweetwater, laying a finger on his lip, advanced and laid his ear against the door. Then he cast a quick look aloft. Nothing was to be seen there. The darkness of storm in the heavens but nothing more. Yes! now, a flash of vivid and destructive lightning!

The two men drew back and their glances crossed.

"Let us return to the highroad," whispered Sweetwater; "we can see nothing here."

Mr. Challoner, trembling very much, wheeled slowly about.

"Wait,"enjoined Sweetwater. "First let me take a look inside."

Running to the nearest tree, he quickly climbed it, worked himself along a protruding branch and looked down into the open hangar. It was now so dark that details escaped him, but one thing was certain. The airship was not there.

Descending, he drew Mr. Challoner hastily along. "He's gone," said he. "Let us reach the high ground as quickly as we can. I'm glad that Mr. Oswald Brotherson is not with us or —or Miss Doris."

But this expression of satisfaction died on his lips. At the point where the forest road debouches into the highway, he had already caught a glimpse of thei rtwo figures. They were waiting for news, and the brother spoke up the instant he saw Sweetwater:

"Where is he? You've not found him or you wouldn't be coming alone. He cannot have gone up. He cannot manage it without an assistant. We must seek him somewhere else; in the forest or in our house at home. Ah!" The lightning had forked again.

"He's not in the forest and he's not in your home," returned Sweetwater. "He's aloft; the airship is not in the shed. And he can go up alone now." Then more slowly: "But he cannot come down."

They strained their eyes in a maddening search of the heavens. But the darkness had so increased that htey could be sure of nothing.

Doris sank upon her knees.

Suddenly the lightning flashed again, this time so vividly and so near that the whole heaven burst into fiery illumination above them and the thunder, crashing almost simultaneously , seemed for o moment to rock the world and bow the heavens towards them. Then a silence; then Sweetwater's whisper in Mr. Challoner's ear:

"Take them away! I saw him; he was falling like a shot."

Mr. Challoner threw out his arms, then steadied himself. Oswald was reeling; Oswald had seen too. But Doris was there. When the lightning flashed again, she was standing and Oswald was weeping on her bosom.

DOCTORS GAVE ME UP

But "Fruit-a-tives" Saved Me.

MOORFIELD, Ont., March 25th, 1910.

"I suffered from severe indigestion and dyspepsia for nearly two years. I could not take food without fearful distress. I could not do any work and became so run down and weak that I could hardly walk. I was attended by two experienced doctors and they both pronounced my case incurable, that they could do nothing more for me as they thought my disease was HEART FAILURE AND INCURABLE. The doctors gave me up and I looked forward for death in a short time.

At this time my son asked me to try "FRUIT-A-TIVES", and from the outset of taking these wonderful tablets I was better, and gradually this medicine completely cured me. I took a large number of boxes, perhaps a dozen, and now I am entirely cured and I have gained over thirty pounds in weight."

HENRY SPEERS, J.P.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. box—6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c.—or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

INDIGNANT

Editor:—"Well, sir?"

SHE KNEW BEST

"When does the next train for Toronto leave here?" inquired the fierce woman at the railway station.

"You'll have to wait five hours, madam."

"I don't think so."

"I do think so! Perhaps you know better than I do, madam?"

"Yes, my man, and perhaps you know better than I do whether I am going to travel by that train myself, or whether I am merely making the inquiry on behalf of a cousin of mine who has been spending the week-end with me, and who is at this moment asking her things, so that she could not inquire herself, but sent me to do it for her in order to save her the trouble. Perhaps you think it's your business to stand there and instruct people about things they know as well as you do. And maybe you'll give a civil answer next time a respectable widow asks you a question, instead of trying to show off what you know!"

"Yes, madam."

SURE THING

"It is said that impetuous people have black eyes."

"Yes, and if they don't have them they are apt to get them."

THREE MEALS A DAY

A census-taker while on her rounds called at a house occupied by an Irish family. One of the questions she asked was:—

"How many males have you in this family?"

The answer came without hesitation:—

"Three a day, mum!"

HER LITTLE MISTAKE

She had attended the local ambulance classes, and obtained the certificates, and now she was only waiting for an accident to occur. Ah, what was that? A young man knocked down by a van! Her chance had come!

Stepping forward she pushed her way through the crowd, and bent over the fallen youth.

"Stand back!" she commanded fiercely. "I know what to do. He has broken his leg."

Tearing off her waistbelt, and breaking the stick of an onlooker in two, she rapidly manufactured some splints, and five minutes later the leg was bandaged.

When the doctor arrived he confirmed her statement.

"His leg is broken," he said. "Who bandaged the limb so creditably?"

"I did," said the girl, blushing, whilst the crowd broke into enthusiastic cheers.

"Bravo! You have done it most beautifully," said the doctor. "You have made one little mistake though —you have bandaged the wrong leg!"

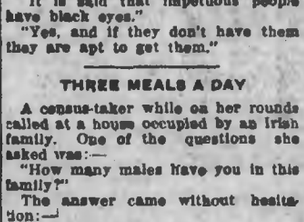
Chamberlain's



Cough Remedy

The Children's Favorite
—FOR—
Coughs, Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough.

This remedy is famous for its cures over a large part of the civilized world. It can always be depended upon. It contains no opium or other harmful drug and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. Price 25 cts; Large Size, 50 cts.

An Object of Pity

That part of our nature which we call the emotional is much more highly developed in women than in men. They are more sensitive, more tender, more sympathetic, more pronounced in their likes and dislikes, more susceptible to the extremes of pleasure and pain; and these refined mental qualities, no less than beauty of form and feature, make up the atmosphere of attractiveness and charm which always surrounds true womanliness.

The continued existence of these winning, engaging womanly characteristics depends to a very large extent on the regularity of the womanly functions and the condition of the womanly organs; and when these functions and organs become disordered or diseased the same mental qualities which are the glory of a well woman become the source of suffering and torture almost indescribable. Her cheerfulness is changed to a feeling of despondency, almost of despair, and she is haunted with forebodings of worse evils to come. Instead of being entertaining and companionable, she becomes moody and irritable, being unable to keep her mind from dwelling on her troubles. She becomes morbidly sensitive, imagining that she is being slighted or forsaken by her relatives and friends and she has a most humiliating sense of her miserable condition and of her loss of her womanly attributes. If she is religiously inclined she is very liable to be oppressed with doubts and fears in regard to her spiritual condition, or to think that she is eternally lost. In addition to this, she has also to endure the most distressing aches and pains.

What makes the case still more pitiable, especially with married women, is the fact that few men understand or appreciate the extent of their suffering, or the seriousness of the troubles causing it. Many doctors even speak of these disorders as subjects for ridicule, and the poor sufferer often gets a reputation for being a crank or a scold when she more nearly approaches being a martyr.

As these disorders are due to a disordered condition of the womanly organs, it is evident that to effect a cure these organs must be restored to normal condition; or, in other words, the circulation, which has become congested and stagnant in these parts, must be improved so that the waste matter will be expelled, and the nourishment so badly needed be brought to these suffering organs. It is the waste matter, or broken down tissue, which is held in the stagnant blood vessels in these parts, that causes most of the suffering by oppressing the nerves located in these parts.

The remedy known as ORANGE LILY will positively relieve this congestion and restore normal circulation in the disordered organs. It is an applied or local treatment, and acts wholly on these parts. It is absorbed into the blood vessels in these organs, and as it has powerful antiseptic properties, it immediately acts on the waste matter held there, and causes it to be discharged. As this dead matter is discharged the nerves are relieved, the pains and mental troubles become less, and the nerves and blood vessels become stronger. ORANGE LILY thus proves its merit by actual, visible results. It acts as certainly and as positively on all female troubles as anti-toxin does on diphtheria.

Winnipeg, April 25th, 1910.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am very grateful to ORANGE LILY for the change it has made in my life. When I commenced its use eight months ago I felt I would be surely insane before the year was ended. The pain I suffered across my back and groins for death, and besides I would have such fits of depression and nervous twitching that I would have to scream. I had doctored with three different doctors for over two years, and had also used both the Pierce and Pinkham medicines, but none of them seemed to reach my case. I felt some improvement after the first month's use of ORANGE LILY and have kept gaining ever since. I do not feel that I am entirely cured yet, but I am so much better than I was that I am sure I will soon be entirely well. I sleep well, and feel cheerful and happy, except that I am occasionally somewhat depressed, but these spells are getting fewer and milder. I have also noticeably improved in appearance. Enclosed find $3 for which please send me two boxes of ORANGE LILY and one of Cerate Massage. I might add that the matter which used to be freely discharged, and which looked like a chicken's gizzard, is becoming very scant, and I imagine that the circulation is pretty well restored. Am I not right in this? Your sincere friend, MRS. L. E. A.

Free to all Sufferers

In order to enable every woman suffering from any form of female disorders to test the merits of ORANGE LILY, I will send to everyone who will send me her address, or the address of any suffering friend enough of the remedy for ten days' treatment, absolutely free. As this is worth 25c. it is only because I know that it must give relief that I make this free trial offer. Further, if any woman wishes expert medical advice, and will write me a full description of her case, I will submit same to the staff of the Cooniey Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and they will write her direct without expense to her. INCLOSE THREE 2-CENT STAMPS and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, WINDSOR, ONT.

Where it is always Easter.

By Peter Middleton.

(Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.)

When with the reapers I could hear
(Such power hath a believing ear)
The whisper of the falling grain,
"In season due we'll rise again."

In winter, when the snow was deep
And life was in its frozen sleep,
I heard a murmur, "Soon the spring
To us will resurrection bring."

In springtime, when the world awoke,
From all the fields a voice there spoke,
And all things sang with one accord,
"He rise as rose our buried Lord."

And all the surging summer through
As grew the flowers my spirit grew.
With all that grows I claim my part—
'Tis always Easter in my heart.

Incorrigible Rose's Easter

By William D. Hamby

(Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.)

We did not know what to do with Rose—had not known for a long time. She was incorrigible—an incorrigible giver. She would give away anything, from her slippers to the plume on her hat.

She did that very thing once—took an eighteen inch ostrich plume from her hat and gave it to a girl book agent. And when chided by my sister she merely opened wide her lovely gray eyes and exclaimed:

"Why, Mary Ennis, that girl had never had an ostrich plume in her life, and she looked so tired and discouraged. I just could not buy her book—it was about the horrors of something or other. But you ought to have seen the light in her face when I gave her that beautiful plume."

Perhaps it would have been good to see the light in the girl's face, but the light in Rose's was enough to disarm Sister Mary. It always ended that way. Dozens of Rose's friends had undertaken to scold her roundly for her foolish generosity, but always when she had explained one felt that only a brute could have done differently.

Rose had just begun to have some success with her drawings and was earning a little money.

"It will be such a help to her," said a friend. "She loves pretty things so and has very few of them, poor child!"

Mary sniffed, out of patience: "Help? What do you suppose she did with the $30 she got last month for those sketches? Buy her some gloves and neck ribbons and a new waist? Not a bit of it. She sent $5 to some girl she used to know in school who is in Colorado for her health and $5 to some crippled second cousin in the east, gave $5 to the heathen in India and spent the rest on the sick negro that does her chores and on her washerwoman's kids."

The worst of it is Rose's wardrobe. Her soul revels in beauty. She loves pretty things with the ardor of a child. But the prettier a thing is the surer the idea will pop into her head, "What a delightful present to somebody!" It requires the eternal vigilance of Mary and five or six of her intimate friends to keep Rose presentable.

All her friends tried, singly and collectively, to make Rose over "for her own good," and all, singly and collectively, failed utterly. We gave up then and just enjoyed her as she was, for she certainly was a delight. After that we spent our time trying to devise gifts of a sort and give them at a time when they would stick.

"I HAVE IT TO A GIRL BOOK AGENT.

Two years before we learned it was utter folly to give Rose things at Christmas, provided one wanted her to keep them. The girls made up that year a magnificent Christmas box full of all manner of dainty and beautiful things for her attractive person and homy room.

But, alas, Christmas afternoon Rose was found in the highest state of delight. It was a beautiful world, she had the dearest friends in it, and this was the best Christmas in nineteen hundred years. We were suspicious at once, and when we had heard the story of the girl who had lost her place in the store, of the woman with a sick husband, of the crippled girl next door, of the old lady with the bronchitis, of the preacher's pretty little homesick wife, of the washerwoman's five children, we had heard the complete story of all our Christmas presents, except a little book of poems which I had sent.

"I kept that," said Rose laughingly, "to remember your presents by."

About the 1st of April Mary had an idea.

"Harvey Ennis," she said, "I tell you what we girls are going to do. You can help anonymously if you want to. The 24th is Rose's birthday. There does not happen to be a single holiday near it, and surely not more than one or two of her friends and proteges have a birthday at the same time. So we are going to make her up just a wonderful birthday box, and maybe she will get a little good of it."

"I HAVE THAT," SAID ROSE.

It was magical the way the friends responded to Mary's suggestion, and there were lots of friends, for everybody loved Rose and liked to give her things. That box was a beauty. It looked to me as if it contained everything a girl could use or want, and some more, and everything was of the finest and daintiest.

The box went Thursday evening. Friday was her birthday. Saturday afternoon as sister and I had started downtown Mary said:

"Look at Norah Conway. I never saw her go like that before. What do you suppose is the matter with her?"

Norah is a slow, awkward girl of sixteen. She was half running and tumbling along the street in great excitement until a hostile vanity her sympathy has withdrew she tossed her head and pushed through a door in the paper wrapper of something inside.

"I have it," said Mary, brightening. "She has something new for Easter now."

"Harvey Ennis!" She stopped and clutched my arm. "Didn't she come down that street?" pointing to the one Rose lived in.

I nodded and bit my lip.

"She's giving them away," Mary said, with wistful compunction. "Come on; I am going to see." And she turned me about and started toward Rose's home.

On the way we met three other families and visited happy hours.

"Rose Merrifield," began Mary, more nearly angry with her friend than I ever had seen her.

"Now—now, honey?" Rose kissed her and patted her on the back [illegible] sigh of [illegible] "Don't say anything now, just [illegible] now, and Mary, [illegible] I've had the loveliest time giving [illegible] or presents!" And a faraway look came into her eyes.

"Presents?" echoed Mary. "Why, people don't give presents on Monday!"

"That is just it," said Rose. "Nobody was expecting [illegible] and I had the most glorious time."

And she had—we knew she had, as she stood in happy thought looking out of the window at the newly blossoming earth, [illegible] by the [illegible] and kissed by the breeze. There was a light in her face that made us forget clothes and presents and anger and think only of Easter.

As we went away neither of us said anything for some time. At the corner we met old Buck Tickner and his cane that forever went peck-peck-pecking viciously along the walk. For many years old Buck had been saving up for a rainy day—his rainy day. He had let his wife die because he was too stingy to have a doctor, and all his children had fled before they were scarcely grown. His grasping mouth, his withered, wrinkled face, his narrow suspicious eyes, always made me shudder.

"Isn't he horrid?" Mary spoke first when we were past.

And then in a moment as her eyes wandered to the blossoming orchard at the edge of town she sighed resignedly:

"I don't know what we will ever do with her, but isn't she a dear? And if one must go to the extreme I guess it is best to take the highest one."

"I am going to, if I can," I said, and Mary looked at me wonderingly.

Next morning was Easter indeed. The world was full of sunshine and early flowers and songs of birds and soft winds.

Rose came to the door herself, for the church bells were just ringing. Never had she looked more beautiful, and that is the end of praise. I stepped into the hall and closed the door behind me. She looked up at me a little surprised, a little agitated.

"Rose"—her lids drooped and hid her soft gray eyes, and she breathed a little quickly—"you have made everybody happy by your gifts, everybody from Bombay to Maine, everybody but me. Won't you make me a present, an Easter gift?"

"What?" she said softly, and her voice fluttered.

"The lady with the lily soul." And I held out my arms waitingly.

When we went out into the sunlight a little while later I said most sincerely and gratefully:

"Rose, you are such a wonderful giver!"

"ROSE, YOU ARE SUCH A WONDERFUL GIVER!"

FLOWERS OF EASTER FACT.

It seems almost certain that the first Easter bonnet ever worn in the States flaunted its innocent splendors in the rough hewn pews of the little edifice at Jamestown, Va., in the year 1610, where only an ivy grown brick tower now marks the spot where America's first Easter service was held in a Protestant Episcopal church.

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs, doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, and if does more, it heals disease tissue.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

Catarrhozone

Yes, Sir. It is taken in air.

"Little drops of healing" carried by air to weak places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Three sizes: 25c, 50c, and $1.00, at druggists, or by mail postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH

A Harmless Beauty, Made From Garden Sage, Restores Colour to Gray Hair

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which, unfortunately, are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hair, however handsome it may be, makes a person look old. We all know the advantage of being young. Aside from the good impression a youthful appearance makes on others, simply knowing that you are "looking fit" gives one courage to undertake and accomplish things. So why suffer the handicap of looking old on account of gray hairs, when a simple remedy will give your hair youthful colour and beauty in a few days' time?

Most people know that common garden sage mixed with sulphur restores and scalp tonic of well. Our grandmothers used a "Sage Tea" for keeping their hair dark, soft and luxuriant. In Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy we have an ideal preparation of sage, combined with sulphur and other valuable remedies for dandruff, itching scalp and thin, weak hair that is split at the ends or constantly coming out. A few applications of this valuable remedy will bring back the colour, and in a short time it will remove every trace of dandruff and greatly improve the growth and appearance of the hair.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist to-day, and notice the difference in your hair after a few days' treatment. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented. Special agent, the Warne Drug Co.

TEN PEOPLE, ONE HORSE

Horse Animals Compare in England in Number With Mere Man

The War Office has just concluded the census of horses, and one fact is made clear—that if all the people in England wanted to go for a drive at once, there would not be horses to go round.

Including all kinds of horses of four years old and over—farm horses, hunters, polo ponies, every animal that can carry harness or saddle—there are only three millions in England and Wales, or less than one to every ten persons. In this respect Australia, inside the British Empire, there being forty-five horses to every hundred people.

But even this record does not match that of the Argentine Republic. The Argentine is the only country in the world where there are as many horses as people. At the other end of the scale comes Switzerland, with only three horses to every hundred inhabitants.

The War Office has fairly exact records of all the livestock in every civilised country in the world, and, as might be expected, that the fewer the people the larger the head of sheep and cattle.

Australia and the Argentine lead the world, not only in horses, but in cattle and sheep also. Australia has grass enough to give each man, woman and child in the island continent three apiece; while the Argentine can do even better. There are five cattle to each inhabitant in the big South American republic.

Of European countries, Denmark is by far the greatest cattle owner. There are eighty-five to each hundred inhabitants. No wonder Danish butter is known all over Europe. In the United Kingdom we have about twelve million cattle, of which more than four millions pasture in Ireland.

The world's stock of mutton is reckoned to be about 450 millions. Of these the United Kingdom owns thirty-three millions, while Australia possesses the colossal total of ninety-five millions of sheep. Australia and the Argentine between them pasture one-third of the sheep in the world.

There ought not to be a bacon famine when one learns that there are 100 million pigs in the world, of which we own some four millions. But the United States is the land for pigs. She possesses over forty millions, and is said to waste nothing of the porker but its squeal.

There has been a deal of talk lately about the lack of poultry in England, and the gigantic number of eggs imported. It may come as a surprise to know that poultry numbers thirty-seven millions, or roughly one hen to the acre. The Board of Agriculture says that the country ought to keep at least three times that number. At present the record in poultry production is held by the United States, with eighty-five millions of cocks and hens, and a yearly output of 6,000 millions.

It may be interesting to learn that the biggest eggs come from Spain, where they run seven to the pound. Britain's average eight to the pound, while German eggs are the smallest running as low as ten to the pound.

Lost Control Of His Temper

Once there was a man whose liver was not working right. When dressing in the morning he had trouble with his collar. Then he lost the collar button. Then he said something.

By the time he got to breakfast he was so irritated that he had no appetite and quarrelled with his wife. He went to the office with a headache and when he had some important business to transact he bungled it.

When you find yourself easily irritated and lose control of yourself and your temper, look to the condition of the liver, and take one of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at bedtime.

The dark-brown taste will not bother you in the mornings, the tongue will clear up, digestion will improve and you will not have the tired, worn-out feelings which accompany a sluggish condition of the liver.

FARMING LEADS ALL

In Canada Occupy the People Are Agriculturists

Elbert Hubbard, the well-known writer, addressing the Hamilton Board Trade, said: "The most important business to-day is farming. It produces the food. Fifty years ago half of the United States were farmers. To-day only about one-half are farmers and are going back. New York city has 4,000,000 people and is within 48 hours of starvation every day. The problem is to feed the people. In Canada half of the people are farmers. That is the reason Canada is a healthy country, and I congratulate you. The second most important factor is the railroads. Food keys at an impossible distance from the consumer is useless. The United States owns one railroad that goes from tidewater to tidewater. It is the Panama railroad, which is 46 miles long, and if one cannot wait for a train he can walk across. Canada owns two railroads from the Atlantic to the Pacific and will shortly have a third one. Sir William VanHorne who was greatly responsible for the building of the C.P.R., was born and lived near where I was born, and I can remember when I knew him as a telegraph editor at Joliet. On the other hand the greatest railroad man in the United States is a Canadian, James J. Hill, and was born a short distance from Hamilton." He said the next in order of importance was the manufacturer, who prepared the raw material; the distribution, to whom the treasure was brought and passed out; the advertising, because if a man had nothing to advertise he was a dead one. Every man was a walking advertisement of himself.

"I'm not preparing to die but to live. If I were told that I was to die next week I would stick to my desk and show some one else what they had to do when I was gone, and so would you. Every one is preparing to live and by doing this is ready to die. No one would run from death. This is the philosophy of a business man. We are all under sentence of death with an indefinite parole. Bad men are good men who have misdirected their energies. If one looks at the world he will find that the angels are not all white, nor the devils black, but that we are all a sixtish grey color.

According to the final provisional Census returns, the population of India is now 315 millions, an increase of 30½ millions since 1901.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION GOES

Makes Your Disordered Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach, if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and any thing you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dissiness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach). Biliousness, Heartburn, Water Brash, pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach cannot. A single dose will digest all the food you eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist, and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong Stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Should you at this moment be suffering from Indigestion or any stomach disorder, you can surely get relief within five minutes.

AWAY WITH BEARDS

Actresses Think That All Men Should Clean Shaven

The women of Paris are eagerly discussing whether the beard, as beloved by Frenchmen or the smooth-shaven face is the more becoming to a man, and to help along the discussion "Le Matin" has asked all the most famous actresses and beauties what they think of the question. Their opinions seem to be strangely in favor of the beardless fashion.

Mlle. Yvonne de Bray's answer is short and to the point. She writes: "There is not the slightest doubt possible; neither beard nor moustaches. Every man ought to be smooth shaven."

Mlle. Polaire being of the same opinion writes: "My personal opinion is that beards or moustaches are permissable only in men who have an ugly mouth or poor teeth to hide."

Mlle. Marcelle Yrven says: "What is more becoming to a man, a beard or a smooth face? This is no matter of fashion but simply a matter of taste. The majority of men are just as vain as we are and know very well which is most becoming to them. I believe however, that a smooth shaven man has a far better chance of being popular with the fair sex."

Mlle. Marnac writes: "A beard, no never. A moustache I do not object to when it is well kept and perfumed. Every woman will understand me."

Mme. Marthe Regnier happened to be interviewed by a reporter wearing a moustache and, when asked, replied politely, "Do not change anything you could not possibly look more charming than you do."

NEW STRENGTH IN THE SPRING

Nature Needs Aid in Making New Health-Giving Blood

In the spring the system needs a tonic. To be healthy you must have new blood just as the trees must have new sap to renew their vitality. [illegible] and without this new blood you will feel weak and languid. You may have twinges of rheumatism or the sharp, stabbing pains of neuralgia. Often there are disfiguring pimples or eruptions on the skin. In other cases there is merely a feeling of tiredness and a variable appetite. Any of these are signs that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has lessened your vitality. What you need in spring is a tonic medicine to put you right, and in all the world of medicine there is not tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood—your greatest need in spring. This new blood drives out the seeds of disease and makes easily tired men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mrs. Murray Marshall, Zephyr, Ont., says: "I do not believe I would ever have been well and strong again but for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was so weak and nervous that I could not be left in the house alone. I would take weak spells with my heart and think I was going to die. I tried doctors and electric belts, but they did me no good. Then a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To my surprise I soon noticed my appetite improving, and from that on I improved rapidly until I was enjoying the best of health, and I have not been troubled with weakness or nervousness since."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or can be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

UNDISCOVERED PARTS OF EARTH'S SURFACE

Alexander wept for more worlds to conquer, and the notion has got abroad that modern explorers may imitate his example since the South Pole has been discovered. The fact is that there is perhaps another hundred years' work for the explorers before we shall be able to make trustworthy maps of the earth's surface. In Canada there are great regions to which man has never penetrated. Considerable portions of North-western Mexico are unexplored. There is still a black area on the Dark Continent. A great stretch of the interior of South America has never been visited, and in the Russian Empire, [illegible] in Australia there is work for the explorer for two or three generations. It may be that it will be harder to explore some parts of Canada than it was to reach either of the poles. Indeed, it is doubtful if any small party of men could penetrate the deserts that guard the Caribou Mountains from the surveyor. This range of mountains is not to be subdued by a sudden dash. It will yield only to long siege by the prosaic road-builder.

Not very long ago Prof. J. Norman Collie stood on a peak of the Rockies and saw far away to the west a great group of mountains he had never seen before. Other white men had seen them, however, and anyone who travels to Prince Rupert will be able to see them from the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Prof. Collie declares that for beauty these mountains surpass the Selkirks, and that they probably offer a field for the mountaineer equal to the Alps.

There are other portions of British Columbia almost as inaccessible as the Caribou Mountains, and there is room enough and glory enough for a hundred explorers in this province alone.

The Russians are great explorers, but there remains a vast forest area that stretches across Siberia south of the tundra belt along the frozen ocean that has not been penetrated. This work will be gradually accomplished by the Russian Government, and it is probable that the whole region will be preserved as a forest reserve. Asia offers few more opportunities for the explorer except as regards certain portions of Thibet, the hinterlands of Burmah, Siam, and Cambodia, and Western China, Chinese Turkestan and Mongolia. In nearly all these regions there are exploring parties at work, and Asia will probably be cleared of geographical mysteries before Africa. In certain portions of Australia there is work to be done. Part of the interior desert is yet unknown, and in the north there is a tropical region that remains to be penetrated before the continent can be mapped. Australia, like Canada, is not destined to be a field for alien adventurers, and her future exploration will be a matter of Government policy rather than individual enterprise. Despite Shackleton's explorations and the more recent exploits of Amundsen and Scott, the Antarctic Continent still remains by far the greatest unexplored territory in the world. The continent has been entirely circumnavigated, but it is to be borne in mind that Antarctica is as large as Europe and Australia together.

WAYS OF MAKING BUTTER

The Tartar's method of cooking his meat by using it as a saddle while galloping on horseback is matched by the Arabian method of making butter. The Arab puts his milk into a skin which he hangs over his camel, and greases on his journey. The swinging gait of the camel does the rest, and turns the skin into an excellent churn. On the South American pampas the skin bottle is fastened by a long rope to a saddle, and trailed along the ground behind a galloping [illegible] until the butter appears.

MORMONS IN ALBERTA

Hon. A. T. Reid Thinks They Are a Menace to Canada

"A deadly menace to this country is allowed to carry out their tenets," says Rev. A. T. Reid's representation of the Mormon situation in Southern Alberta, in an address on western mission work in Knox Presbyterian Church. Their conception of a dual God—male and female—which he could not explain to a mixed audience, Mr. Reid considered one of the most dangerous doctrines extant. Thanks to the work of the Mounted Police he did not think that the colony, which now numbers 20,000, practised polygamy, but quoted one Mormon with whom he was acquainted who had said: "We must certainly be loyal to polygamy, but not to practise it against the law. We must work and get men into Parliament to hold the balance of power, and so legislate our beliefs into the laws of the land." Mr. Reid then sketched the devious paths by which the Mormons were strengthening their position in Alberta. A very large percentage of their girls are being trained as teachers, who are bound to spread the tenets of their creed into the minds of their juvenile non-Mormon charges, while in certain south Alberta districts every farm which falls in the market is snapped up by Mormons, usually at a price slightly in excess of the market value. The present year, he said, one hundred thousand acres of Alberta land had been bought by the Mormon Church. Turning to the situation in northern Alberta Mr. Reid said that Canada had made one of her greatest initial blunders in allowing the establishment of vast colonies of Russians, Finns, and Galicians, peoples who preserve their ancient customs and have brought with them to Canada the crucial problems which have vexed European Governments for centuries. If the west were not nationalised, and these colonies make that difficult, some day in the near future it would go hard for Canada.

$250,000 OUT OF WATERCRESS

Mrs. James of Covent Garden, London, England, started her business career with two baskets of watercress and now has practically a monopoly of the trade. She has a town house and a country house, keeps a motor-launch on the river, and last year came to New York and returned on the Lusitania. Mrs. James supplies watercress for nearly every large hotel and restaurant in London, and has amassed a fortune of $400,000.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1810 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Bigamist Went off to Canada

At Edinburgh, Alexander Tylor Sturgeon, thirty-eight, was sent to gaol for fifteen months for bigamy. The accused had served thirteen years in the Glasgow police. Some months ago he resigned, stating that he had obtained a good situation in Canada. He was a married man with a wife and five children. He led his wife to understand that as soon as he made arrangements she would follow him to Canada. Meantime he had carried on correspondence with a respectable young woman, twenty-two years of age, who was in a good situation in Glasgow. He went through a form of marriage with this girl and left for Canada with her. This young woman has now been provided for in Canada.

HOMELESS IN LONDON

By a census recently taken it was found that 1,463 men, 321 women, and two children were homeless in one night in the streets of London.

FINGERS TO SPARE

Woman on Each Hand, and Whole Family Affected

A woman called at the hospital in Gilbert Plain, bringing her son, who has thirteen fingers and twelve toes on each. The most curious part of the case is that all her sons possess similar hands. One has twenty-one fingers, another has twenty-three and the other five children twenty-four fingers each. All are living and enjoying good health. Many Gentiles are studying them now.

At Manitou, a town nearby, a case has occurred which is probably unique of its kind. A child has been born, while his father, grandfather, great-grandfather and great-great-grandfather are all living. His name is Urriticoche, and the family are Basque farm laborers. The great-grandfather and great-great-grandfather have acted as god-father to the latest arrival. The united family constitutes nearly a whole village.

JEWS IN GERMANY

Complaint is Made That They are Being Gradually Wiped Out

At a meeting of Zionists in Berlin complaints were made of the gradual extinction of Jews in Germany. According to one speaker 80 per cent. of German Jews a hundred years ago lived in the villages while now not more than 10 per cent. are to be found in the country, and the tendency is for those to be absorbed by the towns. There they turn exclusively to trade or the learned professions, occupations which usually postpone marriage until the age of thirty-five. Another cause of dimunition is the two-child family when it is well known that a race which does not produce families of three or four children must die out. A third and very serious cause of dimunition is the tendency to mixed mariages and the adoption of Christianity. In Hamburg 61 per cent. of Jewish mariages are mixed and the bulk of the children born of these unions are not educated in the Jewish faith. Another speaker maintained that the tolerant and liberal spirit of the age had really injured Jewish unity. "Our emancipators," he said, "were not our friends; they not only led us out of the Ghetto, but out of Jewry altogether." The sole remedy, the speaker said, was Zionism, and whereby a national Jewish reservoir would be built up in Palestine to keep the stream of pure Hebrew nationality flowing through the world.

BABY'S LITTLE ILLS

Baby's little ills are many and need close attention. Worms are among the most common of these ailments — there being scarcely a child who is not afflicted by them at some time or other. These, though, can be readily banished by the frequent use of Baby's Own Tablets—the only remedy sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiate or other harmful drug. Concerning them Mrs. Joseph Daigle, Ste. Perpetue, Que., writes: — "My baby was troubled with worms; he was nervous and had no appetite. I gave him Baby's Own Tablets and he was soon well again." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A MOUNTAIN PARK

"Jasper Park," the name of five thousand acres of primeval forest in Alberta is described by J. W. McLaffa, chief forest ranger as a place containing some very fine canyons, lakes, and water-falls intermingled in such a way that its beauty is beyond the power of pen to describe, its future possibilities seem limitless. The wild animals include mountain sheep, goats, deer, bear, beaver, otter, marten, and fox. Fish, consisting of mountain and rainbow trout, jackfish, and whitefish, were reported plentiful in the lakes and creeks.

SOLDIERS CHASE MONKEY

Regimental Pet Was Too Active For Her Red-coated Pursuers

Sally, a monkey belonging to the Grenadier Guards, quartered at Victoria Barracks, Windsor, England, escaped one afternoon to the roofs of the transport buildings and eluded capture for an hour. The first indication that Sally had broken loose was when she was seen by a grenadier climbing up the spouting to the roof. The alarm was raised and a hot chase began, but the fugitive's agility was far superior to that of her pursuers and she soon perched herself on top of the roof. The problem was how to dislodge her. It was thought that Sally would be coaxed into leaving her lofty station, but nuts and whistling were of no avail, and she mounted the chimney stack, from which she took a general survey of gabled roof. She followed this up by a canter from end to end of the building, first appearing at one end of the roof and then at the other. Then she rested awhile on the eaves and looked down with a twinkle in her eye at her pursuers.

Meanwhile an amused crowd gathered in the street. Finding that coaxing was useless, more severe methods were resorted to, and stone or two missiles were thrown at the escaped monkey. But Sally was too agile to be hit, and whenever a shot was directed towards her she darted like lightning behind one of the chimney-stacks. Then a Grenadier climbed the roof and tried to chase the fugitive, but he had not even a fighting chance, and when he did manage by wriggling along to get within a short distance of the monkey, Sally gracefully glided to the other end. Sally was eventually overcome by a banana which was held out to her. At first she was suspicious, but the fruit was too tempting, and after looking at it with roaming eyes she unceremoniously descended the spouting and darted for the fruit, which meant her capture and also the end of the chase.

"He Is Risen"

THE FOUR VERSIONS OF THE RESURRECTION

CHRISTIAN theologians hold it to be strong proof of the resurrection of Christ that the four evangelists' accounts of that transcendingly important event differ greatly in detail while agreeing exactly in the great central declaration, which is the foundation stone of the Christian religion.

Matthew tells us that at dawn on the first day of the week Mary Magdalene and "the other Mary," whom we know to be the mother of James and Salome, went to see the sepulcher.

"And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

"His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

"And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

"And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

"He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

"And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

"And as they went to tell his disciples, behold Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him.

"Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me."

Matthew goes on to say that the eleven disciples went to Galilee as bidden and saw and worshiped Jesus there, though some doubted. There and then he gave them their mission to go forth and teach and baptise all nations.

Not one of the other three evangelists mentions the earthquake, but all tell of the coming of Mary Magdalene to the sepulcher and of its being her discovery that the body was not there. But Mark says that she was accompanied by Mary, the mother of James and Salome. Luke says there were with her this other Mary and Joanna and the other women who had come with him from Galilee, while John describes her as being alone.

Mark's version is that the women found the stone rolled away, entered the sepulcher and saw a white robed young man sitting within, who bade them tell the disciples that Jesus was risen and gone to Galilee. Luke's version is that while the women stood puzzled in the empty tomb two men in shining garments then appeared to them and informed them of the resurrection. Nothing is said of an instruction to go to Galilee. But, according to John, Mary, seeing the stone rolled away, ran back to Peter and "the other disciples whom Jesus loved" and told them that the body had been taken out of the sepulcher. Then these two disciples ran to the tomb, "the other disciple," who ran the faster, arriving first, but he did not go in until Peter arrived and went in first and verified the absence of the body. Here John mentions that Peter and the other disciple found the cloths in which the body had been wrapped, but John says, "As yet they knew not the Scripture, that he must rise again from the dead." After they had gone home Mary remained, according to John, weeping at the mouth of the sepulcher. Looking into it after a time, she saw two angels in white within, who spoke to her, asking why she wept. And she answered that "they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him." Just then, turning around, she saw Jesus standing there, but she did not know him. John declares that she even supposed he might be the gardener, who might have removed the body. She asked him for it. But he revealed himself to her, prophesied his immediate ascension and bade her announce it to the disciples.

We have seen that Matthew has the Saviour first appearing after the resurrection to Mary Magdalene. Mark's gospel relates the same. Luke declares that he first appeared to two of the disciples who were on the road to Emmaus, but they did not know him. Mark tells of this appearance also and says he afterward appeared to the eleven as they sat at meat, presumably in Jerusalem. Luke tells of this, stating that it was in Jerusalem and that it happened the same day after the two had returned from Emmaus; also that Christ ate with the disciples "a piece of a broiled fish, and of a honeycomb."

But at that Mark as well as Matthew drops the narration, while Luke goes on to tell of his leading the disciples out to Bethany and thence in their presence ascending into heaven, while the gospel of John says that after eight days he visited the eleven again, on which occasion he allowed Thomas, the doubter, to touch his wounds and put his hand into his side. And a third appearance to seven of the eleven is related by John, this by the Lake of Tiberias, where they were fishing. Here is told of the miraculous draft of fishes, and here it was, according to John, that Christ ate with his disciples after his resurrection, but John closes his gospel without a word of the ascension except as it may be contained in this:

"And there were also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself would not contain the books that should be written."

Waken, little [illegible]:

THOUGHT COLD WOULD TURN INTO CONSUMPTION

LEFT LUNG GOT VERY SORE, HEART DID NOT FEEL ANY TOO GOOD.

Mr. Robert McLarnon, Shawville, Que., writes:—"I am writing to tell you an experience I had with a bad cold and a bottle of your valuable medicine. I was up in the lumber camps teaming horses, and I caught a very bad cold. I thought it was going to turn into consumption, for my left lung got very sore and my heart did not feel any too good. I came home and tried some different remedies but they did me no good. A friend told me about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I tried it, and when I had taken two bottles my cold was gone. I think it is a great remedy, and will advise any one with a cold to use it. I can't praise it enough."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, which combined with Wild Cherry bark and other pectoral remedies, makes it one of the greatest known preparations for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

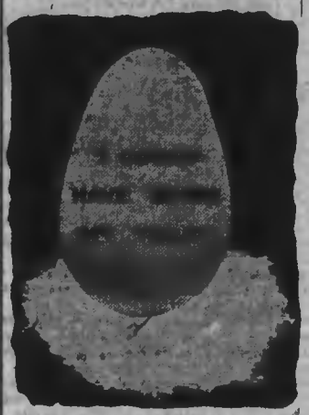
As the Chicken Sees It.

(Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.)

Alas, if I had not been hatched,
Had never burst my shell,
Had never wandered forth and scratched
For food my craw to swell,
I should escape the woeful fate
Invited by my present state.

I'm now a chicken fat and fine,
And since their Lenten fast
My owners will expect to dine—
A real feed at last—
And in a stew I'm sure to be
When I am carved for princesses.



But if I had remained in shell
I could have borne my yolk,
In white imprisonment to dwell
(This isn't any joke!)
O time, turn back, I plead, I beg,
Had let me be an Easter egg!

Easter Superstitions.

Draw the egg of violet hue,

Pink will bring you luck,
A lover full of pluck.

Gaily take the egg of green,
Good fortune soon will be seen.

Wealth and happiness with the egg of grey.
Keep it and hide subtly away.

The egg of blue
Means lovers true.

Do not touch the egg of red,
If you do you'll never wed.

A DISTINGUISHED NURSE

Italian Lady Who Has Served in Several Military Campaigns

Madame Feuillet the daughter-in-law of Octave Feuillet, the well-known novelist, was decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor as chief nurse and head of the Union of French Army Nurses, as well as for her heroic services in various colonial campaigns. "What have I done that seems so remarkable?" she exclaimed, when interviewed. "My duty was plain. If our soldiers expose their lives on the battlefield, the least we can do is to take care of them when they are wounded." Madame Feuillet has attended scores and hundreds of "petits soldats," young lads, as she calls them, during the last fifteen years. She created the order of nurses; she founded the Ladies' Ambulance Corps in Algeria in 1906, and established stations at Colomb-Bechar and Ain Sefra. On receiving the first news of the great earthquake of Sicily, she was on the spot at once. The queen of Italy personally thanked her for her labors and devotedness.

FINE AERIAL FLEET

The French Government Set Aside $6,400,000 for the Purpose

A great national movement is afoot for equipping the French Army with the finest aerial fleet in the world. The agitation has been strengthened by the action of the Government in setting aside $6,400,000 for the complete reorganization of the French Army Air Corps. The airship and the aeroplanes are to be the fourth and fifth arms respectively of the military service.

M. Millerand, the War Minister, who is taking every opportunity to encourage the revival of patriotism, is determined that France shall keep the advantage she already possesses in aircraft over other nations. At the end of the year the French Army will be able to mobilise 344 machines and 324 officer airmen, with a complete equipment of mechanics, sappers, and pupils.

M. Reymond, the Senator, who, in order to get a thorough grip of the subject, has become an expert airman and has visited his constituents by aeroplane, has now placed himself at the head of a national committee to supplement the efforts of the Government. At a meeting at the Sorbonne a collection made in the caps of the officers present brought in $750 in five minutes. M. Michelin immediately subscribed $20,000.

A group of municipal councillors of Paris propose to present six aeroplanes to the army, and a vote will doubtless be ratified at the next meeting of the council. A motion has been submitted to the council general of the Seine to open a departmental flying school. The town of Bar-le-Duc, the birth-place of M. Poincare, the Prime Minister, has promised the ground for a military aerodrome, which will form an important link in the chain of army flying grounds along the eastern frontier. The Oasai municipal council has voted $20,000 for turning the Le Bravelle flying ground into a military aerodrome. The municipality of Nancy has offered an aerodrome, to be called General Langlois, in memory of that distinguished officer, who died recently to the 20th Army Corps, and the Government in the Cabinet Council accepted the offer on the understanding that the choice of the apparatus is left to the military authorities. The National Fund received a pathetic suscription of $1 to-day from the eight pensioners who guard Napoleon's tomb.

THE INSTALMENT PLAN

A Reference to the Question in the British Commons

The practice of purchasing furniture on the instalment plan was defended in the House of Commons the other day by the Home Secretary.

Baron de Forest inquired whether the Government's attention had been drawn to the consequences of the system particularly among the poorer classes of the population, and whether he would consider the introduction of legislation making the sale of goods under that system illegal.

The Secretary replied:

"I do not think that it would be feasible to prohibit the sale of goods on the instalment system.

"It is often a most convenient arrangement for people who have not been able to save money, and I understand that advantage is taken of it by purchasers of well-known literary works.

"The system if harshly administered, may, no doubt, become oppressive to poor people, but few complaints have reached the police.

"Is the right honorable gentleman aware," asked Mr. Handel Booth, "that large colliery and iron companies use this system for the purchase of railway wagons?"

"I was not aware of it, but it is very interesting," replied the Secretary.

Read the Bible Through

A novel achievement has been accomplished in a church at Pecos, Texas. The Bible, from the first chapter of Genesis to the last of Revelation, was read aloud in eighteen hours. There were sixty readers for the task. The first began at six o'clock in the morning, and the last read the concluding words at midnight. Each reader gave up as his or her voice became husky. The congregation was small when the reading began, but at midnight the church was crowded.

For the first time in the history of Canadian amusements a performance or exhibition was given at an Ottawa theatre by Royal command, the occasion being the initial presentation of the celebrated Kinemacolor pictures of the Durbar, commanded by his Excellency the Governor-General, who attended in person, accompanied by the Duchess and the Royal suite.

BULL ATTACKS STUDENT

David Laird, a student at the Ontario Agricultural College, was badly torn and bruised in an encounter with a bull while taking part in a stock-judging class. A number of bulls were being used for judging, when one became nervous, and Laird was asked to take it out. He did so, but had just got outside when the bull went wild and tossed him a couple of times with its horns, afterwards rolling him. His plight was seen from the windows of the pavilion, and a number of students rushed to his aid.

Children Volunteers Plead Cause of Those Out Work

In connection with an appeal in Toronto, children, some only eight years of age, are out in the street for the sale, they plead, many ill, suffering, having little nourishment. Many of these children attend school, and the appeal, pathetic in its simplicity, has met with a generous response. In a few hours the children sold [illegible] papers, and [illegible] last $15, $15 and [illegible].

The Globe says: "One little fellow, a boy attending [illegible] pulled out a bunch of money while waiting for a pencil. The number was it had called up Commissioner Starr. The result was a crowd of the 12 children. They acknowledged the theft, saying but three were put upon a [illegible] lation.

Just About Boys

A boy soon learns that his father expects him to be a man, that his mother is content if he will always be her baby.

If a boy is quiet every one wonders what he is up to now, and if he is noisy they know.

Send a boy on an errand, and when he reaches his destination he is accompanied by four other boys and a dog.

"I wonder," every healthy boy thinks as he gets up from dinner, "if mother has anything in the house for supper."

A boy likes the playing the most that involves the hardest work, and the work that requires the least exertion.

A boy's curiosity is aroused by a refrigerator the same as a girl's is aroused by bureau drawers.

When a mother scolds her son and the boy's father agrees with her, this makes her so mad she forgets the boy and goes after the father.

Until a boy is 25 he thinks his efforts to entertain girls are a failure unless their squealing and laughing can be heard in the next block.

It is every girl's opinion that by beginning to nag her brother by eight in the morning, he can be induced to be gin a piece of work by the time he should be getting ready for bed at night.

Every boy should have a dog so that he can feel, when his mother and father find fault with him and make him say "Please" at the table, that he has at least one true satisfied friend.

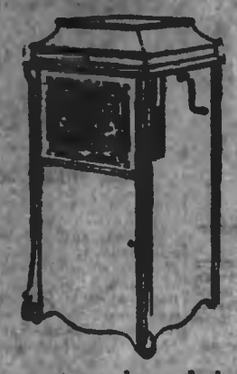
The Amberola



—not only the greatest sound-reproducing instrument—not only the greatest MUSICAL instrument—but the greatest

Edison Phonograph

THE Amberola brings to your home not only all of the extreme pleasure to be derived from all of the very best of every kind of entertainment, but a further pleasure in the possession of an exquisitely designed and beautifully finished piece of furniture that will take its place in your home in harmony with your other precious possessions.

You have your choice of four finishes—Mahogany, Circassian Walnut, Golden Oak and Mission Oak. The Amberola is the only "concealed" horn instrument that is an Edison—Thomas A. Edison's highest development of his own invention, the Edison Phonograph. That means that it is the instrument with exactly the right volume of sound for the home, that has the sapphire reproducing point that does not scratch or wear the records and lasts forever—no changing needles; that it plays both Edison Amberol (four-and-one-half minute) Records and Edison Standard (two-minute) Records as well.

See and hear the Amberola and the many other styles of Edison Phonographs at an Edison dealer's today. Every Edison Phonograph has the definite Edison advantages. And there is an Edison at almost any price you wish to pay.

Edison Phonographs, $16.50 to $240.00. Edison Standard Records, 40c. Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long), 65c. Edison Grand Opera Records, 85c. to $2.00.

River Don on a Rampage

Toronto River Overflows with Heavy Loss—Level of River Steadily Rising

Rain Would be Serious

Toronto, April 6.—When the great accumulation of ice on the River Don broke loose yesterday afternoon, 300 yards of C. N.R. track at East Don Station were washed out, three trains were held up, and the damage to the company was estimated $20,000. Two children were saved from death by the plucky action of a lumberjack just opposite the [illegible] sawmills. Two families were [illegible] out and the homes were [illegible] slightly by the heavy chunks [illegible] Several dams were torn away, [illegible] rushing torrents of ice and [illegible] stirred which had risen to a height [illegible] city. feet and several small bridges [illegible] station vate property were picked up [illegible] thrown clear of the banks. [illegible] saved the ice and water from [illegible] ably destroying property in the city was a jam at the confluence of the east and west branches of the river about six miles of its mouth. Here the ice towered to a height of [illegible] feet and ice was scattered over fully fifty acres.

"It is getting worse," was the reply made to an inquiry at Rosedale Station early this morning. "If it rains the devastation will be awful."

Dougall Montgomery, a lumberjack at Rosedale saw mills, saved two George street boys from drowning. They were playing on the ice when the flood picked them up. Several yards from shore one of the boys jumped from an ice floe into the water and was rescued by Montgomery. The other lad was afraid to jump. The raging water washed his raft down the river about 200 yards when it struck the shore and the boy jumped to land.

At two o'clock this morning the ice in the Humber River commenced to break and it is feared that considerable damage will be done to-day unless the ice goes out into the lake. Owners of the boathouses at the mouth of the river are afraid that their property will be flooded.

Mississippi is Rising.

Cairo, Ill., April 6.—The Mississippi is still rising here and the Ohio is rising up as far as Louisville, and small streams are pouring unprecedented volumes of water into both rivers. The lowest river district faces a crisis.

Six hundred and thirty-eight miles of the Mississippi are seriously affected, that being the distance between Columbus, Ky., and Vicksburg, Miss. The greatest strain, where the levee is liable to break any time extends from Columbus, Ky., to Helena, Ark., a distance of 318 miles.

The flood death list probably was brought to eighteen yesterday. This is not positive, however, as reports of loss of life have proved inaccurate in some instances and doubtless persons have been drowned in remote settlements and the facts not made known.

The property loss last night was conservatively estimated at $1,500,000. Relief work is going on as rapidly as interrupted transportation facilities will allow. At Hickman, Ky., 3,000 are sheltered in tents, provided by the federal and state governments. Food is being supplied in all localities where the local supply has been exhausted. There has been little suffering from hunger.

Many Towns Threatened.

St. Louis, April 6.—The Mississippi River at St. Louis registered 30.8 feet at sundown, a rise of .2 since morning and four-tenths in 24 hours. Unless there are heavy rains in this vicinity within a week, the river is not expected to pass the 31-foot stage.

The flood situation at Caruthersville, Mo., is very serious, the river rising at the rate of five inches in twenty-four hours, and the stage has passed that of 1903 by 25 inches.

Every store in the city was closed yesterday and 2,000 men employed in them joined the already large force of flood fighters.

No water is in the streets of Caruthersville, but the flood from the Point Pleasant gap is fast filling [illegible] one mile [illegible] river [illegible], several miles back of the city.

The levee in Caruthersville is the key to the flood situation of the entire St. Francis Valley. Should a break occur here, the entire basin, filled with thickly settled towns, will be swept by water.

Floods in West Ontario.

London, Ont., April 6.—Many points in this district report serious flood conditions as a result of the warm winds yesterday breaking up the ice. At St. Mary's the Thames has [illegible] ed a dam and covered part of [illegible] and Queen streets. Cellars are [illegible] ed, and the Baird Co. has lost [illegible] siderable lumber.

At Cold Stream, near Strathroy, Marsh's dam was carried away. Alexandra Park and other lowlands at Strathroy are flooded. A large area of low ground around Prairie Siding is under water.

Grand Trunk workmen left last evening on a special train to repair a washout at Kincardine.

Sugar Millionaire Dead.

New York, April 6.—William Dick, who started as a small grocer here many years ago, and later became a factor in the American Sugar Refining Co., died yesterday in his ninetieth year. His granddaughter, Doris Dick, is the wife of Henry O. Havemeyer, jr. He leaves a fortune running into many millions.

TO SAVE THE TRUST.

U. S. Committee Fears Steel Industry May Wilt.

Washington, April 6.—An adverse report on the House steel revision bill, signed by all the Republican members of the finance committee except Senator LaFollette, was submitted to the Senate yesterday. The bill is denounced as ill-advised and unfortunate.

It is declared the enactment of the bill would reduce protection below the margin of safety and tend to destroy one of the most important industries of this country. The committee contends that hearings of 245 different industrial concerns of eighteen states showed a widespread opposition to the revision of the present rates, and that representatives of 225 manufacturers of machine tools testified that putting machine tools on the free list would compel the closing of their factories.

Among numerous other reasons given by the committee for its opposition to the Democratic bill is cited the absence of a report from the tariff board on metals.

J. W. Cheeseworth Dead.

Toronto, April 6.—John W. Cheeseworth, a well-known figure in both business and political circles, passed away yesterday at his residence, 332 Markham street Mr. Cheeseworth had been critically ill with la grippe for the past seven weeks.

He was born in Lancelles, Cornwall County, England, on Oct. 3, 1840. At an early age he came to Canada, and has resided in Toronto since 1873. For many years he was a merchant tailor in King street. Later he was engaged in the brokerage business, and for years he has been connected with the Dominion Metals Co., Ltd., of which firm he held the position of secretary at the time of his death. For the last fifteen years his business activities have been mostly confined to different mining exploitations. He has been interested in various developments of this character in the Lake of the Woods district and in Algoma.

Was Notice Sent?

Montreal, April 6.—A point of interest to very holder of a life insurance policy in a fraternal organization is raised in a suit entered by J. H. Hodges et al, against the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society, the action being for the recovery of the amount of a policy taken out in the defendant society by the late John H. Hodges.

The society claims that at the time of the death of the latter a fixed premium was three days' overdue and consequently the deceased lost all rights in the society.

The plaintiff claims on the other hand that the assured, his father, had not received notice that such premium was due, and farther that for several years prior to his death the society had accepted without protest and unconditionally amounts over due by him.

To Go to New York

Northern Seeks a Line to the Metropolis

Bridge Site Inspected

Buffalo, April 6.—An outlet through Buffalo to New York either via the Lackawanna or the Erie with a bridge over the Niagara River at Niagara Falls in conjunction with the International Railway Co., is the plan of Sir William Mackenzie of Toronto, head of the Canadian Northern, who was in Buffalo yesterday with a party of capitalists and officials interested in the steam and electric system in which the Canadian Northern is the principal factor.

"The Canadian Northern is seeking an outlet into New York State, and the east. What is more, we will get it, too. Just when or through what channels I cannot now say," said Sir William, when questioned as to his railway's proposition.

With Sir William were D. B. Hanna, third vice-president of the Canadian Northern; E. F. Seixus, the general manager; and J. M. Aird, assistant manager of the Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway Co., which is closely identified with the Canadian Northern; E. R. Wood, Noel Marshall and A. W. Smith.

Shortly after the arrival they went into conference with Thomas C. Mitten, chairman of the board of directors, and Thomas Penny, president of the International Railway Co. With them also is Nelson Robinson, the widely known New York financier, who represents the Morgan interests in the financing of the proposed extension. While Sir William declined to discuss the plans, it can be stated that they include the extension of the Canadian Northern, which now stops at Toronto, to Hamilton.

From there construction will be made by the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto until such time as the latter line may be converted into a steam railroad. Such a construction will bring the Canadian Northern to Niagara Falls, Ont., and form the first link in the line to New York. At the Falls the situation is that the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto owns the necessary land for a bridge approach on the Canadian side. On the American side the International controls a similar site. The proposition is to construct a bridge, and one of the questions under discussion yesterday was whether the [illegible] should be a joint affair or erected by one road and traffic rights leased to the other. The question of furnishing power also is understood to be under discussion.

From the American side of the Falls to Buffalo the projected frontier western terminal line is understood to figure in the Canadian Northern's plan of getting into Buffalo. Eastward from this city the Lehigh, the Erie and the Lackawanna have been under consideration as a possible eastern outlet to New York. The Lehigh, with its business affiliations with the Grand Trunk, a rival to the Canadian Northern, has, it is understood, been practically eliminated from consideration and either the Erie or the Lackawanna is looked to as the most likely to New York connection.

Asked yesterday in regard to the long proposed line from Port Colborne through Crystal Beach and Erie Beach to Fort Erie, Sir William referred enquiries to Vice-President Hanna, who said:

"We have the line from Port Colborne to Fort Erie under very serious consideration. The right of way has been secured, and we hope to begin actual work of construction this spring, probably at the Fort Erie end. We are now in communication with Manager Weber of Erie Beach over some details of the project."

New Electric Road.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 6.—Following the conference in Buffalo, Sir William Mackenzie, and Thomas Penny, president of the International Railway, which operates many electric lines on the frontier and is said to be controlled by the Mackenzie-Mann interests, yesterday afternoon inspected the site of the proposed new bridge over the Niagara River. It is understood that the Buffalo conference was for the purpose of discussing the new bridge, together with the entrance to New York for the Canadian Northern. It has been decided to make provision in the new bridge for steam and electric railways, carriages and pedestrians.

Nelson Robinson, representing Morgan interests, participated in the conference, it is believed, with the result that New York banking firm will finance a new electric road from here to Buffalo to connect with the Niagara, St. Catharines, Toronto Railway. The projected frontier western terminal line is understood to figure in the Canadian Northern's plan of getting into Buffalo. The Erie and Lackawanna lines have been under consideration as possible eastern outlets to New York.

Another conference will be held shortly, after which the entire details will be made public, the officials intimated.

River Under Bison City.

Buffalo, April 6.—An underground river has been discovered under Main street, at one of the busiest corners of the city. Drillers, while locating the foundations for a new bank building lost their drills soon after striking the 65-foot level. Tests showed that they had struck a stream of running water. The water backed up in the hole for a distance of 25 feet, or about the level of Lake Erie, and the belief is expressed that the stream has its outlet in the lake.

Expect Satisfactory Finish.

Ottawa, April 6.—Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden and Mrs. Borden left yesterday afternoon for a two weeks' holiday trip to Hot Springs, Virginia. Hon. George E. Foster will be acting Premier in the meantime. Most of the Ministers are out of the city over Easter, and there will be no council meeting until Tuesday.

On Monday the negotiations with the West Indies delegates will be resumed, and the conference will close on Tuesday, when an official announcement will be made.

It is the general impression at Ottawa the conference will be successful. "We are not without hope," in a cheerful tone, was the reply of Hon. George E. Foster to a question as to how negotiations were succeeding.

NERVOUS-DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and sexual systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair grew, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicine and tried many first-class physicians, were an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

Historic Places Burned.

London, April 6.—Three destructive fires in historic country mansions occurred last night. The first was in Lake House, in Wiltshire, a fine Elizabethan edifice, full of priceless Jacoban furniture. The Lake House was occupied by Percy Holden Illingworth, member of Parliament, who, with his wife and children, was only saved from death from the flames by the barking of a dog outside the door. As it was, the family made its escape clad only in night clothes.

The other fires were in Rosadhu House, on Loch Lomond, belonging to Sir Ian Colquhoun, and Giggstown Castle, near Navan, County Meath, Ireland, where alone the damage done aggregated $200,000.

Rebels Take Town.

Jiminez, Mexico, April 6.—Parral fell into the hands of the rebels yesterday. The numbers of the enemy, which looked so large to Gen. Campa in the hour of his defeat, proved to be a force of only 700. They escaped Thursday night, leaving behind them a rapid fire and a mortar, previously captured from the Liberals.

It developed that Gens. Villay and Urbano, the federal commanders, fought alone on Tuesday when they routed Campa. They are believed to have retreated to Majada where the main federal forces are said to be mobilising. The wires to El Paso, were restored yesterday afternoon.

Winter Navigation in St. Lawrence.

Quebec, April 6.—At a meeting of the council of the Quebec Board of Trade it was decided to memorialise the Government afresh in regard to winter navigation of the Lower St. Lawrence. The memorial will set forth the new records made by the Government steamship Montcalm and the steamer Melbone during the season just passed. The memorial will set forth the possibilities of winter navigation, especially when carried on by larger and more powerful [illegible]

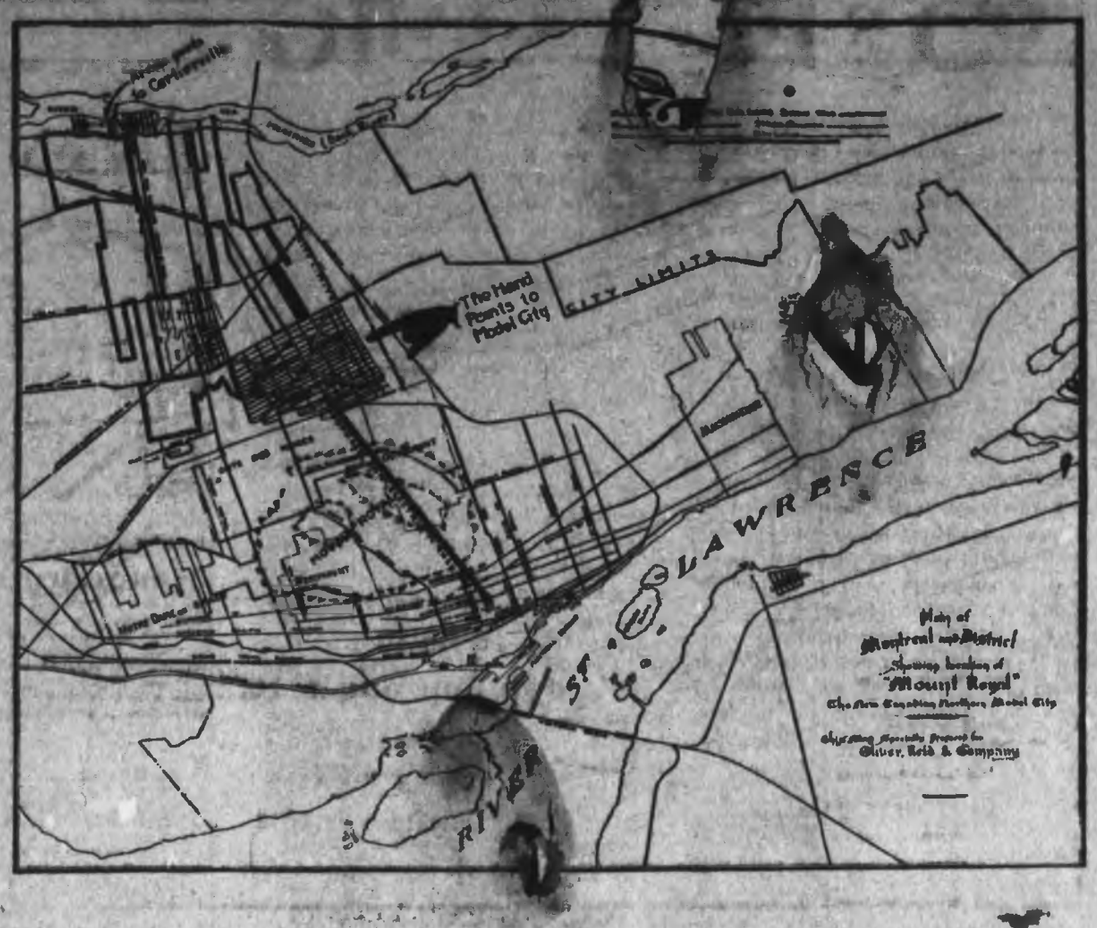
Another memorial is to be submitted to the Government in favor of the deepening of the St. Lawrence below Quebec.

Canada's Greatest Real Estate Opportunity

YOU have been reading about MacKenzie and Mann's great coup in Montreal, whereby they will secure a terminal in the business heart of the city by means of a tunnel driven through Mount Royal from the North; and at the same time bring the beautiful residential district north of the mountain within eight minutes of the centre of the metropolis.

Unique in its originality, daring in its conception, and gigantic in its cost, it is little wonder that the announcement of the undertaking caused a sensation in Canada, United States and Europe; and provided the material for hundreds of special articles in the daily press, magazines and financial publications.

By opening up the district North of Mount Royal for settlement, the project will confer a great benefit on Montreal, which for years has been one of the most congested cities in America. Hemmed in on a narrow strip of land between Mount Royal and the St. Lawrence, the congestion in Canada's greatest metropolis has grown more frightful year after year.



Montreal's Yearly Increase In Population Large Enough To Fill "Model City"

UNLIKE Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London and other Canadian cities, Montreal is not a city of homes. It is a city of tenements, flat houses and apartments. And there are thousands of home-hungry people within its borders.

And it is growing fast. Montreal has the largest birth rate of any of the world's largest cities. Montreal's percentage of increase in population during the last ten years shows that it is without a rival compared with the cities of the United States. New York's percentage of increase was only 38.7 per cent., Boston's 19.6, Baltimore's 9.7, whereas Montreal's was 70.3 per cent.

50,000 Increase

Every year Montreal is adding to its population a city larger than London, Ontario; or Halifax, or St. John, N.B.; or Calgary, or Regina, or Victoria. Every two years its increase is greater than the entire present population of Hamilton or Ottawa.

The yearly increase in Montreal's population is large enough to occupy the whole of the Model City—the beautiful new residential district laid out North of the Mountain by the C.N.R.—and still leave 10,000 people to find homes elsewhere. Montreal is increasing at the rate of 50,000 a year, but the Model City is only planned to accommodate about 40,000 people.

This means that a real estate investment in the Model City is a safe, sure, high-grade opportunity—and one that will double and treble in value as the work on the tunnel progresses and the erection of homes proceeds.

C. N. R. Anxious

Preliminary work on the tunnel commenced on March 26th. No time will be lost in rushing the tunnel to completion. The C.N.R. are exceedingly anxious to become a strong factor in handling the increasing volume of business concentrating at the metropolis. They are also anxious to provide the Model City with rapid transit at the earliest moment and enjoy the lucrative traffic that will result.

So that you see the necessity of prompt action if you are to benefit largely from a real estate investment in the Model City—a city laid out by a noted landscape gardener, a city with broad diagonal boulevards, wide avenues, a circular driveway, and fourteen small parks—an ideal residential district in every respect A district whose residents will be carried in comfortable electric trains through a well-ventilated, double-tracked subway to the business heart of Montreal in less than 10 minutes. No snow blockades. No delays by congestion of street traffic. Express speed all the way.

See the Map

The strategical location of the Model City is well shown on the map. Notice the direct course of the tunnel from the Model City terminal to city terminal. Note also that the distance from Montreal Harbor to Cartierville on Riviere des Prairiés (Back River) is less than the distance of the city limits from East to West. With the tunnel through Mount Royal, the natural growth of Montreal in the future will be in the direction of Cartierville towards the Back River. The Model City is midway between the Harbor and Cartierville. Notice also the close proximity of the fashionable suburb of Outremont to the Model City. Also notice that the Montreal city limits run just outside of the Eastern side of the Model City, continuing on to Riviere des Prairies (Back River).

And just think you can secure lots in the Model City at less than half the price of similar size lots in other purely residential sections of Montreal. Less than half the price of lots in the fashionable residential districts of Toronto, such as Rosedale, Avenue Road, Deer Park, and High Park, which are from 20 to 50 minutes from the business centre of Toronto.

First Choices

The lots will be First Selections, too. Only one other syndicate had an equally wide choice of C.N.R. Model City properties. We have, at all times, been in close touch with the C.N.R. since the birth of their project. We handle only large propositions, this one amounting to over $1,500,000. We invite business men and professional men to share in this great real estate opportunity in the solid old metropolis of Montreal. Its like has never occurred in Canada before, and the same combination of circumstances, that made this opportunity possible, will never occur again. Why leave your money in the bank earning a low rate of interest and an opportunity like this at your door?

I. W. W. Causes More Reductions.

Seattle, Wn., April 6.—Interest in the activity of the Industrial Workers of the World shifted yesterday from British Columbia, where 6,000 railroad laborers are on strike, to Southwestern Washington, where 1,000 sawmill workers are out, and where the situation has been complicated by a split in the municipal commission of Hoquiam.

The mayor, Harry Ferguson, is siding with the Industrial Workers, in their demand that they be permitted to remain in town unmolested while conducting the strike. The other two commissioners are backing the mill owners, and the citizens' committee in their efforts to drive the men from the district.

Reorganizing Diplomatic Corps.

Paris, April 6.—A series of diplomatic changes is being considered by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, according to The Figaro. It is regarded as possible that Jules J. Jusserand, at present French ambassador at Washington, will be transferred to Madrid, and that Antony Vladislas Klobukowski, who is now French Minister at Brussels, will be sent to Washington. No confirmation of these movements can be obtained.

The French Cabinet is about to choose an ambassador to Austria-Hungary in succession to Philip Harus Crozier, who resigned in March, and this fact may have given rise to the report of coming transfers.

Imported Potatoes Cheaper.

Montreal, April 6.—Potatoes from England, Ireland and Scotland are now being served on Montreal tables. Three thousand bags have recently been received, and are being sold at $2 a bag.

The potatoes, imported from across the Atlantic, cost from $1.85 to $2.40 a bag, against $1.75 for the Canadian article.

A few baskets of new potatoes have been received from Florida, but they are a luxury, and cost about $6 a bushel.

Lionizing Sir Rodolphe.

London, April 6.—Sir Rodolphe Forget, after a very brief sojourn here, has proceeded to Paris. He will return shortly and will be tendered a dinner, presided over by Bonar Law, leader of the Unionists in the British House of Commons. Sir Max Aitken and other prominent Canadians will be present, and the speech of the member for Charlevoix and Montmorency in Canadian affairs on this occasion will doubtless be of interest to people on both sides of the Atlantic.

Spanish Court Hostess Dies.

Madrid, April 6.—Gen. Porfirio Diaz, ex-president of Mexico, continues to be the recipient of marked honors here. Yesterday at the Good Friday religious services a special tribune beside that of King Alfonso was provided for the former Mexican executive, and he is daily in attendance at receptions in court circles.

Fight Warm in Michigan.

Detroit, April 6.—Two delegations of 168 members, one for President Taft and the other for Roosevelt, will represent Wayne County at the State Republican convention at Bay City April 11. At the county convention yesterday the Taft supporters elected in regular convention a solid delegation. The Roosevelt followers, after a heated contest, called a separate convention and took similar action.

SOME OF THE PECULIARITIES WHICH CHARACTERIZE THE WORK OF LOCAL IMMIGRATION OFFICER

Immigration Office is Inundated With Applications for Farm Help—Farmers Are Fastidious in Matters of Nationality—Qualifications Required in Many Instances Are Somewhat Extravagant.

"Have you got any good Irishmen coming out with your April party?"

"Yes."

"Well, send me a good Irishman."

At that a prosperous looking farmer from Fraserville stepped back, and his place was filled by a sandy complexioned gentleman from Millbrook.

"I want to get two good Scotchmen—one for me and one for my brother."

"All right," said the immigration officer. "We will do the best we can."

The above is a fair example of what Mr. Howson, local immigration officer, has to contend with for about eight or nine hours a day. When the Examiner man dropped into his office this morning at nine o'clock there were about a dozen farmers lined up at the wicket, all clamouring for help. Some of them wanted nothing but an experienced man; another would want a good strong boy who was able to milk, drive horses and do practically all that would be expected of an experienced man. While they elaborated upon the qualifications that would have to be forthcoming before a prospective employee would be eligible for a place on their pay roll. Mr. Howsn busied himself with the task of entering their names and addresses in the applicant ledger, where they will have to take their chances with the long list of applicants that have preceded them.

A BUSY WEEK

This week has been a busy one for the immigration officer as the belated arrival of fine weather has stirred the farmers to a spirit of activity. This has resulted in the immigration office being inundated with applications for farm labor of all kinds. In all there have been between 25 and 30 new arrivals during the week, which works out on a pro rata basis with the demand at about 10 per cent. It does not require the services of a qualified prognosticator to predict a shortage of farm help. While the situation is not expected to become acute it behooves the farmer to be a little reasonable in his demands and a little less exacting as to the manner in which he thinks a new comer to his land should adapt himself to what appears to the latter as being a complete reversal of conditions to what he has been accustomed to. Not only are applications coming in from Peterborough county but from the surrounding counties as well. Of course it is Mr. Howson's purpose to supply the home demand first and in doing this it becomes necessary to ignore a great many outside appeals that come from different parts of Ontario.

BIG PARTY DUE ON THE 26TH

Mr. H. P. Collings will leave London on April 17th with a party of about 150 immigrants booked for Peterborough. The arrival in the city is looked for on or about the 20th of April. It will be remembered that Mr. Collings brought a large party to this city last spring under similar circumstances. This party with the exception of four, who went west, was disposd of by Mr. Howson.

MURDER AND ROBBERY

Mysterious Affair in Toronto in Which One Man Was Killed and Another Very Seriously Injured

THREE SUSPECTED

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, April 6. — One man killed and another so badly injured that he had to be taken to the hospital, is the result of an affair during the night at the foot of Strachan avenue in this city. Indications are murder and robbery and at present the police are searching for three men who they think are the ones responsible. The dead man is J. Rosenthal, who was until a few weeks ago an interpreter at the general hospital and the injured man is Eli Dunkelman. Rosenthal's body was found with the face pressed into the mud and a thick cord embodied in the flesh of the neck. Blood was oozing from the face and head and a ten pound cake of cement resting on his head. It was discovered in the rear of the hydro-electric transformer station at 7.30 this morning. The pockets were empty. Dunkelman was nearby just recovering consciousness.

MEMPHIS IS INUNDATED

Large Portion of Tennessee City Under Water

Special to The Examiner:

MEMPHIS, TENN, April 6. — As the day advances the prospects of this city being almost completely inundated for Easter Sunday seem to be increasing. In spite of the efforts of a large corps of army engineers working here since Thursday waters of the overflooded Mississippi River are gaining headway.

A portion of the lower town is already under water and hundreds are homeless. The streets of the upper town are crowded with vans of furniture and people forsaking their homes and making for the higher country round about. From farther down the river telegraph communication is cut off and it is feared that several small towns have been swept out during the night, probably with loss of life.

MILK IS TO COME DOWN

Local Dairymen's Association Decide to Lower the Price

A meeting of the Peterborough Dairymen's Association was held in the Foresters' Haill on Wednesday night, when it was decided to reduce the price of milk to 5 cents per quart to public institutions, and 6c. to private customers. This price is to take effect after cows are put upon grass—about June 1st.

Lulu Glaser to Appear Here

Well-known Comic Opera Star Billed for The Grand

The announcement that the city will be included in the notable coast to coast and return tour which Lulu Glaser is making in her continental operetta success, Miss Dudelsack, will interest opera lovers who have heard of the delightful music and romantic Scotch operatta from Viennese sources which is serving this favourite light opera prima donna this season. Miss Glaser started her season in Boston, went thence to Philadelphia and Washington, later to Chicago, and is now on the Pacific coast. Her tour will cover over thirty thousand miles this year, and will include a route from Vancouver, B.C., in the west, to Halifax, Nova Scotia, in the east. The Copper Country in Michigan, Toronto and the larger Ontario cities will see her in the late spring and the tour will close in Halifax late in June. Announcement of her engagement here will be made later.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. G. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

I.O.O.F. VISIT LINDSAY.

The degree teams of the local lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows visited Lindsay yesterday, where they put on a lodge of instruction. Sessions were held afternoon and evening and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all who took part in the event.

BAD FLOOD AT LONDON

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., April 6, 1912.—London is facing the worst flood it has had in 20 years. During the night the high water mark for the past few years was reached and the water receded. All morning however it has been going up steadily and at the present rate of increase the greatest alarm is felt by residents of West London. The new government rifle ranges on the Cove Flats are now under seven feet of water and great damage has already been done. Wm. Lewis, while arguing on the breakwater with Mayor Graham about the situation, was precipitated into the river by the breaking of a plank and had a very close call from being swept away and drowned.

"A delightful story." The teapot tells it when you use "SALADA" Tea; delicious, healthful and refreshing; in fact, "SALADA" is tea perfection.

Summary of Home Rule Bill

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., April 6. — The Ulster Guardian, which is regarded by many as being close to the Government in Home Rule negotiations, has appeared with a summary of the bill, which indicates among other features which have been already published, that after six years the Irish legislature will be in charge of her own tariff and can make such prohibitive duties as she thinks necessary against the British colonies or foreign countries, notwithstanding any policy of the British Parliament. The Guardian says that the bill will appeal to the Nationalists and Unionists as being an excellent measure.

EATABLES FOR EASTER

Full line of fruits, domestic and foreign, oranges, bananas, pineapples, grape fruit, etc. Also new vegetables, lettuce, onions, radishes, rhubarb, celery, parsley, tomatoes, potatoes, etc., which are sure to give perfect satisfaction. New maple syrup in a few days. Both phones 271. HARRY BRADSHAW, 362-364 Charlotte street.

The Woodmen of the World will hold a Progressive Euchre Party, Friday Evening, April 12th. Dancing and Refreshments will also figure in the programme. The At Home will be held in the new W.O.W. Hall on George St. (over the Nugent Drug Co.). Couples 50c.

St. John's Story of the First Easter.

The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

Peter therefore, went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

So they ran both together; and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

And he, stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie.

And the napkin that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

Then went in also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

For as yet they knew not the scripture, that He must rise again from the dead.

Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping; and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre.

And seeth two angels in white, sitting, the one at the head and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, 'Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? Whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have born him hence, tell me where thou has laid him, and I will take him away.

Jesus saith unto her, Mary! She turned herself ,and saith unto him, Rabboni! which is to say, Master!

Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father; but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father and your Father; and to my God and your God.

Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

MRS. LAMBERT IS VICTIM OF AN ACCIDENT

Slipped on Steps and Fell, Sustaining a Fracture of Her Arm and Hip.—Is Suffering Considerably.

NOW IN HOSPITAL

A serious and very painful accident befel Mrs. Helen Lambert of 542 Water street last evening. She paid a visit to Mrs. Hunter, of 467 Water street, and when leaving the house she miscalculated the number of steps. Thinking that she had reached the last step while on the second, she fell and was unable to rise. She was taken by Messrs. Comstock's ambulance to the Nicholls hospital, and attended by Drs. Halliday and Hammond, and it was discovered that she had sustained a broken arm and hip.

It was ascertained this morning that the unfortunate lady was suffering a great deal of pain, and in view of the fact that she is past middle age her injuries are considered serious.

The Miners Are Resuming Work

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., April 6.—Thousands of the striking miners resumed work to-day. It is predicted that notwithstanding the expected stormy meetings this afternoon of delegates to the federations of miners meeting here at least half of the mines will be in operation Monday.

AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION TO AFFILIATE WITH THE ONTARIO MOTOR LEAGUE

Main Johnson, secretary of the Ontario Motor League, was in town on Thursday evening in connection with the formation of the automobile Association in Peterborough. The local club is planning to affiliate with the provincial organization under terms that will be beneficial to both parties. Mr. Johnson was met by several officials of the Peterborough club, and the details of the arrangement were discussed.

The Ontario Motor League has a membership now of 1600, and is developing rapidly this spring. The central association looks after the general interests of motorists in regard to fair legislation and good roads, and the affiliated clubs attend to all local matters.

Mr. Johnson expressed himself as delighted with the prospects of a strong organisation in Peterborough. "You are to be congratulated," he said, "on the energy and initiative shown. Every motorist in the city and district should join the association, and I have no doubt but that they will. The pleasure of motoring will be still more increased when you have a club of your own."

"The Ontario Motor League," Mr. Johnson told the Examiner, "is experiencing a great wave of prosperity. New clubs are being formed all over the province and a lot of organization work is required. The system of a central body with branches enjoying full local autonomy, has been amply justified by its results."

Earlier in the week, Mr. Johnson had been in Ottawa, where the annual meeting of that city's club had been held.

STAINER'S CRUCIFIXION PRESENTED AT ST. JOHN'S

There was a very large attendance at St. John's last night, the occasion of a special Good Friday service, combined with a presentation of Stainer's "Crucifixion". This solemnly beautiful oratorio was presented by the massed choirs of All Saints' and St. John's, and it was given in a manner worthy of its musical merits and religious significance. Judged from an artistic point of view the work of the large choir, under the capable direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, was extremely creditable, and additional devotional spirit was added during its progress by the singing by the choir and the congregation of hymns appropriate to the divine tragedy. While the choral work was very effective, the solos, duets and double quartettes were especially worthy of mention. The tenor soloists were Messrs. H. W. Morphet, and G. E. Chandler. The bass soloists were Messrs. Flowers, Barling, Spence and Edney. The members of the unaccompanied quartette, were—sopranos—Mrs. R. J. Devey and Mrs. W. Cottmun; contralto, Mrs. Seward and Miss Hopkins; tenors, Messrs. Morphet and Chandler; bases, Messrs. Flowers and Coleman.

The organ accompaniments, which contributed so much to the smoothness and effectiveness of the presentation, were admirably given by Miss Flowers, a lady organist of exceptional capability and good musical judgment. Altogether, the service was a reverent and solemn recognition of the solemn event that gives warrant for the title of Good Friday.

BODY WAS RECOVERED YESTERDAY

Remains of Late Henry J. Fairweather Who Was Drowned on January 14th, Taken From River Yesterday

NEAR WATERWORKS DAM

The body of Mr. Henry Ivan Fairweather, who was drowned at Nassau on January 14th last, was found at 10.30 yesterday morning by Mr. E. S. Cotton, power superintendent of the O.G.B.

It will be remembered that Mr. Fairweather, who was engaged in chopping ice in the channel below the slukeway, slipped and fell into the water and, after being carried a short distance by the current, was lost to view. For more than a week a most assiduous search was made for the body, but to no avail, and as the general consensus of opinion was that the body would not be recovered until spring, all efforts were suspended.

Mr. Cotton whilst passing along the river on Thursday was looking out for the body and thought he recognised the red jersey of the drowned man, and on Friday morning his suspicions were confirmed. He called to Mr. A. B. Downey who stood on the opposite side of the river and together they pulled the body to the embankment and summoned Dr. Greer. The exact spot was 2,000 feet above the power house, near the waterworks dam and about one mile from where the unfortunate man met his death.

Mr. Cotton identified the body, which, although badly decomposed, was perfectly recognizable.

The remains were brought to Address On "The Holy Grail"

His Honour Judge Hoyckc Addressed the Women's Art Association

On Thursday evening, April 4th, a most delightful address was given by His Honour Judge Hoycke in the Studio of the Women's Art Association in the Public Library Building.

The subject, "The Holy Grail," was treated more from the point of view of the legends and stories clustering round this miraculous vessel, than the usual conception held, namely, Tennyson's interpretation, and proved a most fitting topic for Holy Week and the eve of Good Friday.

All those who were fortunate enough to be present felt that the Women's Art Association deserve the thanks of the community at large for the interesting talks given from time to time in their studio.

The chair was taken by Mr. Mewat.

On Friday, April 12th, at 8 o'clock, Mr. Dobbin has kindly consented to give a talk on the subject, "When the city was young," to which the members and their friends are invited.

RED MILL THEATRE

The management has booked for Monday and Tuesday a splendid programme. Don't fail to look up the Red Mill ad. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Special big shows for ladies every afternoon.

CAST A WHEEL

The second engine of yesterday's noon Port Hope train, whilst between Hunter and Simcoe streets, cast one of its wheels.

As the passengers were mainly for Peterborough, two of the coaches were detached and the remaining engine took the train on to Port Hope. Meanwhile the damaged engine was taken to the round house, where a pair of wheels which were instantly sent from Lindsay, replaced the old ones.

EASTER.

This year of Grace, especially, we should have had no Easter if we had not had an Easter Good Friday. That is, if Good Friday had not dawned in a way to justify its name in a material sense, we should not have had the weather conditions that we associate with the character and significance of Easter. We woke on Friday with soft, genial spring airs fluttering the curtains of open windows. The bright, warm sun smote the snow-covered earth and the snowy cumuli wept into trickling rills. The caw of the crow, the love-call and warble of the robin, the sweet notes of the song sparrow, and the piping of the blackbird, the real harbinger of the real spring, fell upon glad ears that had grown wearied with the dreary monotone of howling winter winds. In exposed spots the tender shoots of plants unfurled their little flags of green, all nature woke from its winter sleep and humanity rejoiced with lightened spirit. The mystery of the natural resurrection that sprang into evidence on Friday for the first time this year, is but a type of the more glorious Resurrection that makes Easter the gladdest, the most significant, the crowning festival of the Christian year. If human faith should shrink from realising, even in belief, the glorious mystery of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, as on the first Easter day, it finds in the world of nature similar mystery. The larva sinks to seeming death in its chrysalis coffin, but in the spring it lives again in a glorified form. The flowers and plants and trees die the death and their role are locked in months of deadly frost; but when spring comes the frost grave is broken, resurrection comes, and we have the swelling bud, the promises of the full leafage; the tender plants come forth timidly and bespeak the lusty growth and the full flower; and all nature awakens from the dead as if there had been no winter. If there is no death in the world of nature; if what seems death is but a phase in a new life, in the material world, why should we not regard the change of being we call death, as a magnificent reality? Our reason, as well as our faith has warrant for accepting the resurrection of the crucified One. If it did not then Christ had died in vain, and the work of redemption would have been uncompleted—the sacrifice of the cruel cross, only an historical human tragedy. We meet and part—at last in this world, at the gate of death; and life would be impossible and hope in vain, if beyond the dark flowing stream, upon the verdant shores of Paradise, there stood not the risen Lord, and the dear ones passed before, by the grace of His redemption, and the glorious mystery of his resurrection from the dead, to give us double welcome to the new life.

BULLETIN ON WEEDS AND THE SEED LAW.

A bulletin has been issued by the Seed Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, which is the law governing the sale of seeds in Canada. This Act, with the regulations of the Governor in Council, names the weeds which are considered most noxious and are particularly legislated against and defines the standards of quality in regard to purity and germination to which seed of various kinds must conform when sold for seeding purposes. The standards for four grades of timothy, red clover, alsike and alfalfa seed are given and full information regarding the law as applied to farmers and the way in which it may be used for their protection.

The second part of the bulletin deals with seed testing work and the application of the law through seed inspection. Seed laboratories are maintained in Ottawa and Calgary for the use of seedsmen and farmers where samples are tested free of charge.

The largest part of thebulletin and perhaps that of most interest to farmers, deals with weeds and seeds. About 90 different species are illustrated and described and with the use of the bulletin the identification of both the growing plants and the seeds should be comparatively easy. The weeds considered noxious under the Seed Control Act are given first, in botanical order. This bulletin will be very interesting and useful to those interested in the identification and control of weeds and the means to adopt to prevent their introduction and spread through commercial seeds It is known as bulletin No. 8-6, and may be had free on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

VERY USEFUL FURY.

(Montreal Herald)

Sir James Whitney, in his blustering way, avers that the Dominion grant of two millions to the Ontario Government railway was stopped by the Senate because Sir Wilfrid Laurier hates Ontario. No doubt Sir James puts the case this way for want of a better argument.

The railway to the north country was begun after a declaration by the Legislature, pretty well backed up by the people, that it was preferable to have the road built, owned and operated by the people of Ontario. That is the spirit in which the project was conceived and in which it has ever since been supported. The road could have been built in the usual way, by private capital with the aid of Provincial and Dominion subsidies, but Ontario did not want that. She wanted to have the road for her very own, and she got it. Now, because, on the admission of some of them, Ontario has returned a large majority of members in support of this Borden Government, a demand is made for two million dollars as Ontario's share of the spoils, nothing more nor less.

The Dominion has always had to preserve the utmost impartiality as between the Provinces, especially in regard to grants of money out of the common treasury. Giving money to a Province for a railway owned by the Province is something new, and the precedent, it must be recognised, is one of the highest importance, which might lead to serious complications, indeed could hardly fail to do so. Anybody can see that. Sir James Whitney can see it. That is why he pretends to be so furiously an ass.

AID TO HIGHWAYS.

The bill for the improvement of highways does not become law, because the Borden Government would not agree to an amendment made by the Senate, providing that the money should be apportioned among the Provinces according to the population. When the Minister of Railways introduced the bill, he said that the money would be apportioned in that way. There is no good reason why his intention should not be expressed in the law.

It is advisable that all subsidies and other payments to the Provinces out of the Federal treasury should be made upon fixed principles. Otherwise, there is danger not only that injustice may be done to one or more Provinces, but that the money may be used for electioneering purposes, by this Government or by succeeding Governments. Fixed principle is a protection, not only to the Provinces but to a Government which desires to pursue a right course. If there is no fixed principle, too large a share of the money is likely to go to the Province whose Government is politically useful to the Ministry at Ottawa. There is danger of a mischevious intermingling of Federal and Provincial politics.

Confederation was intended to put an end to the expenditure of the money of Canada on local works, and to the squabbles to which such expenditure gave rise. It is true that provision was made for Provincial subsidies, but these were fixed upon a basis of population, so that the distribution would be by right, not by the favour of the Government at Ottawa. There is now a disposition to go back to the methods which prevailed before Confederation, and which were the causes of constant disagreement between Upper and Lower Canada. It is the policy of inexperienced men—men who do not know the history of the country as Sir Richard Cartwright knows it, and who do not foresee the consequences of their actions. —London Advertiser.

HO! HAVE A LOOK AT THE BIG CALF

And See Alex. Gordon's Fine Display of Easter Meats

Unusual interest is being taken in the fine display of Easter Meats at Alex. Gordon's Arcade Meat Market, 398 1-2 George street. One of the principal attractions is a mammoth calf, which dresses nearly 400 lbs, although only four months old. You never saw nicer, richer dressed veal. Mr. Gordon also shows some excellent spring lambs, prime Easter beef, delicious mutton, pork, etc., all specially fed for Mr. Gordan's trade, by local feeder for Mr. Gordon's trade, by local feed: prompt delivery. The shop will be open this evening until 9 o'clock. Both phones 253. Alex. Gordon, Arcade Meat Market.

Don't forget the Concert in the Labour Hall, 486 George St., on Friday evening, April 12th. A good programme will be given. Admission 25c. 3d-2-m-th

OSTEOPATHS GIVEN RIGHT TO PRACTICE

Local M.P.P.'s, Hon. S. H. Blake and Ald. McBride as "A Living Example" Come to Their Aid

(Toronto News April 4th, 1912)

(Toronto News)

The osteopaths secured from a special committee of the Legislature a broader lease of life than it had been the intention of the Ontario Medical Council to grant them.

This came about, however, only through the determined efforts of Messrs. McPherson and McNaught, supplemented by Hon. S. H. Blake for the osteopaths, Ald. Sam McBride, as a living testimony to the benefits of osteopathic treatment, and a delegation of the osteopaths themselves who were not at all agreed on what should be done to elevate the standards of admission to their profession.

Struck Out Clause.

The bill of the Ontario Medical Council attempted to bar all osteopaths not in practice here for five years and that was struck out. All osteopathe now in Ontario with satisfactory diplomas retain their status. Others must however, pass an examination. The future entrance of osteopaths must be subject to the Ontario Medical Council.

Diploma Factory.

Dr. Jamieson pointed out that the Province was becoming flooded with a lot of practitioners without standing in this or other profession. He hinted that it would be necessary to make some compromises in the consideration of the bill.

Dr. W. F. Parke, who has practised in Toronto for four years, and in the United States for nearly ten years, wanted no discrimination against the Toronto Osteopathic Association in favour of the American Osteopathic Association, as the bill provided. The latter, he believed, was to some degree a "diploma factory," where a two-months course would win the right to practice.

"Why do you call yourself a doctor?" asked Mr. J. W. Johnston.

"I am a graduate of the Kirksville school under old Dr. Still itself," answered Dr. Parke.

Dr. Littlejohn, of Chicago, a regular physician, a graduate of Glasgow and Edinburgh 20 years ago and now president of a Chicago College of Osteopathy, came out with a bold denial of Dr. Parke's allegations against the American college of osteopathy. Not one school under its jurisdiction in the States had any course under three years of nine months each.

Mr. Blake's Appeal.

Hon. S. H. Blake for the osteopaths applauded the clause as a step in the right direction. The best osteopaths were eager to place the standing of their profession on as high a level as possible. As a personal witness for the profession, he asked the committee to be just. The old feuds between allopaths and homeopaths had disappeared, giving way to a newer and kinder dispensation.

"If you can give a higher test than that of the American Osteopathic Association, I would be very glad to hear it suggested," he argued.

It was unfair, he contended, to require in addition to their diploma, two examinations in Ontario. He thought the finals should be sufficient.

Mr. H. S. Osler, K.C., represented the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He claimed for them very great credit for recognizing the Osteopathists in the way they had done. There was no desire to hamper them in any way. The Council had asked him to make it as strong as possible that two examinations should be insisted upon.

The Committee agreed to eliminate the restrictions on students to the American Osteopathic Association, to admit students from any regular school of any country recognised by the Ontario Medical Council.

A Living Proof.

Ald. McBride stood up as a testimonial to the value of Osteopathy. "Dr. Caven and Dr. McPherson were treating me, and in the end held a consultation and called in an Osteopath," he declared.

"That isn't true," cried half a dozen doctors.

"I'll bet you $100"—began another.

"Absolutely true," reaffirmed the Alderman.

Mr. McPherson introduced an amendment to have all now engaged in the work, but not holding diplomas, to pass an examination before a Board, to be chosen by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council. Those with diplomas escape the working of the clause. This was endorsed.

Peterborough is Dr. A. G. Walmsley, who came here about five years ago. The doctor is a graduate and postgraduate of the first college of osteopathy, under Dr. A. T. Still, the founder of the college and the discoverer of the science. He is a member of the American Osteopathic Association, and of the Ontario Association of Osteopathy and is a trustee of the latter. Since coming to Peterborough, Dr. Walmsley has built up an excellent practice and has made many friends, who are much pleased with the wider recognition accorded the science of osteopathy in Ontario, by the passage of the above bill.

LEAVING FOR THE WEST

Mr. Louis Ingram leaving in the Course of a Week.

An enjoyable and informal little banquet was held at the Boston Cafe, on Thursday evening, when a number of friends of Mr. Louis Ingram gathered together to bid him farewell on the eve of his departure for the west.

Mr. Ingram leaves for Calgary on April 16, and the announcement of his departure from the city will occasion many regrets from a wide circle of friends. During the past twelve months he has been an active and energetic member of the reportorial staff of the Daily Review, and while in that capacity he worked indefatigably on behalf of the sporting fraternity of the city. In his going from Peterborough, Mr. Ingram takes with him the best wishes of many friends and associates.

Besides the guest of the evening there were presen S. Cresswell, R. Thompson, H. Cart, S. Saunders, J. Donaldson, W. Sheppard and E. McKeeley.

ALL KINDS OF ROOFING

Felt, Gravel, Iron, Slate, etc.

The above cut illustrates the Barrett 5-ply Felt and Gravel Roofing, which has proved so successful as a durable Weather Protector and stood the test of years.

A Little Talk on Slate Roofs

1. A slate roof adds greatly to the appearance and thereby to the value of the house.
2. The first cost is the only cost.
3. A slate roof lessens rate of insurance.
4. Wood attracts lightning, slate does not.
5. Slate roof will not collect ice and snow as does a shingle roof.
6. Rafters do not require to be any heavier for a slate roof than for a shingle roof.
7. Slate roof cannot rot or corrode and therefore it is positively the only roof which will last for ever.
8. Slate roof may be damaged with water, but is dry in a few minutes, while a wooden roof gets waterlogged, grows worms and drives the dampness into your house.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific Slate Roofs have been used and found satisfactory in every locality.

I am prepared to put on any kind of Roofing required and guarantee good work, estimates given if desired.

"Made-In-Peterborough" Build Up City By Buying Goods Made Here

(Written for The Examiner by Roy Gilray)

It is now a little over a year—March 25th, 1911, to be exact—since the suggestion was first made by an article in these columns to hold a "Made-in-Peterborough" Exhibition for the purpose of booming the industries of our city. Since then the idea has been quietly but surely taking root, and we will soon see the glorious fruitage during the week commencing May 27th, (the date having been moved one week forward owing to the local regiment receiving orders to go into camp June 6th, which will necessitate their using the armouries the week commencing the King's birthday.)

The great majority of citizens have caught on, in fact every one except those who will be benefitted the most. Everywhere you go, particularly if it be into the homes, you will hear the same familiar question: "Well, what are you making for the "Made-in-Peterborough?" I happen to know of one local artist who is contributing a beautiful oil painting, which should bring a large sum of money to help swell the amount necessary to make possible the "Friendly Visitor," who will bring help and hope to those unfortunates suffering from the dread white plague.

In all cases these gifts are given with a glad heart, even one anxious to do his or her share, without any hope of receiving any gain from the expenditure of time and money. The only class in the city who are asked to contribute their mite, with the hope of receiving any profit from the "investment" (this word just fits this class), are the manufacturers; and, strange to say, many of them cannot see the point.

In one of the forms of a city school a little lad appeared shabbily clothed, and seemed to be half starved. Some of the girls with noble hearts went around among the other children, whose parents were in fair circumstances, asking each one to contribute a modest sum to provide the poor little fellow with a decent suit of clothes. Next morning every child appeared, beaming with a happy smile, and bringing their share, some even doing better than promised, all but one, a boy, the son of a rich clothing merchant, who, of all the others interested would be the only one to reap a profit from the sale of the suit. Yet all they could get out of him was, "I cannot see where there is anything in it for me."

This little incident teaches its lesson and clearly indicates the utterly selfish and untenable position taken by those manufacturers who decline to do their share in presenting the products of Peterborough to the public.

In nine cases out of ten the manufacturer who succeeds is the one who takes the public into his confidence and tells them all about the good points of the articles he makes, in other words, the one who advertises. Now there are various ways of advertising. The more common methods are, by the use of billboard space, by the use of the news-paper and magazine, by signs tacked on fences in the country or city, by sending out travelling salesmen with samples, all of which are good, but reach comparatively few people at any one time; and, with the exception of the "drummer" with his samples (the most expensive method of all) there is no display of goods, nothing for the eye to see, therefore, the effect is practically lost, and the products remain unknown.

Whereas by an exhibition of the actual goods manufactured before a vast assembly of people such as will gather during "Carnival Week," beginning May 27th, the great educator, the eye, will be brought into play, and the impressions will last for many years to come, influencing the citizens when making purchases, in the future to insist on receiving only good "Made-in-Peterborough."

It is remarkable the variety of things manufactured in Peterborough.

Take an ordinary everyday occurrence, the establishing of a new home; for building the house Peterborough produces: cement blocks, sewer pipe, brick, lumber, shingles, sash and doors, building hardware, including locks, pumps and brushes; on completion: brooms, carpets, electric meters, electric lights, electric irons, electric heaters, electric motors for washing, furniture, mats, mattresses, pottery, steel ranges; for the "man-of-the-house": tools, including shovels for the garden, boots, woolen fabrics for suits, neckties, etc.; for the wife: blouses, corsets, shoes, cardboard picture matting, elite stationery; for the family: boots and shoes, a carriage, harness, horse clothing, cereals, flour, paper boxes, pork products, patent medicines and chewing gum; for the husband at business: advertising tables, baskets, blank books, barrels, delivery waggon, engine and boiler for power, show cases and stationery then when the family go camping: motor boat, gasoline engine, canoe, sails, waterproof clothing, baskets, camp furniture, ginger beer, soda water, picture post cards, tents and sporting goods. All the goods mentioned above, with the possible exception of the boots and shoes, are manufactured in Peterborough for the "trade" and, of course, there are the retailers who can supply almost anything that can be desired.

Now the manufacture of all these goods represents the employment of a vast amount of labour and capital, to say nothing of the large amount paid out in wages, which, in turn, finds its way to the merchants and people of the city.

To show how important it is to spend our money in the city we have but to consider such a transaction as the purchase of a motor boat.

One man buys both hull and engine from local firms. In all he spends $500. For the hull he pays to the Canoe Company $250, of which $100 goes to the employees in wages, $50 to local lumber merchants for material, $50 for fittings, and $50 represents the profit or interest on the capital necessary to produce such a hull. For the engine he pays $250, of which $100 goes to the machinists in wages, $50 to local moulders for castings, $50 for extra fittings, such as induction coils, carburetor, etc., and $50 as profit or interest on the invested capital.

Of this $500, the $200 wages were spent among our own merchants, $100 were given to our manufacturers for material, $100 remaining as interest on the capital invested, only $100 going outside the city.

Another man bought a boat of the same type and went to Toronto to make the selection. If he did not get taken in on the deal, he at least was guilty of spending his good money (which he made here,) outside the city, helping to build up Toronto at our expense.

Money Spent in Peterborough Means Added Industries.

Think of what it means for a new factory to locate in the city, of the number of people it affects, scattering a golden harvest on all sides. Take the coming of the Quaker Oats Co. as an example. A manufacturing site which lay idle and unproductive for years was disposed of at a good price, the Realty Co. profited by the turn over, the lawyer was enriched by the fees for the deeds he put through, the engineer received a stipend for surveying, the contractors added to their bank accounts for the construction of the mills, the dealers who supplied cement, sand, gravel, lumber, hardware, electric motors, machinery, all came in for their share of gain, while there were required insurance, telephones, electric lights, bags, barrels, stationery, advertising telegrams, and banking accommodation; and the farmers of the adjoining country secured a handy and ready market for their oats.

It would be an interesting study in economics to trace the course of the dollars from the time they left the hands of the Quaker Oats Co. until they finally found a resting place in some savings bank account or perchance in the leg of some stocking.

More Industries Mean More People.

These require more houses, groceries, clothing, doctors, merchants, and finally more products, working around in an endless chain of advantages for every citizen.

Therefore, see that you

Buy Goods "Made-in-Peterborough" to keep the money circulating in the city, for we "need the dough."

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 9

Fodder Supplies Light Throughout The Province

Report From Department of Agriculture on Agricultural Conditions in Ontario—Swine Are Scarcer Than Usual—All Grains of High Value.

SOME DAMAGE TO TREES

The following bulletin regarding agricultural conditions in Ontario on April 1st, may be of interest to many readers:

Fall Wheat and Clover.

These crops were protected against the intense cold of midwinter by a heavy covering of snow, much of which still lay on the land at the end of March. This has made it difficult for correspondents to report definitely regarding their present state, but the opinion most frequently expressed was that both fall wheat and clover would come from under the snow in practically the same condition in which they entered. It was pointed out, however, that the trying weather of April, with its alternate thawing and freezing, was yet to be met with before these crops reached the new growing season.

Fruit Trees.

Until the buds begin to swell it will be too early to speak definitely regarding the effect of the severe winter upon orchards. There are, however, a few reports of injury to peaches and other tender fruit trees on account of the very low temperatures of January and February, although the most serious injury from that cause as yet apparent has been the splitting of a number of apple trees. On the other hand, so far no damage from sleet storms has been sustained by orchards. Cotton-tail rabbits and mice are reported as doing considerable injury to young fruit trees.

Live Stock — The unusual length and severity of the winter, the shortage of fodder supplies, and the great lack of bedding materials, have been most trying to live stock. Notwithstanding these drawbacks the general condition of the various classes of farm animals may be fairly summarized as being rather on the lean side but healthy.

Horses, on account of their high value, have received more attention than any other class of live stock, especially in the case of working horses, which are, as a rule, in fine shape. Outside of a few mild cases of distemper no disease has been reported.

Cattle are also in good general health, considering that most of them have had but little more than a maintenance ration. Fat cattle are rather scarce, and there are not as many store cattle as usual, and neither are up to the average in quality, owing to the paucity of fodder supplies.

Sheep are comparatively few, but are in good condition, and early lambs are coming on nicely.

Swine are scarcer than usual at this time of year, and appear to have suffered more than other live stock from the long confinement of the hard winter. Early litters are not doing as well as usual. The scarcity and high prices of feed, and dissatisfaction with the market prices for hogs, are given as the reasons for the recent falling off in numbers.

Fodder Supplies.—All kinds of fodder supplies are low, taking the Province over—except in some eastern counties—and careful feeding must be practised until live stock can be turned upon the grass. While a few correspondents report a surplus of hay, others speak of having to buy from outside points at stiff prices. All classes of grains are also scarce and high in value. Straw was never more appreciated; it has been scarce for feeding and almost impossible to get for bedding. Roots have been in fair supply, and so has corn, which has been largely used both as ensilage and [illegible]

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years, and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

RICHARD HALL & SON

A Three Days' Convention

Commenced Yesterday Morning at the Gospel Hall

The three days' Christian Convention in the Gospel Hall commenced yesterday morning with breakfast in the hall at 9 o'clock. There were about one hundred delegates present, and at 10.30 Mr. J. James, publisher of "The Local Aspect of the Assembly," delivered an eloquent address on justification and substitution, which was greatly appreciated. After dinner, which was served in the hall at 12 o'clock, a song service of one hour was held. This was followed at 3 o'clock by an able address on "God's Will, Our Will and the Will of the People," by Mr. C. J. Stevens, of Toronto. Mr. James also spoke at this service. The crowning meeting of the day, however, was that held in the evening. After a brief song service Messrs Harry Peer, of Toronto; G. Nunn, of Hamilton, and D. Bates, of Toronto, spoke on appropriate subjects, and the meeting closed at 9.30.

The convention continued this morning by breakfast, followed by a Bible reading on the second coming of Christ. At 10.30 a meeting was held on prayer and ministry, and at 3 p.m. on ministry of the world. The closing meeting will be held at 8 o'clock to-night, when a Gospel song service will be held.

To-morrow (Sunday), at 10.30, the celebration of the Lord's Supper will take place. At 3 p.m. the subject will be prayer, praise and ministry, and at 7 p.m. a Gospel meeting will be held. If the weather permits open-air meetings will be held, both in the afternoon and evening previous to the regular meetings.

Through The Chinese Trouble

Rev. H. D. Robertson Will Give an Address at Murray Street Church To-morrow Night

There will be a service of unusual interest at the Murray St. Baptist Church to-morrow evening, when Rev. Harold Robertson, B.A., will occupy the pulpit. It will be remembered that Mr. Robertson left for China five years ago with his bride, who was the daughter of Mrs. Hunter, of Peterborough. He passed through the recent rebellion, and was shut up in the city of Chengtu, and travelled a thousand miles through the country, at times under the fire of the rebels. He reached Peterborough on February 20th, and this will be his first address in this city. No doubt the church will be crowded to-morrow evening.

WHY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MME. DUFAULT'S ILLS

She Had Diabetes, Sciatica, Backache and Headache, but Found Speedy Relief in the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

ST. BONIFACE, MAN., APRIL 5. (Special)—After suffering for three years from a complication of diseases Madame Old. Dufault, of 84 Victoria street, this city, is once more in perfect health and Dodd's Kidney Pills are credited with another splendid cure. Speaking of her cure, Madame Dufault says:

"Yes, I am again a well woman, and I thank Dodd's Kidney Pills for it. I suffered for three years and I may say I had pains all over my body. I had sciatica, neuralgia and diabetes. My back ached, and I had pains in my head. I was nervous and tired all the time; there were dark circles around my eyes which were also puffed and swollen, and heart fluttering added to my troubles.

"But when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills I soon began to get better. I took thirteen boxes in all, and I think they are a grand medicine."

Every one of Madame Dufault's ailments is a direct result of diseased kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills so quickly cured them all.

"SPECIAL"

To the members L.O.L. No. 457 for a Special Meeting called on Tuesday, April 9th, for giving members of the Lodge degrees and also a visit from the organizer, Bro. McCartney.

SAYS THE BOARD DID NOT CHOOSE THE SITE HASTILY

Mr. John Crane, Chairman of the Board of Education, Writes to Mr. Wm. Scott Explaining the Matter of the East City School Site.

In connection with the resolution recently passed by a citizens' meeting in East City in regard to the new school site, Mr. John Crane, chairman of the Board of Education, has sent the following letter to Mr. Wm. Scott, East City:

Peterborough, Ont., 4th April, 1912.
Wm. Scott, Esq., Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your recent communication to the board, setting forth a resolution passed at a meeting of the East City ratepayers in opposition to the board's selection of a site for the new public school.

In this connection I would point out that the board has not come to a decision hastily—the matter of a site has been in the hands of a competent committee for upwards of six months—all the facts have been carefully considered, and any objection now raised has been known and carefully dealt with by the committee before reporting to the board.

You will understand that, while the school is principally for the benefit of the East City, the board is acting for, and with the funds of, the entire city, and are called upon to act in the best interests of the city at large, having, by virtue of its position, an intimate knowledge of existing conditions.

The board, however, has no desire to act arbitrarily, but its action in this case is supported by a consistent grasp of the whole situation.

It is the policy of the board to supply the East City with a complete school capable of caring for a child in the kindergarten and through up to the entrance—with provision for manual training and domestic science. This will require a school of eleven or twelve rooms, and to those who regard the board as too optimistic, I would point out that even at present eight rooms are required.

It is apparent that the growth in that section of the city must be to the north, bringing the new site as near a central position as could be wished for.

It would be folly on the part of the board to attempt to put a large school on the present site, which, even with an expenditure of six to seven thousand dollars, would only give about two acres, and to this expenditure must be added the value of the present property, which would make the old site costing at least $15,000. On the other hand, the new site, at a cost of $3,800, gives six acres in a dry, healthy position, affording ample room for play ground

The board feels that past experience justifies this site—at the South Central School the children play on the street — at the Queen Alexandra School the same is the case—all as a result of a short-sighted policy in years gone by. The city of Toronto is only now awakening to the fact that study in the school room is but a part of a child's education, and are spending thousands of dollars in acquiring large grounds. The school premises and grounds, in which a child spends the larger portion of its young life, must afford as much provision for healthy recreation as possible, and this cannot be done unless ample ground is provided for. The board are agreed as to the wisdom of their action and regret if the East City citizens are not a unit in supporting it.

The land has been purchased—plans and specifications prepared, based on the requirements of the site, these negotiations covered a period of six months at least, and were carried on with the fullest publicity without drawing a word of opposition from East City, although the papers reported from time to time the board's doings in the matter. I am confident that, upon the completion of the school, you will all come to agree that a wise choice was made.—Yours truly,

JOHN CRANE, Chairman.

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF PETERBOROUGH "FEDERATION"

Mr. Burnham, M.P., Makes Explanatory Address---Other Speakers.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Protestant Federation Association was held in the Sons of England Hall on the regular meeting night, the first Friday of the month. There were about 100 or 115 present.

Alderman Johnston occupied the chair and explained to those who were not present at the previous meeting, the dissatisfaction that existed in the Association over Mr. Burnham's vote on the Ne Temere bill at the recent session of Parliament, and as Mr. Burnham was present, he would call upon him to explain.

Mr. Burnham, in a carefully prepared address, lasting over an hour, by the aid of a big sheaf of notes and some Catholic publications, as presumable "terrible examples," made his defence. He went into an explanation of the big work he had done in order to learn the parliamentary game, and he led his hearers to believe, that he worked in their interests from seven in the morning till sometimes, four o'clock the next morning, forgetting to tell his hearers, that an early morning, sitting of parliament was a very rare occurrence. He was studying the rules of the House, and loaded up his hearers with fairy stories of how Mr. Borden had coached him so that he would not put his foot in it every time he spoke, In caucus he learned that every member was expected to vote according to his conscience, and in the interests of his constituents, but with the understanding that he was expected to vote with his party. Mr. Burnham explained that when Mr. Lancaster's bill to abolish the Ne Temere decree came up, some of the members of parliament went to Mr. Lancaster, who was in the chamber, and he refused to come out, to talk over the bill, and he refused to come out till he (Mr. Burnham) persuaded him to come out into the lobby. There the bill was discussed Meanwhile Mr. Burnham said there was some talk going on in the House about the bill, while he (Mr. Burnham) and Mr. Lancaster and two or three others, were discussing the way of manipulating the bill. It was understood that the bill was to be pressed by Mr. Lancaster, but voted down by the Conservative members. Mr. Burnham said he held in his hand an envelope containing the notes of the Premier's speech on the bill. He was proud of that envelope. He had spent $37 in having the speech printed and sent to the people of Peterborough, so that they would know the position of the premier. He had voted against Mr. Lancaster's bill because it did not go far enough. Now, the whole matter would be submitted to the Supreme court, and the decision would be soon given and a bill could be founded upon it that would wipe out the Pope and the Roman Catholic church in regard to the marriage matter. After a speech, inveighing against Rome by a foreign gentleman, Rev. Mr. Cragg spoke. He said he had not been pleased with Mr. Burnham's vote, but after he had heard his defence, he was satisfied. They would now get a better bill and check Rome in Canada.

Mr. Johnston at this point, proposed to send the Orange Sentinel to all the Protestant ministers of the city and it might not do any harm to send it to "the gentlemen on the hill."

Rev. Mr. Riddiford said he had merely dropped into hear Mr. Burnham's explanation and hoped it would be for the best. He was in favour of one flag and one school.

The whole gist of Mr. Burnham's explanation, which apparently mollified those anxious to believe him was that the Lancaster bill against Ne Temere was a "frame up" and was to be voted down, on the plea that it did not go far enough and that a fuller case could be submitted to the Supreme court. Conversation after the meeting showed that Mr. Burnham's excuses were regarded by many as very thin.

SHE QUIT

And Much Good Came From It.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did a woman of Apple Creek, O. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not quit drinking it, even if it took my life, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervouse prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to be around at all. Had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. I felt as though I was liable to die any time.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally, one day, it came over me and I asked myself what is the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee, and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum which I like better than I liked the old coffee. One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework and have done a great deal besides.

"My sister-in-law, who visited me this summer, had been an invalid for some time, much as I was. I got her to quit coffee and drink Postum. She gained five pounds in three weeks, and I never saw such a change in anyone's health."

"There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The Death Of Mr. J. Hilton

Well Known Resident of Havelock Has Passed Away

HAVELOCK, ONT., APRIL 5.—Mr. J. Hilton, an old and well-respected resident of this place, passed away Friday morning in the 64th year of his age.

For a number of years the deceased had been in very poor health, although his death was not unexpected, it came very suddenly.

Mr. Hilton, for years, was an active member of the Methodist church, and his untiring services won the love and admiration of those who knew him. He leaves to mourn his loss two sons and two daughters, Mrs W. J. McMillen of Round Lake, J. W. Hilton of Norwood, F. S. Hilton of Havelock, and Miss Annie of Peterborough.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family.

NORWOOD 24TH OF MAY CELEBRATION.

Games and Sports Under Auspices of Band and Citizens.

Arrangements are being made to hold a grand celebration at Norwood on May 24th, under the auspices of the band and citizens. The day's programme will include games and athletic sports of all kinds, while an excellent concert will also likely be put on in the hall that evening.—Register.

The Toppy, Tasty Toast

Food science has taught us that there is much body-building nutriment in the whole wheat grain which we do not get in white flour. The only question is how to make the whole wheat grain digestible. That problem has been solved in the making of the shredded whole wheat wafer.

It is the whole wheat, steam-cooked shredded, compressed into a wafer, and baked—the maximum of nutriment in smallest bulk. Many people prefer it to ordinary bread toast. Heated in the oven to restore its crispness it is delicious for luncheon, or for any meal, with butter, potted cheese or marmalades.

EASTER MARKET HAD A POOR ATTENDANCE

Country Roads in Bad Condition Kept Many Farmers at Home

PRICES HELD FIRMLY

High prices, few farmers, many buyers, cheap oranges and a bargain in patent medicines, were a few of the features of this morning's market. Butter was firm at from 27 to 30c, and eggs held their own at 22c.

The breaking up of the country roads was the cause of the slim attendance of farmers and a large number of those who did come used the railways. They stated that the bottom had fallen out of the roads and that travelling was next to impossible in many places and will likely remain so until the bulk of the snow disappears.

SHORTAGE OF EGGS

The stores reported a shortage of eggs and wholesale shippers stated that there was a scarcity owing to the fact that farmers were holding their supplies because of the conditions in the country. The price on the market was the same as that in the stores to-day.

There was some poultry but not enough to meet the holiday demand. Turkeys of an ancient vintage were offered at prices varying according to size, some going as high as $3.50. Chickens or hens brought $1 each, although there were some sold at $1.25 a pair.

On the outside there were wide gaps in the places usually occupied by rows of farmers' wagons and the small quantity of produce offered was hardly worthy of mention.

The following prices were charged:
Butter per lb., 27 to 30c.
Eggs per dozen, 25c.
Turkeys each, $2.50 to $3.50.
Chickens, each ,$1.00.
Live hogs, $8.75.
Dressed hogs, $9.75.

HAIR HEALTH

If You Have Scalp or Hair Trouble, Accept This Offer.

When we promise your money back for the mere asking if Rexall's "93" Hair Tonic does not do as we claim it will, you certainly have no reason for even hesitating to try it. We do not ask you to obligate your self in any way.

We could not afford to so strongly endorse Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and continue to sell it as we do, if it did not do all we claim. Should our enthusiasm carry us away, and Rexall "93" Hair Tonic not give entire satisfaction to the users, they would lose faith in us and our statements, and in consequence our business prestige would suffer.

Therefore, when we assure you that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will promptly eradicate dandruff, stimulate hair growth and prevent premature baldness, you may rest assured we know what we are talking about.

We honestly believe that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will do more than any other human agency toward restoring hair growth and hair health. It is not greasy and will not gum the scalp or hair or cause permanent stain. It is as pleasant to use as pure cold water. It comes in two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain it only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid & Jury.

SERVICE WAS WELL ATTENDED

Good Friday Gathering in the Armouries Yesterday

The service in the armouries yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Ministerial Association was a most interesting and helpful devotional gathering. There was a large and representative attendance which took part heartily in the service. Rev Canon Davidson presided in the unavoidable absence of the president of the Ministerial Association. The band of the Salvation Army was in attendance, and led the singing of well known hymns, their splendid playing being much appreciated.

Mr. G. W. Mulligan sang "There is a green hill far away," in excellent voice. Inspiring addresses were delivered by Rev. Robert Pogue, of St. Paul's, Rev. J. Rollins, of St. Andrew's, and Rev. F. J. Sawers, of St. Luke's.

In Dread Of Croup

The inexperienced mother is always in dread of croup. There is seldom any warning until the child awakens at midnight with the hard, metallic cough and gasps frantically for breath.

There is no time to send for a doctor, no time to go to the drug store, even; relief must be obtained at once. If you are not so fortunate as to have Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, cause the child to vomit with a spoonful of warm lard or by tickling the throat with the finegr.

Then get Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine so as to prevent the more serious attack which usually comes the second night. This treatment is wonderfully effective for croup, bronchitis and colds in the throat or chest. Mothers who make a practice of always keeping it in the house find that they can depend on it in case of emergency.

Many Absentees From Work

Following the Holiday Quite a Number Added Saturday Morning

Whether it was spring fever, the holiday spirit, or ordinary laziness that was responsible for the large number of absentees from the factories this morning is not known, but the fact remains that the usual number of punches were not made in the time clocks, nor were checks lifted where that system prevails. It is a sad fact, but a true one, that not a few, were probably looking for an "eye-opener" this morning when the trusty alarm should have rang. Good Friday drunks straggled home in every direction from the centre of the city yesterday afternoon, an indication that the event commemorated by the occasion was entirely lost to them. All the factories were short of hands this morning and these employing the most, had of course, the largest number of absentees.

USE AND OCCUPANCY INSURANCE

Are you conducting a mercantile or manufacturing business? Have you insured against loss of profits and standing charges should a fire come along? This is known as "Use and Occupancy" insurance and is a very necessary protection. Enquire about it from an agent of the Manitoba Assurance Company, which makes a specialty of this form of insurance. It is not expensive and it will pay you well in case of loss. Agent, Davis Thompson Co., Ltd.

BODY WAS RECOVERED

Messrs. Comstock's undertaking establishment and afterwards conveyed by this morning's 1.01 a.m. C.P.R. train to Sussex, N.B., where interment will take place. Mr. R. B. Rodgers, father-in-law of the deceased, was in charge of the body.

The late Mr. Fairweather, who was a native of New Brunswick, was twenty-eight years old. He was a member of St. John's congregation and had, whilst in this city, made many friends. A wife and infant child survive him.

A number of the officers of the 57th Reg., accompanied the body to the station.

RAILWAY NOTES

It has been announced that the Grand Trunk Railway Co has decided to raise the wages of the telegraph operators throughout its system. The reason given for the change, which will come into effect immediately, is that many operators that work on Sunday have not been receiving extra pay. In the future, additional remuneration will be given for Sunday work as well as the regular salary for the other six days, and in most cases the change will result in a substantial increase in the monthly wages.

On March 27th, the ratepayers of Port Colbourne, Ont., will be asked to vote on a by-law fixing the assessment on all Grand Trunk property in that town at $16,000 for a period of 20 years and also giving the company permission to close two streets and to move two others so as to allow for the construction of a large number of switches for yard accommodation. In return the railway agrees to build a new passenger depot and freight shed there inside of two years and to open up Secord street.

Latest reports from the Rocky Mountain section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway show that track has been laid on the various sections as follows:

	Track Laid	Length of Section
Wolf Creek to Athabacka River	100 miles	100 miles
Yellowhead Pass to Tete Jaune Cache	58.5 miles	79 miles
Aldermore to Copper River	36 miles	140 miles
Copper River to Prince Rupert	100 miles	100 miles

Using Sleighs and Waggons

Snow Deep on Country Roads Yet—Causes Trouble

Only the farmers fully realize the conditions of the country roads, which are in that transition stage resulting from winter's lingering in the lap of spring. A Springville woman began to drive to the city this morning with a basket of eggs, but had only covered a short distance when she was forced to leave the conveyance and walk the rest of the way.

At lunch to-day a farmer stated that he used a sleigh to reach the city's suburbs and borrowed a waggon to complete the trip. Some were not so fortunate and had to drive their sleighs over the bare roads of the city. Some of the milkmen are using the double shift, that is they employ a sleigh to bring them to the boundary and the delivery in the city is made on wheels. The roads were firm to less than a week ago, but the past three or four days of sun and April winds have played havoc with the beautiful, as it was called a month ago.

MAPLE SYRUP SOLD AT 45c A QUART

One Can Was the Finest of the Offering on the Market.

The first maple syrup of the season was sold on the market this morning at 45 cents a quart. Those who considered themselves worthy judges of the quality of syrup, stated that it was thin and did not look inviting. At any rate, the big dairy can was soon emptied. While syrup may be adulterated and given a thin, watery appearance, it is also a fact that pure maple syrup may have almost the same appearance. The dark colour of former days and the thick appearance are not proofs of quality in these days of modern evaporators. Science has even entered the maple syrup field, although it may not have reached the bushes in this country.

ANOTHER BIG LEAD—THIS TIME IN FOOD PRODUCTS

Old methods so quickly give place to new that few women of to-day ever stop to think how much they owe to modern science and invention for the ease and economy with which they are enabled to prepare some particularly appetising dish. A case in point is Oxo cubes. It was not an easy task, even for the Liebig Company, with all their magnificent equipment, to combine all the rich extractives and nourishing protein of beef in one little cube half-an-inch square. It was only after prolonged experiment that they were able to offer the people of Canada their new food-invention. It was a big leap to make. As big a leap as the motor car was from the bicycle, or the aeroplane is from the balloon. It meant that the old-fashioned Beef-Extract and Fluid-beef, with their cumbersome jars and bottles, were at once wiped off the slate so far as convenience, handiness, and all the needs of the modern housewife are concerned. Oxo Cubes took their place. What the Extract and Fluid-beef could be, Oxo Cubes can do better, and with less time, trouble and expense. For home, camp, and invalid cookery Oxo Cubes are excellent. And as a pick-me-up in Summer and Winter Oxo Cubes are second to none. Oxo Cubes are made from the Liebig Company's own cattle, which roam in countless herds over their 5,000,000 acres of splendid pasturage. They are never housed under roofs, but live in the sunshine and open air all their lives, and are subject to constant veterinary inspection.

ANNIVERSARY OF KNOX CHURCH

The fifth anniversary of Knox Church will be celebrated on April 14th when the Rev. Thos. Mitchell of London, Ont., will preach at both morning and evening services. Rev. Mr. Mitchell has never visited Peterborough before and a very striking characterisation precedes him. He is regarded as the Hugh Black of Canada, and is noted for a most winning personality. He has recently declined a call to St. John's church, Hamilton. On Monday evening, Rev. A. Logan Geggie, of Parkdale, Toronto, most favourably known in Peterborough, will attend the congregational rally and concert and give an address. A large number of tickets have already been sold, indicating a crowded lecture hall.

35 Cents for a 2-Cent Stamp.

Mrs. F. E. Curnah, of Windsor, Ont., offers to send a package of the Orange Lily treatment absolutely free to every sick and ailing woman who will write for it, per her ad, in this issue on page two. As this package is worth 35c., it indicated a confidence in the merits of the remedy that is certain to prove attractive.

POULTRY FANCIERS MEET

The Peterborough Poultry Association held a very instructive meeting on Thursday evening in their quarters at the old labor hall. An interesting paper was read by Mr. Packenham on the subject of "Raising Early Chicks." The article which was contributed by Mr. J. H. Callender, dealt exhaustively with the care of the young chick from the incubator stage until the time it was ready for market. To the representative gathering of poultry fanciers who were present the meeting proved a source of interest.

A number of fowl of the Plymouth Rock and Wyandotte species were on exhibition.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

WITH EDGED TOOLS.

"With Edged Tools," Henry Seton Merriman's famous book play, paid a return visit to the Grand Opera House on Thursday night and proved as charming as when seen here last autumn. The comment was made at the time of their previous visit that no better acting had been seen here than that of the all-star English cast, which interpreted this play, and there is no reason for changing that opinion after seeing the admirable performance given by Mr. Hamilton Deane, Miss Marie Leonhard, and their associates on Thursday night. Unfortunately the audience was not large, but the English players did not allow this to interfere with their work, which was clean-cut and convincing throughout. Mr. Deane was admirable as Jack Meredith. Mr. Richard Hicks' delineation of Sir John Meredith was a histrionic gem, and Miss Leonhard was as charming as ever, as Jocelyn. The other members of the Company did full justice to their parts and altogether the presentation was most enjoyable.

DAVID GARRICK.

For the first time in years that admirable play "David Garrick" was presented at the Grand Opera House at matinee and evening performances by a capable and well-balanced company, headed by Mr. Clifton Mallory. There were two large audiences present and the production met with much favour. Mr. Mallory gave a creditable performance in the title role, and the supporting company was adequate. The costumes and scenic investitures left nothing to be desired. Mr. Mallory and his company are at the Grand again this evening in "Our Minister."

OBITUARY

WINIFRED MARJORY FRENCH.

Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold French of 348 Stewart street, yesterday and claimed their infant daughter, Winifred Marjory, aged four months.

The funeral took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. ARMANDA EMBERY.

The death occurred at 295 McDonnell street, yesterday morning, of Mrs. Armanda Embery, aged seventy-four years.

The deceased lady, who was born in Roslin, came from Belleville about two years ago. She had been ailing for some time.

The late Mrs. Embery is survived by one daughter, Beatrice of Winnipeg, and one son, Thomas, of Peterborough.

The remains were conveyed to Belleville by the 1.50 p.m. train yesterday.

ROBERT HAY

The many friends in Peterborough of Mr. Robert Hay, will regret to hear of his demise, which took place on Thursday evening last.

The deceased gentleman, who was 72 years of age, had been a resident of Peterborough for many years.

Two sons and one daughter survive him, namely Robert Hay, Jr., formerly accountant in Mr. Poussette's office, Mr. Gus. L. Hay, who left two weeks ago for the west, and Mrs. Captain J. Schneider of Saskatoon.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 to-day at the Little Lake cemetery, the Rev. Canon Davidson officiating.

THOMAS CASEY.

A very sad death occurred at Lowell, Mass., on March 29th, when Mr. Thomas Casey, formerly of this city, brother of Mr. David Casey of Otonabee, passed to his eternal rest. Mr. Casey spent his boyhood days in Peterborough and had a host of friends who will be much grieved to hear of his death. He is survived by his father and four brothers, James, John, Willie and Dave; also two sisters, Mrs. A. Wetherhead and Sister Marcella of North Bay.

MAYOR IS BACK

Pleased With the Passing of the City's Power Bill.

Mayor Bradburn and Mr. S. R. Armstrong are home after a rather stormy session before the Private Bills committee in connection with the City's Power Bill. Mayor Bradburn expressed himself as pleased with the victory, especially in view of the opposition that was met with. The city is given the right to expropriate the distributing plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company in this city, without the necessity of taking over the Street Railway or Gas Works. Prominent lawyers represented the company, and although the bill was practically thrown out on Tuesday, it sailed through on Thursday with the former opposition less marked.

COATED TONGUE HEADACHE
DIZZY SPELLS

Your overworked stomach is on strike. It refuses to secrete pepsin enough to act upon the food. Refuses also to secrete acid enough to enable the peptic secretion to do its work.

What's the result?—dyspepsia, headache, sick all over.

Give to the stomach the assistance it requires—or in other words try Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which cure more weak stomachs than any other medicine you know of.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills put the kind of life into a weak stomach that enables it to digest and assimilate all kinds of food.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills
Cured Mr. William Martin, a Well-Known Lumberman in Parry Sound.

"I consider that Dr. Hamilton's Pills make the best all round medicine. My stomach got disordered and all kinds of complications set in. My blood grew thin, my color got pale, and I had the worst kind of headaches. The food I ate all disagreed with me and I was constantly bilious and suffering from acute dyspepsia. A wonderful change took place when I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they gave me appetite and strong digestion. I had no more bad dreams, no sick stomach or headache. I was in fact like a new man, and will always recommend and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are sure to benefit at once. Try them, 25c per box, at all dealers, and insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, in yellow boxes only.

A MORAL QUESTION AT THE GRAND

On Monday, April 8th, matinee and evening of next week, Miss Constance Crawley will present the patrons of the Grand Opera House, the society drama "A Moral Question," the play she produced at the Hackett Theatre, New York. Her company will be headed by Arthur Maude as "Mr. Daventry," and includes nine other players. In "Mrs. Daventry" Miss Crawley has a part after her own heart, one she is eminently suited for, as Henry Arthur Jones realised when he offered her "Mrs. Dane" in "Mrs. Jane's defence," and theatregoers will revel in the smart epigrams and dramatic situations in which the play abounds. "The Best of Society" is well remembered by Peterborough people, and in the "Moral Question" the scenes are no less stirring than in that fine play. The plot is strong, the situations dramatic and unusual, and the lines full of the most brilliant epigrams.

ANNUAL MEETING PETERBORO GUN CLUB

Organization is in Better Shape Than Ever With the Largest Number of Members in its History---Several Events Were Pulled Off at the Exhibition Grounds Yesterday

A most enthusiastic meeting of the Peterborough Gun Club was held on Wednesday evening last, in Mr. C. B. Routley's store, and the following officers were elected for the coming season:

President—L. Hall.
Captain—C. Leck.
Sec.-Treasurer—C. Wood.

The Club is in a good financial condition, with the largest membership of its existence. Arrangements will be made to meet other Clubs of the district and a busy summer is looked forward to. The Secretary has received a splendid trophy, "A Nobel's Gun Case," donated by the Nobel's Explosives Co., and presented by the Dominion Cartridge Co. of Montreal, which will be competed for by the members during the months of May, June, July, and August. Any member competing must shoot at least once each month. The scores of the first shoot in the month being recorded. However, should a member be unable to attend the first shoot, his score may be taken at the next. This is a valuable trophy and should encourage the enthusiasm of the members. It is on exhibition and may be seen in Wm. Lech & Son's fur store, George street. Regular shoots will be held on the first and third Thursdays of each month, commencing on Thursday, April 18th. The hour will be announced later. Another meeting of the Club will be held on Tuesday, April 16th. The opening shoot of the season was held yesterday afternoon, with twelve members present. Shoting at 25 birds each, the scores were:

H. C. Hill 21, C. Gutterson 16, J. Harris 14, C. James 13, H. Routley 13, C. Wood 13, C. Lech 12, H. Cook 10, J. B. Collins 8, C. Mills 6, M. Miller 2.

Then followd a 10-bird sweepstake—H. C. Hill 9, C. Wood 9, C. Gutterson 8, J. Harris 8, L. Hall 7, H. Cook 6, C. Mills 5, H. Routley 3, C. Lech 2.

In shooting off the ties, Mr. H. C. Hill took first, C. Wood, second; J. Harris, third.

The next event was a sweepstake at 5 doubles—H. C. Hill 6, H. Cook 5, C. Wood 5, C. Gutterson 4, J. Harris 4, L. Hall 2. H. C. Hill first in shooting off the ties. H. Cook second, C. Wood third.

HAS A NEW NAME

West End A. C. Will be Known as Marlboro Club in Future

The West-End Athletic Club will henceforth be known as the Marlboro Club. At their regular meeting held on Wednesday night, this change was decided upon by the members. The old name was somewhat misleading, as it led many to believe that only those residing in the west end of the city were eligible for membership, hence the decision to change. The club's colours will remain the same, yellow and black.

CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE

The game between the Eko Club and the Nemos last night proved to be the most strenuous game of the league so far this season. It was a case of the veterans against the youngsters and from beginning to end the score was always close. The Ekos were weakened considerably by th absence of two of their best men, Elliott and F. Turner, although credit must be given to the men who replaced them for the fine game that they put up. Roy Turner and D. Loucks filled the places made vacant by the regulars. The half time score showed the Ekos leading by 12 points to 11 and right at the start of the second half forged further ahead but the Nemos by some good shooting forged to the front and won by a score of 34 to 27. Teams—Ekos—Canniff and Hall, forwards; R. Turner centre; Fleming and Loucks, defence. Nemos—Long and Howden forwards; Hill centre; Throop and Gilbert, defence; Referee, J. J. Thompson.

Next Tuesday night should see the very best game of the season when the Ekos and Brownies meet. Only one point separated these two teams the last time they met and as both teams are tied for the league leadership it looks like the league championship for the winner of Tuesday's game. The game will be called at 8.30 sharp.

NEWS FROM THE LEAGUE CIRCUIT

LONDON, ONT., APRIL 4.— The announcement in this morning's Globe that the London Baseball Club fully expected to sign Frank Bowerman, the former Giant, was received with great interest here to-day. To-night the deal was completed and London will have as manager a major league man who is confidently expected to make this city a most important baseball town. Last year the club had a successful initiation in the Canadian League, and even, aside from the prize secured to-day, the outlook is for a bigger summer, upwards of twenty promising players having been signed. Bowerman will be an acquisition not only to the London team but to the league. He is in good form and expects to equal his work with the Kansas City team of last summer.

When he was with New York he and Christy Mathewson were one of the Giants' greatest batteries. He left New York for Boston, but only remained there a short time, completing about ten years' experience with National Leauge teams. After a short retirement he re-entered baseball last season, making a splendid record in Kansas City. His home is in Romeo, Mich., and the proximity of London made the offer here attractive. U. S. Consul F. C. Buzzell, who is Secretary of the London Baseball Club, comes from Romeo, and it was through him that Bowerman was secured. The other five owners of the London franchise are Messrs. Geo. O'Neill, S. Stevely, H. T. Reason, T. Gillean and A. E. Somerville, and they are out to make baseball a big success in London. They had Bowerman look over the diamond to-day and he declares Tecumseh Park an ideal home-lot. As soon as the weather permits some important improvements will be begun and about the end of April most of the team will have reported here. The new manager is strong on developing young players and as they will have the advantage of his experience, it is expected that he will draw many a promising boy into the game. While managing the London team he will catch and play first base.

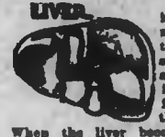
Hamilton Spectator: Three of the St. Thomas aldermen attended the baseball meeting held in that city yesterday, one of the city fathers being the chairman of the street railway committee, the street railway being owned and maintained by the city. This gentleman was very enthusiastic over baseball, and it was his opinion that the ball club was a valuable asset to the city. "You know," he said, "that the street railway always shows a deficit, but it is a fact that last year this deficit was just $2,000 less than it has ever been before and I attribute this directly to the presence of the ball club." So enthusiastic are the St. Thomas' aldermen that they are already planning improvements on the ball park, which is owned by the city, and have promised additional grandstand accommodation in time for the league opening.

Ottawa Journal: Last year the Canadian league was a Class D league. This year it is a Class C, and next season it may be a Class B. This would be the quickest advance ever seen in organised ball. The population required for a Class C league is 200,000, and the Canadian league, with the entrance of Ottawa and Peterborough, has away over that figure. It only needs another fifty or sixty thousand to produce the higher rating and a record in pro. ball. The Ottawa and Peterborough teams are going the right way to increase the interest in the league by getting in the players and not sparing the cash. While some of the other clubs raised a howl at first, they now see that it is the best thing that ever happened to the Canadian league—in fact, but for the two new clubs the league might have gone to smash this season. Now the interest is awakened all over the circuit, and the attendance should be doubled. Next year we'll have that Class B rating and success to a greater measure.

Hamilton Spectator: The Berlin fans have renamed their team and now desire them to be known as the Busy Bees. There is little chance of this however, for Green Sox will stick now that it has the hold. The Peterborough fans are still busily employed selecting a nickname for their club, all of which is waste of time, for the team will receive its name just as soon as they strike the road for the first game away away from home. For instance, it was the desire last year to have the Hamilton club known as the Tigers, yet they were dubbed the Kolts and this still prevails. In London they wanted their team known as the Tecumsehs, but the Cockneys is the accepted title around the circuit.

DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT EFFECTS THE BRAIN LIVER KIDNEYS



Next to the heart, there is no organ of the body more susceptible to an abnormal increase of fatty tissue than the liver. When the liver becomes too fat, its action is impeded, allowing the fat-making foods to make more fat than is needed for normal symmetry. The liver, clogged with excess fat, becomes inactive, and, from disease, the nature of the organ undergoes a change. Constipation, headaches, biliousness and similar local disturbances of the system are not the least of the fat man or woman's troubles, for the rolls and layers of fat on all portions of the body increase, clogging other organs, paving the way to obesity. All this can be avoided, if the proper remedy is resorted to at once. Nothing ever discovered for the removal of fat is so effective as the famous Marmola Prescription. However, from the same high authority came Marmola Prescription Tablets, containing all the elements of this cure, harmless Prescription and offering a more convenient means for reducing to normal weight at the rate of 10 to 16 ozs. a day, without dieting, exercise or resulting wrinkles and flabbiness. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 853 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

April 7, 1912.

(Copyright, 1911, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Appearance of the Risen Lord. (Easter Lesson.)—1 Cor. xv., 1-11.

Golden Text—This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses.—Acts ii., 32.

1. Verses 1-2—How many ideas of facts are absolutely essential to complete "the gospel of Christ?"

2. How much is essential for a sinner to know or believe in order to be saved by Jesus??

3. Is it possible to be saved and yet differ with Paul in some of his doctrines?

4. Verse 3—What is your precise understanding of the phrase "Christ died for our sins?"

5. Verse 4—What is the proof that Christ was crucified and buried?

6. What Old Testament proof is there foretelling that Jesus would be crucified and buried and that this would be essential in order to complete his mission?

7. Verse 5—What are the facts concerning the statement that Cephas saw Jesus after his resurrection from the dead? (See Luke xxiv., 34-36.)

8. When and where was Jesus seen after His resurrection by all the apostles? (See Matt. xxviii., 16; Mark xvi., 14; John xx., 26.)

9. Verse 6—What is the value of Paul's statement as evidence that Jesus was seen after His resurrection by over five hundred brethren at one time?

10. Verse 7—What proof did Jesus give at his various appearances after his resurrection that it was really Himself they saw?

11. Verses 8-8—What are the facts in connection with the appearance of Jesus to Paul?

12. How many recorded times are there that Jesus appeared after His resurrection?

13. How many years after the crucifixion did Paul write this evidence concerning Christ's resurrection?

14. Verses 10-11—What are the reasons which compel belief in Paul's testimony to the resurrection of Jesus?

Lesson for Sunday, April 14, 1912—The Use of the Sabbath.—Mark ii., 23; iii., 6.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

If you would like to have answered any particular question each or any week from "The Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson" by Rev. Dr. Linscott, send in your request to this office, giving the date of the lesson and the number of the question you wish answered. You may select any question except the one indicated that it may be answered in writing by members of the club. Dr Linscott will answer the questions either in these columns or by mail through this office. Don't forget to state what benefit these "Suggestive Questions" are to you. Give your full name and address. Send your letters to The Question Editor of the Examiner.

ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS

The first annual meeting of the stock holders of the Independent Real Estate Company, whose head office is 116 King street west, Toronto, was held last evening in the Hotel National. The shareholders were the guests of Mr. Galbraith, manager of the company, at a banquet at 7 o'clock, and afterwards the business meeting of the company was held in the parlours of the hotel.

Mr. H. P. Kennedy, president of the company, was in the chair.

The President gave a detailed account of the undertakings and successes of the company since its formation one year ago. His report was one which reflects great credit on the business ability of the entire management. The company is in a most flourishing and healthy condition.

The shareholders declare a dividend of 20 per cent. to the stock holders and placed the sum of $6,000 in a reserve fund. It was further decided to issue at once $10,000 Preferred Stock, bearing 7 per cent. interest per annum.

The shareholders elected the following directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. Kennedy, Kidd, Galbraith, Downey and Dr. Neal. Subsequently the directors elected officers as follows:

President—Mr. H. P. Kennedy.
Vice-President—Dr. Neal.
Secretary—Mr. R. F. Downey.
Manager—Mr. Wm. Galbraith.

A resolution was unanimously carried by the shareholders, thanking the Board of Directors for the able manner in which the company's business had been taken care of during the past year.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, said Thomas, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

PETERBORO MAN IS ARRESTED IN LINDSAY

Lindsay Warder: The chief actor at Wednesday morning's police court came from Peterborough. He was a man of many occupations, a cooper, a fire ranger and general all round mechanic. He got drunk on his way to Lindsay and lay down on Lindsay st. to sleep away the alcoholic fumes. Passers-by discovered the unconscious man upon the street and a doctor was called, who pronounced him to be of strong heart.

Chief Chilton was the only one that could be thought of, who could prescribe the proper medicine. The Chief pronounced the disease as one of drunk and incapable, and that he and the patient would consult Magistrate Jackson in the morning.

The good Magistrate said $9.00 and costs, $7.00 in all, would cure the most obstinate case for six months or a year. In default of payment, 21 days with Governor Balfour.

Though the offender said he had but little money left, not even enough to buy a drink, it had no effect and he was advised to take the 11 o'clock train for Peterborough at once which he did.

MORE PLATFORM ACCOMMODATION NEEDED

The extent to which the C. P. R. is patronized by Peterborough people, and their friends was amply demonstrated on Thursday evening, on the arrival of the local. There was an unusually long string of coaches to accommodate the home-coming crowd of Easter week end visitors. The platform was thronged with their friends and the resulting crush was almost a record and served to exemplify the necessity of larger platform accommodation at the C. P. R. It is learned that the C. P. R. intends to increase their platform space and for occasions similar to Easter the work can scarcely be begun too soon. Some of these days, perhaps in the dim future, the station accommodation will even boast of a kissing gallery, where delighted friends will not be hampered and embarassed in their osculatory salutations to friends from whom they have been long separated. The big stations to the south have this provision. It is especially appreciated by bashful beaux, who, before a crowd, are not inclined to be as demonstrative as they would wish.

UNRESERVED AUCTION SALE of 25 Cows

The property of Mr James Stothart, Smith. I have received instructions from Mr James Stothart to sell by Public Auction on his premises West Half Lot 16, 2nd Concession of Smith, on TUESDAY, APRIL 16th, 1912, all the following:—

CATTLE—12 young thoroughbred Holstein Cows, seven of which have just calved, and five due to calve in a few days; 12 Young Grade Cows, coming in early; 1 Holstein Bull Calf, 12 months old; 1 Holstein Bull Calf, 18 months old. SHEEP—13 Young Thoroughbred Oxford Down Ewes, all supposed to be with lamb; One Year-old Ram, thoroughbred.

TERMS—Six month's credit will be given on furnishing approved joint notes. Five per cent. discount will be allowed off for cash.

The above will be sold strictly without any reserve as Mr. Stothart is overstocked with cows on both farms and has selected the above mentioned choice specimens to make up a good sale. Those wishing to avail themselves of good stock will do well to attend this sale as this will certainly prove a rare opportunity.

Pimples So Bad He Was Ashamed

Tried Everything but Did It No Good. One Box of Cuticura Ointment Took Pimples Away.

"About seven years ago pimples broke out all over my face and neck. When they would first come out they would be big and red, then after a while they would turn white, and matter would come out. Sometimes they would itch so I could hardly sleep. I was ashamed to go down street, my face looked so bad. I went to several doctors and got medicine, which did me no good, and bought ointments, salves and patent medicines, but none of them would cure my face and neck. A friend advised me to try Cuticura Ointment. I got one box, and it took the pimples away before I had it all used up. I can say it is a wonderful remedy. Any sufferer who has pimples should use Cuticura Ointment if they want a sure cure. I never had any soap equal to Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Aylmer Mathers, Parkhill, Ont., Dec. 24, 1910.

Sores All Over Baby's Body

"When my baby boy was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt. We tried a great many remedies but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things and doctors too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan 23, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 84 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A., for a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. booklet.

WEDDING BELLS

WEIR—THOMPSON.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Thompson at Lakehurst, Ont., on Wednesday, April 3rd, at 5 o'clock p.m., when their youngest daughter, Mabel, was married to Mr. James Weir, of Saskatoon, fromerly of Lakehurst. The bride, who was attired in a beautiful dress of white tamoline silk and carrying a shower of white carnations, looked charming, as she entered the parlour leaning on her father's arm to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Madge Shaw. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. McCorkindale of Lakefield, assisted by Rev. Mr. Bain of Hall's Bridge.

The bridesmaid, Miss Jennie Weir, cousin of the groom, looked pretty in a dress of all-over embroidery and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. Geo. Weir assisted the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful pearl brooch.

The young people were the recipients of a host of beautiful presents.

After the wedding supper a reception was given, at which about one hundred guests were present. The happy couple left for their future home in Saskatoon, bearing the best wishes of a host of friends and relatives.

WOOD—STENTON.

TORONTO, APRIL 5.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. William Stenton was the scene of a very quiet but pretty event at high noon on Tuesday, when their eldest daughter, Estelle, was united in marriage with Mr. J. Edgar Wood, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. H. G. McAllister of Bloorheim Methodist Church, under an arch of evergreens and carnations tied with white ribbon. Miss Nellie Smith, cousin of the bride, sang "O Perfect Love," after which the bride, wearing a dress of embroidered marquisette with regulation veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a bouquet of white carnations, was given away by her father. Little Miss Jean Stenton, niece of the bride, made a very pretty flower girl dressed in pink silk. After the ceremony, dejeuner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Wood leaving later for their home in Peterborough, the bride travelling in a tailored suit of chiffon broadcloth with tan hat trimmed with roses to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and fob, to the flower girl he gave a gold bracelet, and to the best man a signet ring. Miss Smith and Miss Lillian Stenton each receiving souvenir pins.

THE EASTER PARADE

Fine Weather Will Bring Joy to Feminine Hearts To-morrow

With a friendly smile from the Weather Man to-morrow the annual Easter parade should be a kaleidoscope of colour, a review of fashionable millinery and as some one has termed it, a dream of fair women.

But a peep behind the scenes today would have revealed the other side of the story. Last minute fittings and changes, frettings and worries on the part of those who feared that the Easter suit would not be completed in time and work at high speed will combine to make many a tired milliner and dressmaker tonight, when the last stitch has been made and the last hat carefully boxed and sent away. Some suits will not be finished, for the dressmaker's word is final and even though high prices prevail, a certain amount can be done and beyond that nothing can be attempted. But the worries and the doubts of to-day will be forgotten if Old Sol shines to-morrow. If he fails he is no friend of the fair sex.

TORONTO MYSTERY

Further Particulars of the Murder of Jewish Iron Dealer—His Companion May Die

INQUEST OPENED

Toronto, April 8.—Lured to a lonely spot in rear of the Hydro-electric transform station, near the foot of Strathcan avenue on the pretext of the sale of a carload of scrapiron, Joseph Rosenthal, 133 York street, was murdered Friday night, and Eli Dunkelman, 181 West Richmond street, was so beaten that he is in the General Hospital with a severe fracture of the skull and many dis. The clues in the hands of the police are meagre. The most definite is a description of a tall fair young man, who called at Dunkelman's house on Thursday to tell the old man to go to 205 Strachan avenue at 7 o'clock Friday night, taking with him enough money to purchase the carload of scrapiron.

Lying upon its face with a ten pound cake of concrete resting at the base of the battered skull, the dead body of Joseph Rosenthal was found at 7.15 Saturday morning by John Blythe, H. Hewitt and Patrick Hayden, three employes of the Hydro-Electric Commission. Nearby was a pool of blood which they took to indicate that the body had been dragged by a rope which hung about the neck of the body. This later proved to be the spot where Dunkelman had lain in a semi-conscious state through the night. The police were notified and the body removed to the morgue.

At 8 o'clock Saturday morning Dunkelman staggered up to his own door. He rang the bell and was admitted by his little daughter, who did not know him, so bespattered with blood and mud was he. He had left the house at 6 o'clock Friday night to go with Rosenthal to meet some men who were to sell them a car of scrapiron. Taking with him more than $100 and possibly over $200. Mr. Rosenthal had more than $50 on him.

While in the house waiting to be taken to the hospital, Dunkelman talked incoherently of the assault upon himself and Rosenthal. First he mumbled that three men had set upon them. Then he said that he had fallen from a rig and later that Rosenthal was coming and would tell all about the matter.

The story of the murder begins on Tuesday, when a man giving his name as "Smith" called up Mr. Rosenthal, jr., at his office and asked how he could see his father, as he had some scrapiron to sell him. The son said he would speak to his father. The man called again and twice more that night. He wanted to make an appointment for Wednesday morning at the corner of Bay and Queen streets, but the son said that if he had business to transact with his father he would arrange a meeting at his office.

Wednesday a tall, fair, slim, youngish man called at the home of Mr. Dunkelman and left a note asking him to call at 205 Strachan avenue Friday night. Thursday Dunkelman went to the tailor shop of his son David and asked him to cash a check, saying that he was going to buy some scrapiron and saying that it was too late to get the check cashed, and the men would not want a check, but would have to have the money.

Dunkelman was seen at his office at 6 o'clock Friday night, and was then waiting for Rosenthal to meet him to go to buy some scrap iron. He did not say where they were to go. When Dunkelman did not turn up at his home at 1 o'clock Saturday morning his two sons went to look for him at the foot of Strachan avenue, where they believed that he had gone, but found no traces of either him or Rosenthal.

Dunkelman went through two operations in the hospital on Saturday. These were performed in an endeavor to save his life. The doctors have still a thread of hope that he will recover.

Dunkelman had just bought out a junk business in West Richmond street, and there had been dealings in copper wire which it is now believed may have been Hydro-electric wire, though this was not suspected at the time. It is not yet explained how the large hammer used in the assault and murder and which was the property of the Hydro-electric came into the hands of the murderers.

One of the most surprising things in connection with the matter is the fact that from the hour between seven and eight o'clock Saturday morning Dunkelman, covered with blood and mud, with his clothing torn and his head battered, staggered through more than a mile of the city's most traversed thoroughfare, and yet no one seems to have seen him save a few workmen who noticed him staggering up Strachan avenue and believed him to be drunk.

An inquest was opened at the morgue Saturday afternoon.

FIRE AT NEW TORONTO.

Big Plant of Brown Copper Co. Is Utterly Destroyed.

Toronto, April 8.—Several section of blackened walls are all that remain of the modern plant of the Brown Copper & Brass Milling Co. at New Toronto, as a result of a fire which broke out in the building at 5.15 yesterday morning and did $150,000 damage, while a large crowd of helpless people stood by. A smal stream of water, with hardly any pressure behind it, was the only equipment which the men had to fight. The efforts of a bucket brigade served to create more steam, and the fire covered the building from one end to the other.

When Captain Dunning, one of the nightwatchmen, made his round he noticed that the electric wire coils in the northwest corner of the new wing were in flames. Vainly he tried to quench the blaze with water from the fire buckets, but this method failing, the other watchman was summoned and the fire hose used. Despite this stream of water the fire spread, and the captain turned on the whistle valve for the distress signal.

The workmen, who live in the surrounding houses, turned out and formed a brigade, but the intense heat seemed to almost dry the water before it struck the fire. The whistles on the neighboring factories and on the Grand Trunk roundhouse were also blown, and although hundreds of residents responded, willing to help, nothing could be done owing to the lack of water. A tank containing eight feet of water was all that was obtainable. When this supply was exhausted the flames were left to do their worst.

FLOODS IN ONTARIO

Great Damage Done All Over the Province by the Record Spring Freshets—Many Bridges Gone

RESCUED IN BOATS

London, April 8.—Reports from all over Western Ontario last night tell of floods that have resulted in hundreds of thousands of dollars' loss. At Walkerton there is three feet of water in the main street and the Canadian Pacific bridge has been swept away. Truax lumber mills have had a large part of their stock swept away.

At Brantford the city officials are watching in fear of the dyke breaking, when there would be 1,500 people in West Brantford flooded out. At Galt there was a bad state of affairs last night, the damage being estimated at $100,000. Yesterday morning early a number of homes were flooded out and several invalids had to be taken out in boats. Water street last night was a river for over three-quarters of a mile, and in some places near Galt the river is half a mile wide. The water level is dropping, however.

The Thames at London is high on the south branch, but there is no immediate danger.

At Chatham the water is rising, but is two feet below the highest level at the end of the week. There has been a lot of low land flooded in Kent, but most of the farmers there are prepared for an annual washout and rather look for it.

At Paris there is four feet of water in the Penman mills, which are close to the river. The damage here is particular heavy.

Grand River Rising.

Galt, April 8.—All day yesterday the Grand River rose, until it has exceeded the record of the past twenty-five years. With the bursting of Elora dam a rush of water was precipitated.

As it rose it spread wide over areas on all sides, submerging back gardens and the low lying streets, invading cellars and lower flats, sweeping away buildings, walls and fences, forcing a passage through drains into quarters far remote from the course of the stream, and covering the railway track and the country highways.

The flood spread out over the paved roadway into adjacent foundries and factories. The large premises of Getty & Scott, shoe manufacturers, were visited by the waters, and stock damage estimated at $40,000 was done.

The water is half way to Main street. South on the same street the occupants of riverside residences have to be rescued from the flood by the fire department. All the afternoon boats and rafts were in requisition rescuing people from perilous situations. From Main street down the street is flooded.

The Grand River flood is still increasing in volume and growing in menace. North and South Water street has a depth of two or three feet, blocking access to postoffice, hotel, stores and private residences. Submerged district embraces all lower Main street and extends east to Ainslie street inclusive. Four bridges within the town limits are threatened with destruction. The water has risen twenty-five feet. Damage will reach a hundred thousand dollars with no insurance.

Grave Situation in Guelph.

Guelph, April 8.—The worst flood that has visited Guelph in forty-three years is now to be seen here. The River Speed began to overflow her banks Saturday afternoon and has risen several feet from that time until the present. Two bridges above Goldies' big mill were carried away during Saturday night and the water is several feet deep in the factories of the Taylor-Forbes Co., and the Guelph Carpet Mills Co.

The fire brigade had to be called out during Saturday night to assist in removing people from their homes after the water had surrounded them. Many of the men were taken out of the upstairs windows. Cellars are flooded and the whole southern end and eastern portion of the city is cut off from the rest of the city. The only available means of reaching many houses is by boats, and as the boathouses are also surrounded by water, it is impossible to get any boats. The situation is very grave and there is not much relief in sight.

Rideau Overflows Banks.

Ottawa, April 8.—The Rideau River is overflowing its low banks at Ottawa east and some of the streets and lands are flooded. Lower down in Ottawa blasting has been going on, but it is not known how successful it will be in staying a flood in New Edinburgh or Eastview.

Just below Billing's Bridge, further out of the city and up the river, there is an ice jam, and the water is nearly up to the planking of the roadway, while a huge cake of ice is against the piers of the bridge. It looks dangerous to the safety of the main bridge out of the city, and there is anxiety on the river banks above and below the structure.

Owen Sound In Water's Grip.

Owen Sound, April 8.—Thousands of dollars of damage was done Saturday night and early yesterday morning by the unprecedented freshet. The Sydenham River began to rise during midnight, and, with the heavy rain which was falling, by 3 o'clock had reached the highest point on record. About 4 o'clock two mill dams and the Ninth street bridge were practically demolished. Many pleasure boats were lost.

Heavy Loss at Meaford.

Meaford, April 8.—There has been thousands of dollars damage done here by the waters of the Big Head River. Both of the dams belonging to the Georgian Bay Milling & Power Co. have been swept away and the iron bridge near their flour mill is also gone, and several rods of the street washed away.

Randle's dam and woollen mill, and Todd's Tannery are swept away, and also ten rods of the G.T.R. track, and at present it looks as if the two remaining iron bridges will also go. The property damage is now $100,000 or over.

Bruce County Hard Hit.

Southampton, April 8.—The warm weather of the last few days is causing heavy floods. Two new steel bridges, one in town the other two miles out, erected by Bruce County a year ago at a cost of over $80,000, are destroyed. The Saguean Electric Light & Power Co.'s plant, two miles up the river, is in great danger. Already the race is totally destroyed, and a part of the dam.

Were Rescued In Boats.

Paisley, April 8.—The greatest flood in forty years occurred here Saturday night and yesterday a number of residents had to be taken out from their homes in boats. Two mill dams were partly swept away by the flood.

Beaverton In Darkness.

Beaverton, April 8.—Owing to the spring freshets there was quite an exciting time here Saturday night and yesterday. The Beaver River is higher than it has been known to be before. The C.N.O. Railway bridge crossing the Beaver River and several bridges in Thorah have been considerably damaged.

30,000 Are Homeless.

St. Louis, April 8.—Thirty thousand persons homeless, two thousand square miles of country inundated, thirty persons drowned, and a financial loss of $10,000,000 constitute the result of a two weeks' flood in the Mississippi alley. These figures were arrived at Saturday night by Government engineers and officials of state levee boards engaged in battling the raving sweep of the Mississippi River from points in Illinois to threatened places in Mississippi and Arkansas.

Water is pouring into Arkansas through three new breaks in the levee south of Memphis. These gave way Saturday, and several hundred square miles are subject to flooding.

Ate Swans for Easter Dinner.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 8.—Roast swan formed the staple article of Easter dinner in many homes here yesterday. More than three hundred swans have been taken from the lower river during the past two days, many being killed by being carried over the falls, while scores were shot by hunters. They are flavored like goose.

ANOTHER CRISIS.

Russia and Turkey Are Now at Loggerheads.

London, April 8.—The relations of Russia and Turkey, which a few weeks ago caused the circulation of alarming reports, may at any moment reach an acute stage, and again the bone of contention will be Persia.

At the close of the Russo-Japanese war, Turkey moved some troops into the Persian Province of Azerbaijan, a strip of which has been in dispute for upwards of 200 years. Turkey claims this strip; Persia holds it, but the ownership has yet to be decided. The question has been subject of negotiations, but while these have been going on, Russia asserts that Turkey has been slowly moving her forces forward until they have gone even beyond the disputed strip and now command the western part of Azerbaijan from Lake Urumiah to the frontier and could with ease attack the Russian Province of Erivan.

Turkey's firmness in supporting her contention, and not only placing troops in the disputed strip, but moving them forward, has given rise in Russia to a suspicion that some other power is behind the Ottoman Government.

Lenses Must Be Changed
Lenses do not wear out, but eyes do. Every part of the body changes with advancing years, and our eyes in common with the rest of our physical being show the effects of age. We must therefore meet the changed conditions of the eyes. The glasses that you bought ten, or even three years ago, are not giving your eyes the proper assistance. As the eyes are wearing out, year by year, your lenses should be made stronger or weaker to correspond to your failing vision.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL
Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle

WHY CHRIST ROSE FROM THE DEAD

What it Proved and What it Guarantees—The Core of the Gospel.

Brooklyn, N.Y., April 7.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle preached in the Academy of Music to-day to nearly twenty-five hundred hearers. His topic was, "Why Christ Arose from the Dead"; his text, "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith also vain; yea, and we are found false witnesses of God. * * * Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (I. Corinthians xv, 14, 15, 18.) He said:

The faith once delivered to the saints by Jesus and the Apostles in respect to the resurrection of the dead has been very generally lost. Christian people profess a belief in the resurrection, because they find it stated in the Bible, yet they are continually in difficulty in their endeavor to make the Scriptural teaching on the subject square with some of the unscriptural theories received into the Church, and incorporated into many of the creeds during the "Dark Ages."

St. Paul warned the Church against these human philosophies, and called them "science, falsely so called," which makes void the Word of God. These errors have been instrumental in dividing the faith of God's people into six hundred denominations, with six hundred different professions. If God's people could all come back to the simplicity of the Bible's teaching in respect to the resurrection of the dead, all of these differences would speedily disappear. God's Word would be seen to be beautiful and harmonious, satisfactory to the consecrated intellect, as none of our sectarian creeds are.

Really the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead has been repudiated by all denominations, not willingly, not intentionally, but perforce, as it were. An opposite theory received and intrenched in the minds gives no place for the doctrine of the resurrection, as the Bible presents it. Consequently we have twisted the doctrine of the resurrection and recite, "I believe in the resurrection of the body."

Yet even this perverted view of the resurrection is not satisfactory to those who hold it. They wish many a time that the doctrine of the resurrection were not in the Bible, so much difference does it cause. For instance, how inconsistent it seems that they should say, "I believe in the resurrection of the body," and then say, as many do, Dying is but going home, getting rid of the mortal flesh, and being freed from its limitations. If it is a blessing to die and get free from the limitations of the body, how could it be a blessing to be reincarcerated in the body, and be obliged to keep it through all eternity? Such is the inconsistency of the resurrection, however, from the general view.

There is nothing inconsistent in the Bible presentation of the resurrection. Not from the Bible, but from men, comes the suggestion of the resurrection of the body. The Bible invariably refers to the resurrection of the soul. It is the soul that dies; as we read, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Adam was created a living soul, but his living soul came under the death sentence because he disobeyed God. It was his soul that was redeemed from death, not his body. "I will redeem thy life (look up the word life to see if it is from the Hebrew word meaning soul, and if so, add the word soul after the word life, in parenthesis) from destruction."—Psalm ciii, 4.

To accomplish this redemption we read that Christ Jesus "poured out His soul unto death"; "He made His soul an offering for sin." Moreover, we are particularly told that it was the soul of Jesus that was raised from the dead: "Thou wilt not leave My soul in sheol." St. Peter quotes this statement as prophetical of the resurrection of Jesus, that His soul was not left in hades; God raised Jesus from the dead on the third day. With what body do they come? is a totally different question. Some of the dead souls, in the resurrection, will come forth with spirit bodies, and others with human bodies, according to the Bible. But the important point is, that it is the soul, the being, that comes forth, that is resurrected—not the body. If the soul dies, as the Bible declares, then manifestly the soul should be resurrected.

The difficulty with us has been that we "have made void the Word of God" by our "traditions." We received from the Grecian philosophers a tradition which Socrates and Plato both advocated, namely, that when a human being dies he does not really die. The soul, it is claimed, cannot die, but, whenever the soul gets out of the body, the body dies. How strange it seems that we all, as intelligent, thoughtful beings, have accepted this heathen philosophy, without a word of Scripture for its support, and with hundreds of Scriptures to condemn it!

We can see how the heathen philosophers might be led to conjure up such a theory, because of their desire to believe in a future life, and because they had no revelation from God respecting a future life. They therefore tried their best to convince themselves that man really does not die—that no man can die. The Bible theory is the very reverse of this, namely, that a man is not merely a body, that he is a soul, a thinking, sentient being. Neither is he a bodiless being, and indeed he cannot be a being at all without a body. His body may change, as science declares it does gradually, hour by hour, until a complete change is effected in seven years.

Thus a man, a soul, a sentient being, may in a life of fifty years have sloughed off gradually sufficient matter to have composed seven bodies. But the moment the sloughing off of this dying matter and the substitution of living matter ceases, we have death; and as soon as the body dies the soul dies—that is, the intelligent being ceases. There can be no thinking without a brain, no breathing without lungs, no maintenance of life in any sense of the word without a body.

This would have been a total destruction of the soul had not God specially provided, as the Prophet declares, that He would redeem man's life (soul) from destruction, through the redemptive work accomplished by Jesus in giving His soul an offering for man's sin, and thus making possible man's resurrection from the dead.

It is in consequence of this Divine provision through Christ for a resurrection of humanity that the Scriptures speak of death as merely a falling asleep for a time, to wait for the new body in the resurrection, rather than to speak of us as dying as the brute beasts. The word sleep implies that in the Divine purpose a future life is intended, and will eventually be given.

St. Paul does not leave the matter of Christ's resurrection undecided. He positively affirms that, "Christ is risen from the dead," and that, thus risen, "He is the First-fruits of those that slept," which implies that when He was raised the others still slept. Jesus slept a part of those three days, from the time He died until the Father raised Him from the dead, from hades, from sheol, from the tomb, on the third day. He, as the First-fruits of the sleeping ones, is an example and a guarantee of the fulfillment of the Divine promise, that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust."

It behooves us to take a decided stand, either with the Grecian philosophers and their theories, or with the Bible. The two are in conflict and whoever attempts to hold both is in confusion. If the dead are not dead, then no human being is dead. And if no one is dead, how could there be a resurrection of the dead?

The inconsistency of the theory held respecting the resurrection of the body has invited a very reasonable and just criticism. The skeptic asks, "How could the body be resurrected, after it has gone to dust and after the dust has been scattered to the four winds?" They tell us of a grave that was opened near an apple tree, and it was found that a root from the tree had entered the coffin and practically absorbed the corpse, from which it had produced thousands of apples, which in turn had been shipped to various parts of the world, some of the poorer grades being fed to hogs, whose hams were cured and sent abroad and thus passed into other human beings, to become parts of still other human bodies. The question is a proper one, but it is an unanswerable one from the standpoint of our former misbelief and our poor attempt to combine human philosophy and Divine Revelation.

But such a question brings no consternation to the Bible student who follows the Scriptures alone. The Scriptures never speak of the resurrection of our bodies. They do tell of the resurrection of the soul, and that in the resurrection God giveth it (the soul) a body as it pleaseth Him.

How reasonable it will be for the world to be awakened in practically the condition in which they went down into death! And these will experience, if willing and obedient, a gradual resurrection or raising up to the image and likeness of Father Adam in his perfection. But some in the resurrection will receive spirit bodies like unto the angels, and some like unto the body of Christ in His resurrection, which Saul of Tarsus beheld—"shining above the brightness of the sun at noonday."

The class that is promised a resurrection in spirit bodies is the Church—the saintly few who walk in the footsteps of Jesus. The begetting of the Holy Spirit which comes to these changes their nature from earthly to spiritual. If they are raised to have covenant their resurrection will be to glory, honor and immortality, as explained by St. Paul in the context, saying, "It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown an animal body, it is raised a spirit body."

This is a description of the resurrection which God has promised to all the members of the Body of Christ, which is the Church. St. Paul declares that the members of this Body fall asleep, to awaken in the glorious morning of the New Dispensation. But he adds, "We shall not all sleep"—some will be alive and remain till the second coming of Jesus. These, however, will not take precedence over the sleeping ones, for, "The dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain "shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," * * * because flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." As the death of Jesus was absolutely necessary as the atoning price for human sin, so the resurrection of Jesus was absolutely necessary, that He might not remain dead through all eternity, but be glorified, and in due time, come again to effect the resurrection of His Church and, subsequently, the awakening and uplifting of all the families of the earth.

Hearken to the special promise made to the Church: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the First Resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years." (Revelation xx, 6.) Also note the promise of the world's resurrection: "There shall be a resurrection, both of the just and the unjust." (Acts xxiv, 15.) Again, "They that have done evil" shall come forth, that they may enjoy a resurrection effected by "judgments," disciplines, chastisements, which will develop in them character; and the glory which will be attained will be perfection—a raising up to all at first possessed by Father Adam, lost through disobedience, and redeemed by the precious blood of Christ.—John v, 28, 29, R. V.

Every Sunday is a memorial of the resurrection of our Lord from the dead, and if a proper conception of the Master's resurrection were kept in mind we would not think of quarrelling with the expression "Easter Sunday." But alas, this name Easter is associated with heathen philosophies and idolatries, which did so much to make the Word of God of none effect; and the fact should be noted that it is the name of a Greek goddess. The compromising spirit induced some of the early Church to admit the heathn philosophies and to commingle with these the inspired teachings of the Bible; but now there is the loud call to true Christians to rid themselves of science and philosophy "falsely so-called," and to return to the Biblical simplicity of the Divine Revelation.

Of this Revelation alone St. Peter declares, "It is able to make you wise unto salvation," and to "give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." And again, "The Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto every good work." Let us to-day, then, rejoice in Him who died for our sins and who rose on the third day for our justification.

Let us rid our minds of the foolish thought that He did not really die, that He only seemed to die—that when the Roman soldiers crucified Him, He simply got out of His body, laughed at them, and said, "I have not died at all; I could not die; you could not kill Me." Let us remember rather the Divine Word on the subject: "Christ died for our sins"; "He poured out His soul unto death"; "He made His soul an offering for sin." Let us remember the assurance of the Bible that eventually "He shall see the fruits of the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied." Let us rejoice also in the assurance of the Apostle that His soul was not left in hades, sheol, death, but that God raised Him from the dead on the third day.

If Christ did not die, then the death penalty upon Adam and his race has not been met. Those who claim that He did not die, that merely His body died, are illogical. They profess to believe that Jesus accomplished for us a redemptive work, that He died, "The Just for the unjust." If Christ, the Redeemer, "poured out His soul unto death, and if His resurrection meant the recovery of His soul or being out of death, wherein is the logic in the declaration of some that it is not thus with the Church nor with the world? If Jesus did not go to Heaven when He died—if He went into hades, into the grave, into sheol, into death, who has the temerity to say that others go direct to Heaven or Hell or Purgatory? Let us be consistent. The wages of sin is not Purgatory, nor a Hell of torture, in some far-off place. On the contrary, "The wages of sin is death." The Redeemer died and rose; and this is the assurance, that He who raised up Jesus from the dead will raise us up also, by Jesus, through His spirit and power; and not only so, but also the world of mankind, all who were involved in the death sentence upon the first man.

Therefore, the entire world is included in the death payment made by the Great Redeemer, that "As by man came death, by a man also shall come the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive." But, says the Apostle, while every man who will come into Christ shall be made alive, each will come forth "in his own order." The Christ company shall come forth first—"the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven." Afterwards will come those who will become His at, or during, His presence—during the thousand years of His Kingdom glory. The opportunity of that thousand years will mean to every man the privilege of coming into fellowship with the Redeemer and King, Emmanuel. Whoever will accept the opportunity will receive the blessing of an admission to Messiah's family. As the Apostle says, they will become His. Under His heavenly guidance and blessing and regenerating influence, all such may attain again to a full image and likeness of God, lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary.

From Profits—or Losses?

WE all advertise.

A man advertises his character by his deeds, his wisdom by his words or by his silence. A merchant's store, stock, and windows speak either well or ill of his business.

So when a man says "No, I do not advertise," he knows not what he says. What he really means is that he does not publish printed advertisements.

Some proclaim this as though it were a virtue—yet spend much effort and invest much money in advertising their business through mediums other than the printed word.

They may make their wares fit for a king—yet hesitate to introduce them to Brown or Smith.

This is inconsistency.

The truth is, printed advertising is a vital force in every business, just as is the "silent" advertising of a product's quality or a merchant's service.

When you employ the Printed Word as your solicitor in the Court of Public Opinion, you build good will for your product or service—a good will that results in profit.

If unrepresented at this Court, your interests are as unprotected as though, when involved in a law suit, you failed to "enter an appearance" and the case is decided against you—by default.

So it is clear you pay for advertising—one way or the other. If you pay in wages, it will work for you.

If you refuse its offers of service, it will work against you, in just the measure of its employment by your Competitors.

So you are paying for advertising either out of your profits or by your losses.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency, or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Building. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

COLLEGE GIRLS WED; DON'T GET DIVORCED

Their Average of Happy Marriages is High and Are Marrying at Younger Age.

HOLYOKE, April 6.—With every one of the big Eastern colleges for women overcrowded and turning girls away, with the number of women students increasing so fast in the Western coeducational universities that some of these institutions in alarm limit the number of women in relation to men for fear of being feminized, the question arises, What value has this privilege so insistently demanded by American women? How does the college girl compare with her non-college sister? How does she play her part as wife and mother?

Times have changed since the mothers of the present college generation sought the benefit of higher education, for thirty years ago there was a dearth of feminine bachelors of arts. Nor did the woman who had the right to add the letters B.A. to her name enjoy great social popularity. She was supposed to be a strange eccentric creature, by no means fulfilling the womanly ideal of her day.

Many Early Marriages.

The college girl of to-day does not marry, says Mr. Critic, or if she does it is not until she is unusually old, and she does not bear as many children as do other women.

That she marries a little later than her sister who does not go to college is to be expected, but it is now clearly shown that her marriage, though delayed, is not so very much behind that of her sister who does not go to college.

The average age at marriage of the Mount Holyoke College graduates from 1890 to 1909 is only a little more than twenty-six years (26.77), but this is by no means a high average. A study of a certain group of American married women whose sisters and cousins went to college, but who themselves did not show for them an average age of marriage of a little more than twenty four years. In England it has been found that the average age of spinsters marrying is 24.8, though the spinsters belonging to the independent and professional classes there do not marry until they are, on the average, 26.4. It is then safe to assume that going to college in the United States does delay marriage for women for about two years.

But the college graduate of to-day marries younger than the earlier graduates. Professor Hewes's study was extended to the marriage of the graduates of Mt. Holyoke Seminary, that great pioneer institution for the higher education of women founded in 1837 ,long before colleges for women existed. Women who were graduated as early as 1842 from the seminary are still living, and information concerning the marriages of 514, who were graduated between the years of 1842 and 1892, shows an average of 27 years for this earlier period.

Delayed by Dull Times.

It is interesting to see that in some years the average was much higher than is others. For instance, women who were graduated in the decade after the civil war, a time characterized by business depression, did not marry until they were on the average, over thirty. Hard times made it more difficult for people to marry, and the average age for both men and women rises as they find it hard to maintain the accustomed standard of living. They wait until this becomes more possible, and so are older when they finally marry.

The seminary graduates of 1842-92 married most numerously at twenty-five years of age.

In the seminary group of 1842-92, including 1,076 women, 62.1 per cent. married. In the college group only 41.9 per cent. graduating in the decade 1890-99 have already married. And although in the decade just passed (1900-09) the percentage married is only 27.98, this is far lower than it will be, because many from the large classes recently graduated will ultimately marry, as it is found that the majority do not marry until three or four years after graduation.

College women evidently demand intellectual companionship and probably begin married life sharing a larger number of common interests with their husbands than do the majority of other women. What could be a better guarantee of successful family life?

Intellectual Companionship.
